Annual fireworks display threatened

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NEWTON — Neighborhood noise complaints and ethnic issues are threatening to force the cancellation of a Nonantum religious organization's annual fireworks display, according to the group's president.

Anthony Gentile, president of the 49-year-old St. Mary of Carmen Society and licensed expert who recently dazzled Waltham residents with a pyrotechnic display, said early this week he has been informed that Fire Chief Edward B. Reilly, Jr., will not issue the necessary permit for the society's July 15 fireworks.

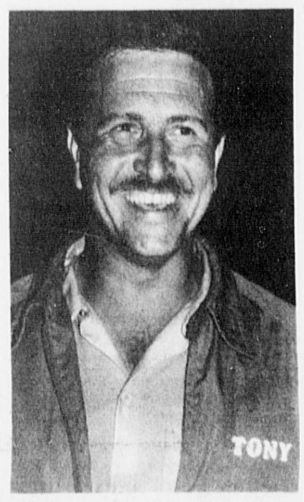

But Reilly, who said he'll "sit down" with the group's leaders Friday to discuss the matter, says the "whole thing is being blown way out of proportion by certain individuals who probably have no dealings with it what-so-ever."

Asked to comment on what factors or complaints threaten the traditional show, Reilly replied, "Because the other side isn't telling you anything, I'm not going to tell you anything."

At the same time, the aldermanic Public Safety and Transportation Committee, at the request of Chairman Elaine Gentile and Aldermen Ronald Marini and Richard J. McGrath, has promised to discuss the situation at a special meeting this Monday night if Reilly refuses to grant the necessary permit by week's end.

Ward Alderman Ron Marini was wasting no time warming up to the planned special meeting. Monday night, he was already buttonholing his colleagues in the corridors of City Hall, enlisting their support for the traditional

Dr. Gill vs 'professional McCarthyism'

By Charlotte Meryman, Staff Writer

NEWTON — As he leads his visitor through the expansive hallways and receiving rooms of his stately Chestnut Hill home, Peter Gill makes no effort to hide his weariness — a combination of long work days and the strain of his recent notoriety.

Reaching his living-room-style office, he settles his 6'2" frame into a simple, rust-colored easy chair positioned to the right of a large, graceful fireplace and sips appreciatively on an evening cup of coffee.

Dr. Peter Lawrence Gill describes himself as the victim of "a concatenation of events," which he says began with the complaints of an angry former patient and have brought into play a sensationist press, a conservative mental health establishment, a competitive profession and a reactive state licensing board.

A licensed psychologist and director of the controversial Cambridge Psychotherapy Institute (CPI), which operates out of his Chestnut Hill mansion, Gill was thrust into the public eye after a former patient, Wallace Ralston, registered a series of complaints about Gill's practice and training institute with the state Board of Registration of Psychologists and the American Psychology Association.

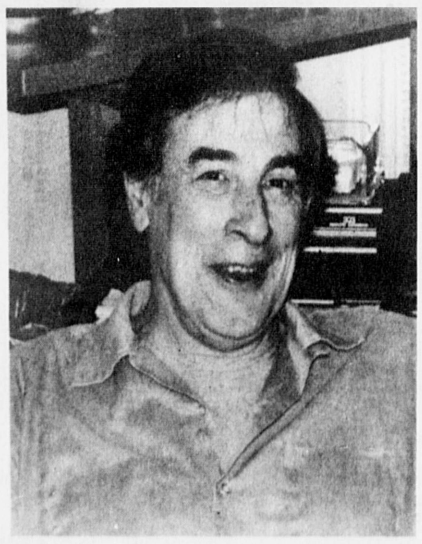

According to published reports in the Boston press, the board is investigating complaints which liken CPI's 60 members to a cult and include allegations that Gill uses patients as therapists, "commits" people to lifetime therapy, is not present to supervise unlicensed assistant therapists, and "balance bills" patients — charging them for the amount of his fee not covered by insurance.

Anne Pulsifer, chairman of the state psychologists registration board, refused to comment on the details of the case.

Gill's lawyer, Paul Gitlin, described the complaint statement submitted to the board last September by Ralston and forwarded to Gill in November as "a rambling, two-page narrative.

"This man has written and contacted everybody he can think of and he submits this list of complaints about Dr. Gill," said Gitlin. "It includes some very outrageous

Reilly 'vindicated'

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

CHESTNUT HILL — Ward 7 Alderman W. Arthur Reilly, a project director for the Boston Redevelopment Authority (BRA), believes he has been "vindicated" by a U.S. District Court jury's acquittal of Theodore V. Anzalone on money-laundering charges.

A 12-member jury last week convicted Anzalone, a former aide to Boston Mayor Kevin H. White, on one felony count of violating federal currency reporting laws in connection with a $100,000 cash transaction he made on behalf of the White family and a misdemeanor charge that he "aided and abetted" a bank in failing to meet cash reporting regulations governing transactions over $10,000.

The jury did, however, acquit the 58-year-old Anzalone of felony charges that he laundered money during 1980 and 1981 in connection with an aborted birthday party for the former mayor's wife, a verdict that left Reilly satisfied he has been cleared of any wrongdoing in the elaborate scheme.

Reilly, who was granted immunity from prosecution during the trial, testified under subpoena last week that he was given $500 in cash in return for a personal check made out to the birthday fund in the same amount.

City will make new smoke law work

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The city's 2,700 employers have exactly six months to come up with written policies governing employee smoking in their businesses.

Mayor Theodore D. Mann last week took pen in hand to sign "Ordinance S-72," making Newton the first city on the East Coast to take legal action to protect non-smoking employees from the "second-hand" cigarette, pipe and cigar fumes of their smoking co-workers.

Mann's action came on the last day he could have either vetoed the measure or allowed it to become law without his signature. The Board of Aldermen voted 20-4 to approve the ordinance 10 days ago.

"All members of the community - employers and employees, non-smokers and smokers - can be certain that the city of Newton is committed to making the ordinance work and to administering it reasonably and effectively to insure fairness for all parties," said Mann in a special afternoon press conference called to mark the signing.

Mann, noting the "uncertainty of those who will be affected" by the landmark municipal legislation, also announced the creation of a 13 member special commission to "monitor the implementation of the ordinance," to identify any practical problems for employers created by their conformity to the law and to recommend any action that might be necessary to "fine-tune" it.

The commission, the majority of which is composed of health care professionals, will report its findings to the Board of Aldermen and the mayor in December 1985.

While the smoking ordinance does not require a Garden City employer to make structural changes in the workplace to accomodate non-smokers, it does provide a $50 fine for each month of non-compliance.

Liberal wording gives employers with two or more employees flexibility in creating smoking office policies, allowing them options ranging from designating specific areas in which smoking is allowed to banning the habit in their place of business altogether.

Enforcement of the new ordinance falls under the province of Health Commissioner Bernice R. Joyal, whose department will act as a mediator between an employer and any employee who files a grievance expressing dissatisfaction with his/her company's smoking policy.

New look to your newspaper

An important change in the publications of Transcript Newspapers, Inc., is underway to make The Newton Graphic and other Transcript newspapers more attractive for readers and advertisers.

The change introduces the six column advertising format.

The standardization of advertising column widths is being adopted by most daily and weekly newspapers in the country. Known as "SAU", Standard Advertising Units, the column width coincides with the six column format that Transcript Newspapers has been using as the guide for its news columns since 1979.

The new "six on six" format was announced to Transcript advertisers in May with the distribution of a special section which detailed the 56 SAU sizes set up for advertisers and showed local advertisers how their ads will look in the new wider column measure.

General Manager Paul Massey said the advantages of the new format include:

•More visually attractive ad layouts with wider measures.

•Easier-to-read pages making easier-to-read advertisements.

•Wider columns providing a more graphic backdrop for selling messages.

The new six column format replaced a nine column format that often varied from newspaper to newspaper.

In a parallel move, all advertising will be billed in column inches rather than in either inches or agate lines. Advertisers previously had to contend with three different units of measure: inches, agate lines and picas. Effective today, everything will be measured in inches as the standard in the newspaper industry.

The changes have begun in all Transcript's newspapers; The Daily Transcript, The News Tribune, The Newton Graphic, The Needham Chronicle, The Parkway Transcript, The West Roxbury Transcript, Trib Plus and The Family Shopper.

Therapist versus authorities

accusations — that he has committed vehicular nomicide. It's almost a list of every insidious thing you can think of. I gather he has now started to accuse me of being a known Marxist.' "

Gill has denied or dismissed as irrelevant all of the charges, which he says are part of "a multi-pronged and exhaustive series of attacks from a gentleman who is really quite unhappy and whom I'm afraid I wasn't able to help that much." The nature of psychotherapy is to blame for complaints against him, Gill believes.

"Every therapist probably has some failures in his or her practice, people who come for help and don't get much," he explained. "Sometimes these people go away and for one reason or another turn out to be angry at the therapist and feel motivated to attack."

Gitlin said he has filed a $600,000 suit against Ralston for Gill in Middlesex Superior Court for defamation and "intentional interference with business relations."

But the accusations have now made the 63-year-old psychologist a focus of publicity surrounding a larger problem that has been drawing its own flack recently: an alleged lack of state regulation in the field of psychotherapy.

A soft-spoken man with an earnest manner and a penchant for provocative comments, Gill claims he has been misused by a "sensationalist" and "muckraking" press and fears the publicity surrounding his case will pressure the state Board of Registration into revoking his license to quell accusations of its own ineffectiveness. He also worries about a tightening of controls on psychotherapists, which he says would discourage quality and innovation.

"Basically we (CPI members) are decent people," Gill declared. "Whether people agree with us or not, we're not dangerous. . . It will be a frightening thing if decent, honest, earnest people can be put out of business by the righteous. It's what I call professional McCarthyism."

Pulsifer and another, former, chairman of the psychologists board have acknowledged in recently published reports that a state license does not now guarantee quality in a psychotherapist. Pulsifer points to a paucity of staff and funds as the culprit in the board's sluggishness.

Dr. Marvin Snider, a psychologist and director of The Institute at Newton, argues that there are many effective checks in place for psychotherapists. Blue Cross and Blue Shield require detailed information of therapists applying for reimbursement, he noted. Although they do not cover non-degree practitioners, state licensing boards and professional associations monitor psychiatrists, psychologists, social workers and nurses working in the expanded role.

Gill, however, has resigned from Blue Shield and from both his state and national professional organizations.

The unorthodox psychologist takes pride in his unconventionality. He describes himself as "the third son of a rather unusual pair of professionals."

His father, now 94, has been a controversial leader of state and national prison reform efforts. His mother, who was active in women's suffrage and never took her husband's name, received a Ph.D. in psychology from Harvard University in the early 1900s and worked as a professional throughout her life. Almost all of Gill's immediate family and many of his extended relatives are trained in the fields of psychology and psychiatry.

Although Gill earned an undergraduate degree from Harvard University and holds a doctorate in psychology from Boston University, many members of CPI hold no academic degrees in the field —— a not uncommon situation in training institutes.

Candidates are admitted to Gill's 11-year-old psychotherapy institute "to a very large degree on their evidence of open-mindedness, of a willingness to challenge conventional dogma and conventional beliefs, on their capacity to innovate and their very deep commitment to treating patients with respect,

> 'Every therapist probably has some failures in his or her practice.'

with an important parity," the psychologist explained. Gill contends that, with a little training and a lot of instructional and personal psychotherapy, an intelligent, empathetic person can be as effective a therapist as a licensed professional with an advanced degree.

He is supported in that belief by Dr. Daniel Hogan, a psychologist and attorney who is on the staff at McLean Hospital in Belmont and teaches psychology at Harvard Medical School. Hogan also suggests that tighter licensing restrictions may do more harm than good by increasing the cost of psychotherapy, decreasing its availability and potentially discriminating against "the poor, the aged, women and minorities."

A longtime Newton resident who worked as a psychologist in the city's school system from the late '50s to the late 60s, Gill opposes restrictions on the practice of psychotherapy because he feels strict guidelines encourage docile acceptance of old ideas and punish innovators.

According to Gill, the most important element of training at CPI is "intense and arduous" individual and group psychotherapy, "both didactic and personal," entered into with him or one of a half-dozen senior members of the institute, one of whom is his wife, Jane Copass. The emphasis is similar to that of the country's major psychoanalytic institutes.

Candidates at CPI must also attend at least one seminar a week, usually run by Gill and occasionally featuring a visiting speaker. Each trainee also undergoes supervision at least once a week with Gill or a senior institute member. Both are standard approaches for psychotherapy training programs.

CPI is run on a fee-for-service basis, with most candidates paying an average of $60-70 for a one-hour therapy or supervision session with Gill. Seminars cost $15-20.

One of Gill's most controversial and fundamental emphases is an open, personal, equal relationship between patient and therapist. He encourages his clients to ask questions about the therapist's own life, beliefs and qualifications and offers three free, informational interviews to prospective clients. The practice "goes against the grain of the establishment," Gill says, which discourages patient questions and distances the therapist as a superhuman entity.

Gill resigned from the Massachusetts Psychological Association thirteen years ago because "I didn't see it was meaningful to me" and pulled out of Blue Shield a year ago because he opposed the "authoritarian utilization of (case) reviews," which are required on a regular basis.

He resigned from the American Psychological Association in January rather than respond to complaints filed with the organization by Ralston because he felt the membership was worthless and preferred to concentrate his efforts on preserving his state license.

Gill is committed to to saving the certificate because it is "a state right.

"I haven't the slightest intention of giving this up because someone wants a little action from the licensing board," the psychologist said. "It is meaningful to me and it is meaningful to the members of the institute." The license is particularly important for reimbursement by insurance companies, Gill noted.

The Board of Registration of Psychologists, which is reportedly taking steps toward revoking Gill's license, scheduled an informal hearing two weeks ago. Gill and his lawyer have refused to appear, however, until they have been given a list of the specific complaints to be addressed, a requirement specifically laid out in the board's bylaws. Board Chairman Anne Pulsifer said the state investigators unit is now going through the lengthy process of drawing up the list and added that she is anxious to meet with Gill.

Facelift set for City Hall

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The black cupolas that have stuck out like a sore thumb along the skyline of the 52-year-old city hall building for the past several years will soon be receiving a long-awaited facelift.

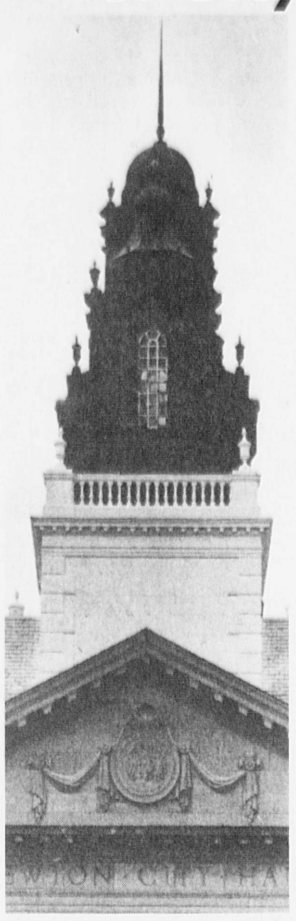

The dome-like structures, blackened thanks to severely weathered copper, are scheduled to be painted white as part of stepped-up maintanence efforts throughout the building, according to Building Commissioner James Cameron.

Over $50,000 will be spent to refurbish the slate, brick, marble and mahogany structure that has served as the nerve-center of city government here since it was built in November 1932 by then-Mayor Sinclair Weeks.

City hall's unique roof, complete with flashing, tightly-joined vallies and gutters that empty into a central drain within the building, has presented inordinate leaking problems for the past several years, leaving the walls in a majority of the adminstrative offices badly water-stained and cracked.

While "a couple of sections" of the roof are still in need of repair, Cameron said he expects no problems in waterproofing them and will now focus his efforts on repainting and plastering those areas in city hall damaged from the drips. The offices of the Election Commission, treasurer, mayor, city clerk, assessors and the aldermanic meeting chambers are among those due for a new paint job.

Cameron has even contacted the city's historical society for advice on the original color of the main aldermanic chambers in an attempt to bring some of the unique luster back to city hall's centerpiece.

> 'I've found city hall quite a pleasant place to work.'

"There is no question that the public spaces will get done first," said Cameron, adding that the building's lavatories are also due for some changes in the form of new tile and more modern fixtures. He also anticipates an upcoming need to replace most of the building's half-century-old plumbing.

His efforts were recently bolstered during an aldermanic Finance Committee when aldermen made it clear they want no expense spared in renovating any of the city's municipal buildings. FinCom members hinted to Cameron that they would support additional appropriation requests for work he felt necessary.

The painting of the cupolas, which are made of copper, will represent the most noticable change in the building's appearance. City officials have been waiting for over five years now to see if the spires were going to turn to the green color usually associated with weathered copper. Special acids were even applied recently in an attempt to speed up the color change, but to no avail.

Eventually, according to Cameron, they will turn green, as other copper sections on the roof have already, and they then will be stripped of the paint.

There are no plans to remove the ivy that has been slowly creeping up the front of the builiding, according to both Cameron and Mayor Theodore D. Mann. Mann, who believes city hall to be "one of the most beautiful municipal buildings in the nation," said he is happy with Cameron's work maintaining his home-away-from-home for the past 12 years.

"I like the ivy," Mann said recently. "I think it makes the exterior of the building quite gorgeous. I've found city hall quite a pleasant place to work," adding with a smile that his remarks should not be construed as the beginning of any re-election effort.

Learning disability staff cut

By Charlotte Meryman, Staff Writer

NEWTON — In addition to riffing four guidance counselors and an audio-visual specialist, the School Committee has also reduced the number of learning disability positions by 3.3 full-time equivalents (F.T.E.s).

Unlike reductions-in-force (or "rif"s) in the main staff, which were decided solely on the basis of seniority, certification and affirmative action, an agreement between the Newton Teachers Association (NTA) and the School Committee stipulated that reductions in learning disability staff would also include consideration of "quality of teaching performance" and the needs of the school system.

Because learning disability staffers are hired on an hourly basis, they are all technically "dismissed" at the end of each school year and then hired back later for the next year.

THE CASE OF THE DISAPPEARING GABLES
by Sherlock Holmes
The Gables in Newton is disappearing fast.
Started just two years ago, nearly all of the 66 two and three-bedroom attached single family homes have been sold. Here are some clues to their swift disappearance:
1. Excellent location – directly adjoining The Charles River Country Club at the junction of Parker and Dedham Streets...one of Newton's most desirable neighborhoods.
2. Extravagant space – enormous living rooms, some with two-story ceilings...huge country kitchens with sunny breakfast areas...master bedrooms with their own fireplaced sitting rooms ...separate dens or studies... full basements...and two car attached garages.
3. Extra extras – a handsome clubhouse, a swimming pool with spacious sunning area...a whirlpool and tennis courts.
Remaining homes including two sumptuously furnished models are priced from $350,000 to $425,000, subject to prior sale. Visit the sales office any day from 9 to 5 and you'll agree that there's no mystery to their disappearance. Call 969-0200 for an appointment.

Frank heads ADA

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

U.S. Rep. Barney Frank (D-Newton) has been chosen as the new national president of Americans for Democratic Action (ADA), considered the country's largest liberal lobbying organization.

According to Bob Carolla, press secretary and staff attorney for the ADA, close to 400 ADA delegates from all over the country unanimously selected Fourth District Democrat Frank as the group's new head during Saturday's ADA convention in Washington, D.C..

Rep. Barney Frank

Frank, who was unable to attend the convention because of an undisclosed illness, was unavailable for comment, and members of his staff in both West Newton and the nation's capitol were not prepared to comment on Frank's ascension.

The group boasts over 100,000 members nationwide, although ADA officials point out that their lobbying efforts affect many more people than that, and has a budget of over $1 million.

According to Carolla, Frank's election is only for a one-year term, yet the ADA has traditionally chosen the same leader to serve three consecutive terms.

"Barney's leadership is going to be very key in mobilizing us as a national organization. I can't think of stronger liberal voice. He will very definitely leave an imprint on the organization and will be extremely helpful in attracting new members," Carolla said.

He added that strong leadership is essential to the ADA at this time because the organization is currently experiencing "a major period of transition," not only with the election of a new national president, but also because its national director will soon be stepping down from his post.

Both Greg Levendusky, executive director of the Massachusetts ADA, and Carolla dismissed anticipated criticism that Frank's new national role could possibly place him in a conflict of interest.

Since Frank is "considered a spokesperson for liberal ideas," his new role with the ADA is "a natural outgrowth of his activities. We've always used Barney a lot and we're glad to share him with the rest of the country," according to Levendusky.

"We have often had members of Congress as national presidents in the past and it hasn't proven in any way to be a conflict of interest. Barney is superb at looking at the needs of his district. He was voted into office as a distinctly liberal congresman...that really shows the Fourth District wants liberal representation of their viewpoint. In no way will his duties as ADA president eclipse his role as Fourth District representative. In some ways, he's assuming a title to match the role he already has," said Carolla.

Frank, who chairs the House's Subcommittee on Manpower and Housing, takes over the ADA's reins from former Congressman Fr. Robert F. Drinan, who has headed ADA since 1981 and was succeeded by Frank in his congressional post in 1980.

Riverside MBTA fate hinges on city zoning

By Eric Fehrnstrom
Staff Writer

Any planned redevelopment of the MBTA Riverside Station will not occur until the transit authority accepts the city's zoning jurisdiction at the site and agrees to participate in the formal land use process, according to Mayor Theodore D. Mann.

The MBTA has not formally designated the Auburndale station site for development, but has contracted a Boston real estate consultant, Robert Walsh Associates, to study the property and solicit potential development proposals.

The MBTA usually abides by its own internal procedures for the development of property. The city contends the ultimate decision-making authority lies with the Board of Aldermen.

The mayor fielded questions concerning the residential character of the neighborhood last week from about 50 local residents at the United Parish Church during the annual meeting of the Auburndale Community Association.

City officials have been moving on two fronts in an attempt to involve both city planners and MBTA real estate officals in an "appropriate" development of the Riverside property:

- The planning department has sent an elaborate draft proposal for a 35-step land use process that will involve aldermen and citizens in the Riverside redevelopment.
- The law department issued a legal opinion stating the private commercial development of the site is subject to applicable zoning restrictions.

The MBTA has not yet responded to either action, but has maintained in the past that a public transporation-related project is exempt from local zoning ordinances.

What will probably occur, according to Mann, is a mixed-use development consisting of offices, ancillary retail stores and some type of hotel-motel project.

Tiny books are a big deal

By Katharine O'Connell
Correspondent

AUBURNDALE — Imagine owning "The New Testament" the size of a fingernail or reading a handbound edition of the "Declaration of Independence" in a book only three inches tall.

Both the public and the members of the Miniature Book Society had the chance to bid for and purchase such tiny texts in an auction and bookfair held at the Newton Marriott on Sunday.

According to Helene Sherman, a 20-year-collector of miniature books and co-organizer of the convention held last weekend, over 100 people including 50 to 75 members of the society, publishers and amateur collectors from all over the country and abroad, bought and sold miniature books that ranged in price from $100 to $400.

A miniature book, Sherman said, must be under three inches in all dimensions and easily read by the naked eye without the aid of a magnifying glass.

In addition to the auction, the society held a "swap table" where collectors and publishers left books they wanted to trade. Private purchases were also made by individuals, bookstores and different publishing companies including Kurbel Books in Boston, and Californian publishing firms Dawsons, and Lawsons.

"The public enjoyed it pretty much," said Sherman. "There were a great many people from professors, to doctors, ministers and clergy of all kinds."

Ohio collectors Faith Owen and Rabbi Kalman Levitan began the society last year in a tiny town outside of Dayton. The organization now has over 250 members and publishes a newletter which lists miniature books for sale and current exhibitions.

Sherman said miniature books are sold privately for as much as $1000 and that she had "two books coming to her" from this weekend's event. She declined to say how many books she owned, but said it was over several hundred.

A local artist, Sherman also binds her own miniature books and works on illuminated manuscripts and watercolor illustrations only an inch high. One of her favorite hobbies is bringing in her collection to schools and teaching children how the tiny books are made.

Retired Head Librarian at the University of Connecticut, R. E. Massman, sparked Sherman's interest in the mini-manuscripts when he noticed her detailed one-inch paintings in a memorial book for former Massachusetts governor Alvan T. Fuller.

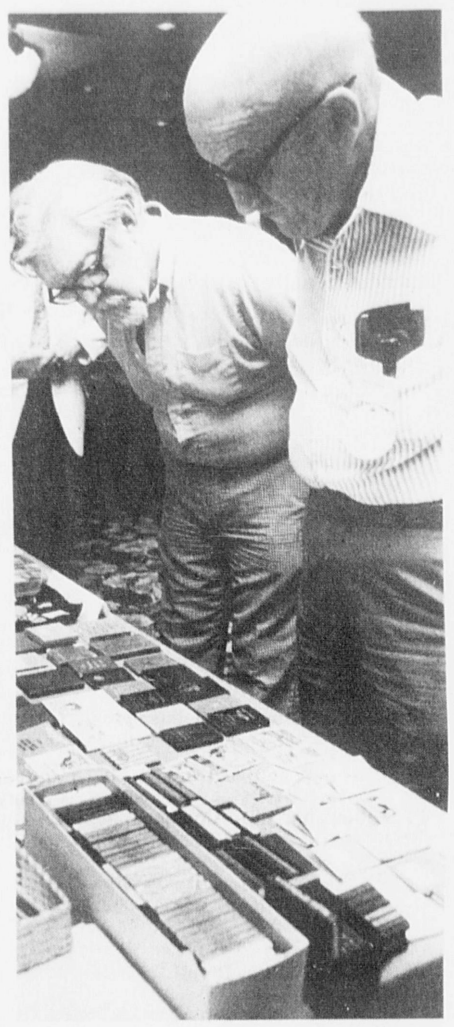

Sherman said over 50 miniature texts were sold at the auction, including mini-"Korans", several tiny "Bibles", the English "Book of Common Prayer" and copies of the U.S.S. Constitution and the Declaration of Independence.

The New Testament, full of centuries of tradition, has been shrunk to fit in the palm of your hand.

John Pye, of Boston's Bromer Booksellers, displays his collection of miniature books.

Minibook buffs examine each other's wares.

Hub parking tax is misguided

Boston's Mayor Raymond Flynn has done exceptionally well in his "man of the people" role. Whether he can achieve positive results of the White administration in high level development remains to be seen. On the fiscal side, he isn't differing greatly from Kevin White, which has to be a cause for concern.

The new mayor has embraced the parking surtax pushed by his predecessor, for instance. He sees a $216 million-plus take from putting the bite on commuters as one of the ways to balance the 1985 budget. He would better serve Boston's interests and those who go into the core city by dismantling part of the overblown bureaucracy as a sure means of balancing the budget.

It is easy in political rhetoric by Hub candidates to state that those who travel to Boston to shop and work contribute nothing to the city. This is preposterous. Intown business health depends on the inflow from the suburbs. Without them, there would be no corporate activity sending dollars into the city treasury in property taxes. Nor would the retail stores, specialty shops and restaurants, as well as countless other enterprises, prosper without the influx.

Parking fees are already exceedingly high, perhaps even excessive. To add a 15 percent surtax will discourage those with options from going into the city. Mayor Flynn has other, better ways to balance the books.

Bingo and the archbishop

During his first few weeks as the prelate of Boston's Catholics, Archbishop Bernard F. Law has built himself a high profile.

He has taken a strong public stance against abortion. He has used the television commercial to solicit church funds while suggesting the church might banish bingo as a revenue raiser. He even showed up at the Celtics' victory rally to bestow high fives to the city's hottest sports heroes.

While his positions on issues may raise hackles in some quarters, one thing is manifest: the new archbishop is a leader and is not afraid to show it.

Where the late Cardinal Humberto Medeiros' approach was one of quiet humility, Archbishop Law relies on a vigorous urbanity. It is a public image that many a secular politician can envy, and it has made him a secular celebrity already.

Boston took a while to catch on to the late cardinal's quiet brand of leadership. But Archbishop Law has asserted himself early.

Even critics of his abortion or bingo stances must acknowledge that the new archbishop has become a force to be dealt with, undaunted by even the most volatile moral disputes.

His call for a bingo and beano phase-out may seem inconsequential at first flush.

But by challenging the bingo device, the archbishop is indirectly challenging parishoners to support their churchs for love instead of money.

For such a task, high-profile leadership will be a must.

One man's guide to travel

By Derek C. Jansen

Vacationing, unlike my more pedestrian everyday life, frees my soul and psyche to explore behaviors better left under wraps when around family, friends or others who might recognize me. The value of these little junkets into fantasyland is less in the sightseeing, travel and excitement and more in the exercise (or exorcise) of my eating and spending habits.

I've been known to do such risque things as have sugar in my morning coffee, or order both shrimp cocktail and the jumbo stuffed shrimp at the same meal. On one memorable trip to Cape Cod I even ordered red wine with fish. (I enjoyed it in spite of the chuckles from the waiter and the sommelier.) The casual observer interprets my strange actions as those of either a mid-western corn farmer in the fields for the first time, or, a wealthy, intellectual eccentric trying to find new and interesting ways to spend the money left him by his uncle.

Regardless of the interpretation by others, the variances from the center line of my regular life are enormous and exhausting. I overeat, overdrink, overspend, overtip, undersleep, underestimate the consequences of my actions and fail to understand why I should be the one with the headache and the empty wallet the next morning. It's frightening to think I actually enjoy myself.

This vacationing business has created an interesting custom for all but the most financially secure among us. We must, for weeks ahead, make monetary sacrifices so we can be frivolous for six wonderful days and seven luxurious nights only to be broke again waiting for the credit card receipts to come dribbling in. Rather than being an exception to that rule I have raised the "Save-Spend-Panic" syndrome to new heights of absurdity by making pre-vacation purchases that no person going wherever-it-is-that-I'm-going can do without.

To wit, over the last few vacations, I have labeled "absolutely necessary" the following items for their respective trips: 1) For a two night camping trip in the White Mountains (count them; one, two) I bought a new pair of hiking boots (no one said hiking trip), a two-person dome tent not unlike the one used by Sir Edmund Hillary when he conquered Mt. Everest, a mess kit (what a disgusting name for something to eat from) that has a frying pan, a sauce pan, a dutch oven and folds to the size of a can of tuna, and a compass so I wouldn't get hopelessly lost traversing the 50-odd feet from the campsite to the public restrooms; 2) In preparation for a golf weekend with two friends I picked up a dozen golf balls with my initials carved into them, new golf shoes, a shirt with a reptile on it, and three bottles of Aramis cologne; 3) Four days at an inn in Vermont required a second pair of cross-country skis (the first one allowed me to fall down all too often), a new down jacket with 27 zippers on the front, back and sleeves complete with tags on strings representing various mountains and ski resorts, new sun glasses that blinded other people when they tried to see my eyes, and a case of Chapstick; 4) A two week trip to Florida including Disney World, Daytona for the beaches, Ft. Lauderdale for the golf courses and Miami to make me appreciate Boston. . . . I won't even bother.

Since the season is at hand and the winter-long planning, saving and arguing are behind perhaps a checklist of controls that I have found valuable for my own rampaging vacation behavior might be appropriate.

1) Set a Spending Limit

Interestingly, the word "limit" has a negative connotation to most people. As in, "You must limit your consumption." Well, I do limit my consumption. When I begin to feel ill, I stop. Immediately!

Let me offer this translation of #1: "The sky's the limit."

2) Find a Place the Whole Family Can Enjoy

Assuming that everyone in your family is exactly alike it's marginally possible for you and the clones to find an acceptable spot. However, if the 10 year-old doesn't like going to the beach to look at girls with the 16 year old, then you've got a problem. But, if you're the sole financial support for the family and your idea of a good time is bass fishing on the Chatahoochee River while your family gets carried away by mosquitos the size of condors, then give it your best shot. If, however, others in the family provide things necessary to keep the institution functioning (or if you like being married) then, as I said before, you've got a problem.

3) Plan Well in Advance (Make your reservations early, mail your Christmas cards by Dec. 15, pay your property tax on time, etc.)

If the target date for the vacaton is July 20, there are those who think Ground Hog Day is not too soon to fill the car with gas and check the air pressure in the tires. Conversely, there are those of us who think half the fun of vacations is driving bleary-eyed for 12 hours in a station wagon with 42 pieces of luggage, a two year old on the verge of being toilet trained, a six year old suffering from motion sickness, a beagle and a pussy cat, while speculating on the possibility of finding a vacancy at three o'clock in the morning in Washington, D.C., on the weekend of July Fourth.

4) Pack Only Necessary Items

For me this has become a decade-specific problem. In the sixties, when I first began travelling without the burden of my parents, packing was exceptionally easy. Regardless of my desination the dress was blue jeans with fringe, sandals, a rope (to hold up the fringed blue jeans), a green army jacket, one bandana and no identification. The only things I needed to pack (in my jacket pocket, of course) were a clean pair of BVDs in case I was taken to an Emergency Room and they called my mother, and a Wash-N-Dri. Frankly, the Wash-N-Dri was optional.

The seventies were a much more difficult decade in which to pack. Not that I was compelled to carry so many clothes. Just that there were so many questions to be answered first. I had to know what my bag was, where my head was at, what I was into and then find myself before I could decide what threads to pack. Monumental stuff.

The eighties are a cinch, so far. I pack everything. For six days prior to the trip everything goes directly from my body to the washer without even pausing at the clothes hamper. Then they go from the dryer to one of the myriad suitcases or hanging bags I'll be taking for the weekend.

The only drawback is that I end up wearing my Carter's bib overalls to the office the last two days.

My rule of packing states: If you have to pack at all, pack it all.

5) Pain Has No Memory

This includes sunburn pain, insect bite pain, assorted sprains and fractures, laryngitis from screaming at the kids, migraines and the stomach pain that accompanies being handed the hotel bill at the end of your stay and finding that the six year old has ordered room service for everyone staying on the even-numbered floors.

But, take heart, if you're like most of us and can only take a two week family vacation, you've got 50 weeks to recover. And remember: Time heals all credit cards. Bon voyage!

Power plays promote parking tax

By William Poole

In the past, a handful of lawmakers determined when, how and if Boston got special state help.

Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn scurried about the marbled corridors of the Statehouse where he once served as a state representative. He was trying to win approval of a plan to help his city solve its financial problems.

Western Massachusetts lawmakers began to feel an increased sense of the political power that has eluded them over the years.

And suburban legislators sought to send a message to the Boston legislative delegation that without their support major bills stand little chance of passage.

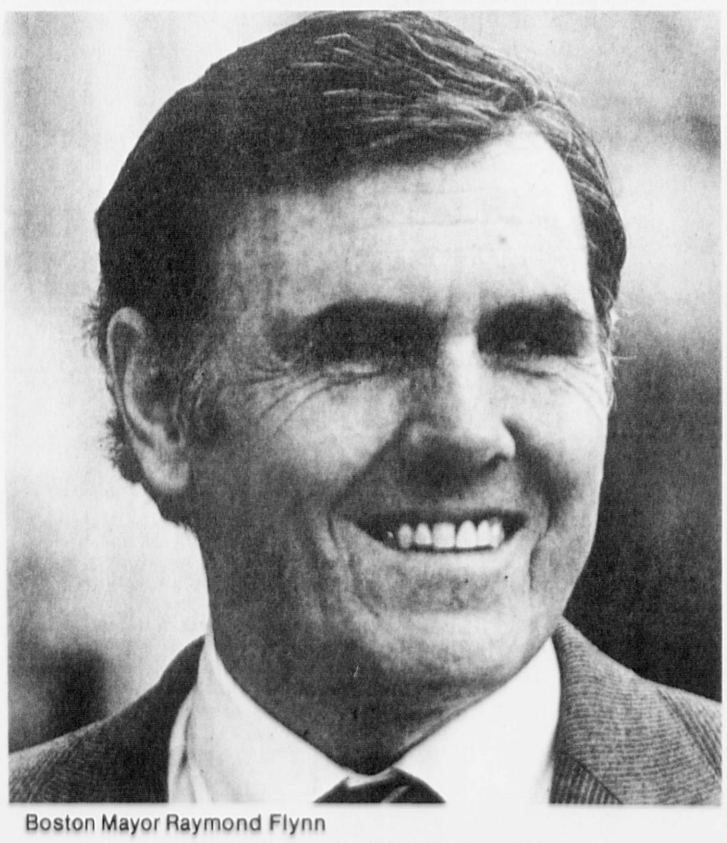

They were all part of a drama surrounding Flynn's request for a 15 percent parking facility tax. The Massachusetts House had become involved in a new and unusual political scenario.

In the past, 'a handful of lawmakers determined when, how and if Boston got special state help. A strong-willed chief executive like former Boston Mayor Kevin White could cut deals by going directly to House Speaker Thomas McGee, D-Lynn, and Senate President William Bulger, D-Boston, for assistance. They were potent enough to decide how questions ultimately would be resolved.

Last week, however, Flynn scampered about the Statehouse, buttonholing individual lawmakers for their support for a plan to provide Boston with about $10 million in much-needed new revenue.

Meanwhile, lawmakers from the western part of the state and those within mass transit distance of Boston found they could get extra state help if they played their cards right in the Boston parking tax poker game.

The script wasn't in written form. The House members, instead, put on an exceptional and noteworthy ad-lib performance.

Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn

It was good theater. The lines weren't learned in advance, but the style was well rehearsed over the past year — or ever since former House Majority Leader George Keverian, D-Everett, began his challenge to McGee's leadership.

Rep. Frances Alexander, D-Beverly, summed up what was happening when she told her colleagues the House membership was essentially divided into three parts: the representatives from Boston, those from communities within 30 miles of the capital city and others more distant.

The Boston lawmakers wanted approval of the parking tax. Legislators from the 50 or so nearby suburbs wanted the state to absolve them from the need to pay a total of $10 million in Metropolitan District Commission park and water fees. And those outside the MDC district wanted a total of $17.9 million in additional local aid.

With those goals driving them, the House lawmakers strove to reach a compromise with which they could live.

In the process, their roles changed. They as individual legislators and actors on the House stage gained new importance.

The McGee-Keverian struggle, the recent liberalization of House rules of procedure and the latest episode over aid to Boston and other cities and towns made individual lawmakers in the 160-member House chamber more independent and more important at the same time. As a result, their votes counted more than ever.

As the legislators tried to tie together an acceptable parking and local aid compromise, Rep. Walter DeFelippi, R-West Springfield, summed up what occurred: "The major benefit that came out of this whole thing is that all of the cities and towns outside the metropolitan Boston area now realize they have voting strength."

And those lawmakers from cities and towns closer to the capitol also discovered they could flex their growing legislative muscles on the House floor.

It was a drama seldom played out in the pit of the House chamber — and it was important.

Marking Time

Parking tax makes cents... for Boston

By Mark White

Were you watching the fiasco at the State House last week, otherwise known as "Let's Make a Deal?"

Behind Door No. 1 was the City of Boston Parking Excise tax, subtitled, "Welcome to Bail-Out City." Boston needs money. Boston doesn't want to cut services. Boston wanted to cut taxes and voted overwhelmingly in support of Proposition 2 1/2.

So how does Boston, led by Coach Flynn, get to keep services and still keep from taxing its residents? Easy... rip-off the suckers from the suburbs.

Let's tax them for coming into the city. It makes no difference that in order to park your car in the city, you already have to take out a financing agreement. The average parking fee is $8-10. With this tax, it would add another $1-1.50 each day.

You wouldn't believe this, but the entire Boston delegation supported this proposal. Isn't that amazing? Imagine, the Boston politicians are unanimously in favor of taxing people outside Boston in order to pay Boston's expenses. Takes a great deal of courage to take that position, doesn't it?

Now, some legislators argued that we have a responsibility to support Boston. Why?

We work in Boston, pay a personal/property tax to Boston, pay property taxes in Boston, and increase income to Boston's businesses.

Our city, when faced with Proposition 2 1/2, made serious budget cuts. Boston should make their cuts.

Ray Flynn's political rhetoric during the Mayor's race criticized Kevin White for laying off city workers. Now that he is in charge, he wants us to bail him out.

Mayor Flynn laments that Boston has a large percentage of tax-exempt property. But you know who created that tax exemption - the state legislature.

Why don't all the Boston college and Boston University graduates on Beacon Hill vote to eliminate the exemption for educational institutions instead of trying to tax an available group of patsies who have no choice but to pay this rip-off?

> Isn't that amazing? Imagine, the Boston politicians are unanimously in favor of taxing people outside Boston in order to pay Boston's expenses.

Evidently, many legislators agreed with my objections because the proposal was defeated. But by a close vote in an election year.

Don't breathe too easy because Flynn could resubmit this boondoggle after the election.

But you know what is even more aggravating than the tax itself is the way they tried to get it through.

Behind Door No. 2 was increased local aid for the Western Communities.

Behind Door No. 3 was the reduction of a $10 million MDC debt for the suburbs.

And, as a bonus, Mike Dukakis got a regional sewer and water commission.

You see, everybody was going to get something. Boston gets a tax. The West gets cash. The suburbs get a credit. Michael gets more authority. And the commuter gets the shaft! Seems fair!!

Now, I think Newton has the best legislative delegation in the State House, but I can't understand their support for that bill.

Maybe we ought to tax visitors for shopping in Newton. Maybe we ought to tax Boston residents for parking on our streets.

And, of course, the entire Boston delegation, would support it, wouldn't they? After all, its only fair!!

(Mark White is a former member of the Newton Board of Aldermen)

Letters

Praises for animal control

I feel compelled to write this letter to you in praise of the Newton Animal Control Department.

Having lived in Newton for many years, I have always been quite satisfied with our public services. However, in view of what transpired a few months ago, I feel that they deserve even more honorable mention!

Several months ago, a squirrel decided to take shelter in the burner room of my house and proceeded to partially destroy this room. In spite of all my efforts to free him, he would not leave and I was at my wit's end.

Not knowing what else to do, I called the Newton Animal Control officer and was told that they would send an officer to see what could be done. That very evening, Officer Fall came to the house and tried to eject the squirrel without hurting him. This was to no avail and a window was left open in hopes that he would leave for greener pastuyres.

However, another week passed by and my "boarder" had feasted on parts of my burner and everything else in sight. I frantically called again and Officer Fall responded to my pleas.

He proceeded to calm me down and after much ado, he called to me that the squirrel had left, unharmed and all was under control.

This may not sound like a tremendous feat, but I do feel that accolades are due to the Newton Animal Control Department and particularly Officer Fall, for ejecting this animal, unharmed, and for the concern and compassion they have shown.

Being an animal lover, I was concerned for the squirrel, not to mention my house. I want to hail the efficiency and care that Officer Fall and the entire department has shown.

Thanks again. Hopefully, they will continue their fantastic work.

Sincerely,
Barbara Springer

Frank's MIFA support cited

I would like to publicly thank U.S. Representative Barney Frank for his outstanding national leadership to preserve industrial revenue bond financing for smaller businesses and downtown revitalization efforts in Massachusetts.

Congressman Frank has consistently been an important friend to smaller companies which are expanding and creating thousands of new jobs. In the past few weeks he became a prime sponsor of a House resolution to oppose the state volume cap on revenue bonds being considered by a Senate/House conference committee on tax legislation.

Although this resolution did not come up for a vote, Congressman Frank's stirring speech during House debate has strengthened the efforts of revenue bond advocates who are fighting to preserve the lower interest rates offered through this important program.

We are all fortunate to have Barney Frank working on behalf of downtown revitalization, more new jobs and economic resurgence in Massachusetts.

Cover special election costs with remainder of Hyde Fund

Let us all acknowledge that the Hyde community put up a good fight to maintain their neighborhood school. With this recognition so noted, it would now be proper for the community to use their school fund to pay the City of Newton for the costs incurred by the referendum. The city expended the money in essence to permit a "special" group to play-out a dwindling possibility; all this after the school committee had voted to close the school.

The Hyde School fund would be properly used in paying the city for the second opportunity to vote the school open.

Support school reform bill

House 5704, the comprehensive school reform bill, is coming up for debate before the Massachusetts Legislature.

This bill, authored by the Legislature's Joint Committee on Education, has strong support from educators and supporters of quality public schools, who are pleased that the Joint Committee has placed school reform at the top of the state's priorities.

Speaking for the 57,000 members of the Massachusetts Teachers Association, who work across the state in public elementary, secondary, and higher education, I urge your readers to support House 5704, and to ask their legislators to support it when it comes up for debate in the near future. While there are some aspects of House 504 with which we disagree, we feel it represents an extremely positive, encouraging step toward better schools in Massachusetts. Among its many recommendations are:

1. A proposal for early childhood education - pre-kindergarten and kindergarten - in all cities and towns, to help children get off to a solid start in their schooling.

2. Locally developed curriculum plans, involving basic skills and broad new standards for all students.

3. Basic skills testing for students at grades three, five, and seven, and statewide assessment testing of students in major curriculum areas in grades four, eight, and 11 or 12.

4. Expanded teacher training, both pre-service and in-service.

5. Mandatory evaluation of all teachers every two years.

6. Development of strong discipline codes for all school systems.

7. Standardized testing for student teachers.

8. Increased starting salaries for all teachers, to continue to attract and retain top people in our society's most vital profession.

9. Stronger high school graduation requirements.

10. Establishment of maximum class sizes in grades K-6.

11. A five-year phased introduction of computers into school curricula.

12. Provision for special projects and individualized learning plans.

In short, House 5704 offers Massachusetta a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to achieve meaningful, broad-based school reform, benefitting students, teachers, and the entire Commonwealth. Our legislators should be given a clear indication of why it deserves their support as well.

Carol A. Doherty, President
Mass. Teachers Association

Paws to praise Frank

On behalf of the 12,000 members of the New England Anti-Vivisection Society, I would like to express gratitude to fourth district Congressman Barney Frank for his co-sponsorship of the House of Representatives bill, 5098.

H.R. 5098, intended to promote the advancement of scientific knowledge while avoiding the waste of animal lives and taxpayer's money, which is caused by duplicative research, is designed to remedy the current inability of the research community to obtain full-text results of previous experiments.

Under H.F. 5098, a National Center for Research Accountability would be established to identify research proposals which contain duplicative experiments before any research using live animals would be funded.

Congressman Frank is to be commended for his support of this bill, which recognizes the responsibility of the federal government to make the results of bio-medical research readily and economically accessible.

I hope other Massachusetts Representatives will follow Congressman Frank's responsible action and promote responsible and economical research methods by lending their co-sponsorship and support to this important bill.

Smoke law in effect

'This proves that the cigarette industry can be beaten on the East Coast the same way it was in California.'

Mayor Mann

The law, introduced by Ward 2 Alderman-at-Large Edward L. Richmond, is based on an ordinance passed in San Francisco early this year and a non-mandatory measure in effect throughout Connecticut. The new law caps off over 10 years of similar intiatives here, with aldermanic legislation already in effect prohibiting smoking in restaurants, supermarkets, aldermanic chambers and banning the distribution of free cigarettes within city limits.

"This legislation is significant in that it recognizes the legitimate concerns of a large segment of the population. It is also consistent with the warnings issued by the U.S. Surgeon General regarding the health dangers of second-hand smoke," the mayor said as both proponents and opponents of the ordinance looked on.

Both Mann and Joyal expect some problems to occur because of the ordinance, but anticipate such differences will be resolved within individual business and office situations through "goodwill," "common courtesy" and "the power of persuasion."

Joyal, a former regional director in the state's public health department, said the problems that might arise "depend on what kind complaints you get. Overall, I don't expect many complaints. If a complaint is a problem, then you've got a problem, but I don't see any problem in enforcing it."

After the signing ceremony, Ward 3 Alderman-at-Large Robert L. Tennant, the board's staunchest business advocate who opposed the law as an unfair intrusion of government into the commercial sector throughout prolonged aldermanic deliberations, openly questioned Mann about the new law's effect on business here and Joyal's power to impose fines for non-compliance.

Ultimately, Tennant's persistence led Mann, who remained noncommittal about the proposal while it was in the board's hands, to admit he would have preferred a measure providing for "voluntary" compliance.

Mann also said any "potential problems" that the new ordinance might have had in stopping one business, Cahner's Publishing Co. of Boston, from relocating to Newton Corner have been "worked out."

Alderman Richmond, who has spearheaded the city's previous laws regarding smoking, said after the signing, "I'm elated that Newton has once again been the pioneer in Massachusetts for passing such a significant public health ordinance and I hope other communities will follow our lead to produce a smoke-free envirnoment for workers."

Richard Daynard, member of the Brookline-based Group Against Smoking Pollution (GASP), said his organization was "obviously delighted" with Mann's signature on the new ordinance and added, "This proves that the cigarette industry can be beaten on the East Coast the same way it was in California."

Fireworks jeopardized

fireworks display. Marini, who was born and raised in the neighborhood that holds the annual St. Carmen Festival so dear, said he remembered the fireworks as a summer landmark of his childhood days.

Tony Gentile, a 42-year-old Lincoln Road resident who is licensed by the state fire marshall's office as an expert in the field, said Reilly does not want to issue the society a permit for a $1,800 fireworks display this year because of letters from neighboring residents complaining about the noise of the explosions and that the society is "forcing its ethnic beliefs" on other people.

He said he was notified of the fire chief's decision by Dominic Messina, the society's "orator," a position denoting an original member of the group started in 1935.

The St. Mary of Carmen Society, which is run with the cooperation of the Our Lady Help of Christians Church on Adams Street, is a group based in the "Lake" area of Nonantum and whose membership is largely of Italian descent. The society holds an annual festival at Hawthorne Park featuring ethnic foods, carnival rides, music and dancing, with this year's celebration planned for the weekend of July 12-15.

Last year, according to Gentile, approximately 7,000 people attended the festival's fireworks display, which he described as "a short color and barrage salute" that traditionally honors the statue of the society's patron saint as it passes by in a walking procession heading back to the church.

"How are you not going to make noise with fireworks?" Gentile asked of residents' concern about the noise of the explosions. He added that, during his aerial display for the festival last year, he carried $300,000 of comprehensive liability insurance to cover any damage or injuries. His recent Waltham performance was insured for $1 million.

"For the 20 years I've been doing it (synchronizing and arranging pyrotechnic displays), knock on wood, I haven't had an accident," he added.

Gentile, who has planned 20 municipal firework shows this week alone, including a Marblehead display larger than the recent Waltham exhibit, said he is experienced enough to "shoot only the type of shells" that are the safest and most predictable for each firing area's surroundings. As an added safety precaution, he said he also personally checks the preparation of the colorful aerial rockets at each site on the day of the show.

In contrast to Gentile's remarks signalling a cancellation of the show, Nunzio Leone, chairman of the festival committee and a Newton firefighter, said Monday Reilly's concern about the fireworks was "more or less routine" and added the group will be "ironing everything out" in time for the show to go on.

"We feel we do everything we should for the public's safety. We've never had any problems. We're the last people who want anything to go wrong," Leone added.

Fun for some

Smoke law commission is appointed

The members of the new mayoral commission created to monitor the implementation of the city's new ordinance governing smoking in the workplace are:

Bernice R. Joyal, public health commissioner, ex officio; Eleanor Samuels, former chairperson of the Newton P.T.A.; Meredith Censullo, public health nursing instructor at Massachusetts General Hospital; Janet Goldrick, Burr School principal; Jo Anne Gaines, community representative; Linda Katz, community representative; Dr. Frank Howard, internist at Newton-Wellesley Hospital; James Hyde, Tufts Medical School; Dr. Daniel Kopans, radiologist at Massachusetts General Hospital; Helen Melzter, executive director of the Massachusetts Public Heath Association; Alderman Edward L. Richmond; Lewis Songer, director Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce; and Richard Wilson, member of Group Against Smoking Pollution (GASP).

Moynihan named personnel director

Faces challenge of 'snoopers,' minority hiring

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Richard V. Moynihan, second-in-command of the assessing department for the last year, has been named the city's new personnel director, taking over that department at one of the most controversial times in its history.

Mayor Theodore D. Mann is expected to announce Moynihan's appointment to the post, effective Monday. The 43-year-old Watertown resident will take over for Edith "Dee" Meisser, who resigned about a month ago for health reasons.

Moynihan acknowledged Monday that the "two most outstanding issues" he faces in his new role are revamping the city's affirmative action policy and the department's currently abandoned program of sending private investigators to the homes of city employees who are suspected of abusing their sick leave.

The city's affirmative action program, which had been adminstered by Vickie Sankey until her recent resignation, has resulted in a 1.8 percent minority staffing rate in all of the city's departments, far below the 8.6 percent rate considered acceptable by the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination (MCAD), resulting in criticism that it has not been faithfully and forcefully pursued by the city department heads.

Moynihan said he will order a complete review of the city's affirmative action with an eye towards updating and rewriting some portions.

The practice of investigating sick leave abuse as a way of saving taxpayer money has also been the subject of intense aldermanic criticism and grievances filed by the city employee unions. The new director said he will examine the entire history of the plan statistically and ascertain "why that approach toward sick leave management was selected," but added that any policy decisions on the issue will be made "down the line."

The appointment, of which Moynihan said he was "delighted," will mean close to a $10,000 raise for Moynihan as he leaves his $26,829 yearly salary as deputy director of assessment administration for the $36,442 yearly pay as personnel director.

Moynihan was selected for the job from 55 applicants, according to Chief Administrative Officer Richard Kelliher. A screening committee composed of Kelliher, Assistant Personnel Director Mary C. Hurley, Brookline Personnel Director Jerry Hayes and Deputy Director of the state's Labor Relations Commission Arthur Caron, former personnel director for the city of New Bedford, made the final recommendation to Mayor Mann, who finalized his decision last week.

The screening committee believed what was needed most was "a strong administrator," Kelliher said, calling other requisites, like knowledge of civil service regulations and classification, "learnable."

Reilly in the clear

When the party was later cancelled, Reilly said he received a $500 refund check which he cashed at the request of his longtime friend George Niles, former BRA budget director, who then allegedly returned the money to Anzalone. Four other BRA associates were also involved in the check-cashing activity.

Reilly, who was elected as the city's Chestnut Hill representative last November, has maintained both during court testimony and in comments outside the trial that he did not think writing and cashing checks in such a way was an illegal activity, and echoed those comments Wednesday afternoon.

"I said I was never involved in anything illegal and the court has vindicated me and vindicated him (Anzalone). I said I never did anything wrong and the court agreed. That's the end of it for me," he said.

Reilly, who testified under cross examination that Anzalone was "not a close, personal friend," said he first heard the news of the verdict against the former city assessor and mayoral aide during a late night television broadcast.

"Mr. Anzalone never asked me to do anything and I never had anything to do with him," said Reilly, who added that the last few weeks during the well-publicized trial have "not been the most pleasant time, of course."

Fun Run for Head Injury Foundation

Jerry Schmidt, administrator of Community Re-Entry Services in Lynn, pushed student Anne Morley's wheelchair through Newton for the entire two miles of the recent fun run sponsored by the Massachusetts Chapter of the National Head Injury Foundation. At right, Steven Stein, also a student in the CRS program, raises his cane when he crossed the finish line.

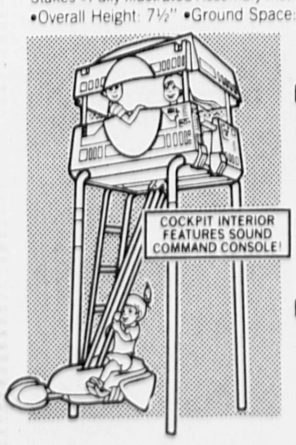

Morley, who suffered a stroke in 1982, has recently taken her first steps and hopes to be able to ski again. Stein suffered head and other injuries when struck by a car and hopes to return to college.

Arts keep Newton alive

By Susan Schneck
In Focus Editor

Who says you have to travel to Boston for top-rate musical performances, professional theatre or cultural events?

No one who's familiar with Arts in the Parks in Newton. Open to residents of any community, this year-round cultural program features a everything from outdoor concerts, festivals and parades, to programs for adults, tots and children with special needs.

Arts in the Parks, which began summer sessions last week, was recently awarded national honors for Creative Programming from the New England Regional Council of the National Parks and Recreation Association.

Arts in the Parks planned a special July 4th "Down Home Celebration" at the Newton Centre Playground. The agenda included contests, old-fashioned races, games and treats for children and performances by the Shakespeare Brothers and the Heritage Jazz Band.

"People who participate in our events really feel they belong to a community," said Linda Plaut, who has directed Arts in the Parks for 10 years. "It breaks up the isolation of having to take care of family or a house — they can meet other people.

Last year, 20,0000 residents and neighbors participated in Arts in the Parks. Footing the bill for those programs are: the Newton Parks and Recreation Dept.; the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities; Newton Arts Lottery Council; and the New England Foundation for the Arts.

"The fact that I'm salaried through the city shows that the people of Newton care about the quality of life here and the livability of this city," said Plaut, who also chairs the Newton Arts Lottery Council. "Unfortunately, after Prop 2½, there was less and less culture and art in school curriculums. Parents who recognize the importance of that aspect of their child's education now look elsewhere than the schools.

Inside one classroom, three and four-year-olds sat cross-legged on the floor, unblinking eyes fixed on their music teacher as they anxiously awaited The Word. Tiny knuckles turned white as their hands, poised in mid air, clenched xylophone sticks and waited. Finally it came.

"'C,' 'C,' 'C,'" the teacher began as a cacophony of notes filled the Mason Rice Elementary School classroom with music.

Next door, a noisy group of small children immersed their bodies in paper mache concoctions. Squealing with delight, they showed each other hands covered in gummy white gook. "This smells delicious," exclaimed one little blonde child as she deeply inhaled her gooey creation. "Ummmmmm. Just like bread."

Plaut viewed the scene from a doorway, smiling proudly. "This exposes young children to arts at a price they can afford," she said. Each six-week session for the two, three and four-year-olds costs $90 and meets twice a week. Scholarships are offered to children who can't afford that fee.

"None of this is free play," Plaut noted. "It's a full schedule and the children are always learning.

"Children don't want to be left alone," she continued. "They have more confidence in what they do and feel more accomplished about it when they have some direction and are praised."

"When you can predict what'll happen, you feel secure. Children feel good when life is somewhat predictable — then they're comfortable enough to experiment and be more creative."

Plaut is particularly proud of Camp Echo Bridge, the only state-accredited special needs camp run by a municipal recreation department.

"We do everything and anything with them short of skydiving," noted Special Needs Director Lou MacDonald, who holds a degree in therepeutic recreation. "We take them to discos in Boston, to the track, camping overnight, to boat rides at Boston Harbor, museums, bowling — as well as teaching them socialization skills like how to tell the difference between the men's and ladies' room."

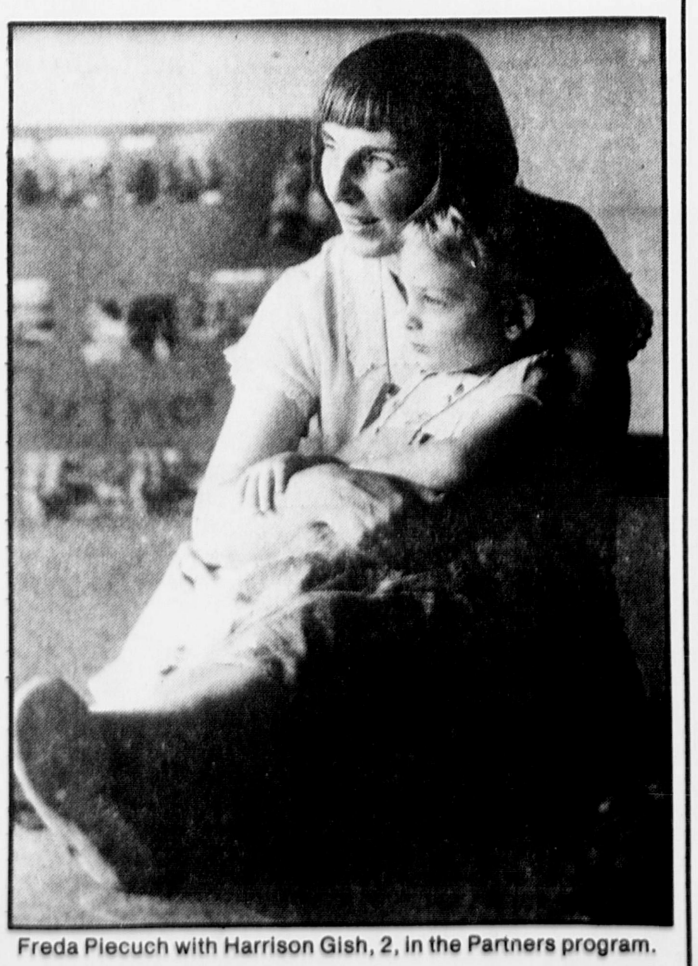

The 50 children enrolled in the special needs program do not have to pay tuition.

For further information on Arts in the Parks, contact the Newton Parks and Recreation Dept. at 70 Crescent St., Auburndale, or call 552-7120.

"Community arts is a way of life here in Newton," Plaut exclaimed.

Children's enrichment programs started classes last week.

Rachel and Bryan Koplow

Rachel Grossman marries Bryan Koplow on June 10

Rachel Grossman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morton S. Grossman of Chestnut Hill, was married at a garden ceremony at the home of her parents on Sunday, June 10 to Bryan Koplow, son of Mrs. Dorothy Koplow and the late Milton Koplow of Lynn. The reception was also at her home in Chestnut Hill.

Rabbi Samuel Zaitchik of Ahabat Shalom Synagogue in Lynn and Rabbi Samuel Chiel of Temple Emanuel, Newton, officiated at the double-ring ceremony. The rings were the same ones which were used for the marriage of the bride's parents and grandparents.

Amy Narva was her sister's matron of honor. The bride was also attended by her sister, Linda G. Polivy, Patti Grossman, Amy Miller, Ellen Koplow, and Robin Koplow.

The groom's best man was his brother, Meyer Koplow of New Rochelle, New York. Other ushers included Louis J. Grossman, Dr. Kenneth D. Polivy and Dr. Louis Miller.

The bride is a graduate of Beaver Country Day School and Brown University. She is presently a sales manager for the Jordan Marsh Company in their Burlington store.

The groom is the owner of Bavarian Motor Sport Limited on the North Shore.

The bride is the granddaughter of the late Jacob and Rose Grossman of Quincy and the late Emily and Kivie Kaplan of Chestnut Hill.

The groom is the grandson of the late George and Mamie Koplow of Chelsea and the late Meyer and Bessie Stoler of Quincy.

After the wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple will reside in Brighton.

Justin Brian born to McCarthy's

John and Kathleen McCarthy of Margaret Road in Newton Highlands proudly announce the birth of their son Justin Brian McCarthy on June 3, 1984 at the North Shore Birth Center. Joining the couple in their announcement are the grandparents Joseph and Marilyn Hanley of Washington Township, N.J., and Edward and Catherine McCarthy of River Edge, N.J.

Judith Cartwright to marry John Fontecchio in October

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Cartwright of Needham are pleased to announce the engagement of their daughter Judith L., to Dennis J. Fontecchio.

Cartwright is a 1977 graduate of Needham High School and is employed by Bud Ente Sales as an office manager.

Fontecchio is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Fontecchio of Newton Center. He is a 1978 graduate of Newton South High School and a 1983 graduate of Northeastern University. He is employed by Newburg, Skalsky and Company as an accountant.

The couple has set a wedding date for October.

NCSC adds all-day kindergarten

Newton Community Service Centers announces the addition of an all-day kindergarten to its existing day care program. The program is being developed as a result of numerous requests from working parents who have not been able to find a program that suits both the educational needs of their children and the extended hours in which care for five-year-olds may be necessary. Although this service at NCSC is entirely new, most places are already filled. A few all-day slots are available on a full tuition basis.

For information call NCSC Day Care at 332-8887 and ask for Havi Stander, Director.

Sisterhood Temple Emanuel

B'nai B'rith Women plan Children's Home Lunch

The B'nai B'rith Women's Council of Greater Boston recently announced their plans for their sixth annual BBW Children's Home Luncheon.

Council President Tillie Mirkin of Norwood, has appointed Anita Wassersug of Randolph and Selma Engler of Needham as co-chairwomen of the gala function which will take place on Wednesday, Oct. 24, at the Holiday Inn, Biarritz Plaza in Dedham.

The BBW Children's Home in Israel is a residential treatment center for emotionally disturbed boys. It has a success rate that has served as an inspiration and model for other such facilities around the world.

Also serving on the committee are Midge Liner and Marci Saltzberg, both of Newton, as reservations co-chairwomen; Leona Weis of Needham as boutiques chairwoman; Elaine Kaplan of Newton as publicity chairwomen; Judi Raphael, of Holliston as program chairwomen; Eunice Berger of Randolph as treasurer; Sylvia Silverman of Sharon as counsellor and Phyllis Berkowitz, Edna Glass, Sydney Mayzer, Lynn Wolk, and Bea Brooks as additional members of the committee.

Corpus Christi Guild elects 1984-85 officers

The 1983-84 season of the Corpus Christi Guild of Auburndale rounded out a successful year with its annual banquet at the Marriot Hotel. The evening was well attended by past officers and members of the guild. The special events of the year were reviewed and Rev. Joseph McGlone was presented with a check for $1000 for the parish. The evening was planned by co-chairpersons, Polly Bryson and Joan McGrath.

The officers for the 1984-85 term were elected and introduced as: Spiritual Director Rev. Volunteer ombudsmen needed

Nursing Home Outreach Program located in Newton, and administered by the Jewish Family and Children's Services, a private, non-profit agency, is seeking volunteer nursing home ombudsmen to serve residents of nursing homes in the area in Brookline, Needham, Newton, Watertown, Wellesley and Weston.

The Massachusetts Department of Elder Affairs will hold an ombudsman training session on July 24, 25, 27, 31 and Aug. 1 from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at Boston City Hall.

The ombudsman program is designed to offer residents of long-term care facilities a community connection and is mandated by the Older Americans Act. The west suburban program is partially funded by the West Suburban Elder Services, Inc.

For information on how to volunteer contact Janet Ruboy at 965-6890.

Couple weds in English tradition

Visitors to Plimouth Plantation may join in songs and sports and give advice to the bride and bridegroom when Mary Warren weds Robert Bartlett in a traditional English country wedding in the 1627 Pilgrim Village at Plimough Planation on Thursday, July 12.

The all-day event will begin with flower gathering and the making of garlands and favors for the bride, her attendants, and the couple's bed chamber.

Village men will share tales with the bridegroom and the women will discuss the advantages of maidenhood and marriage.

In view of visitors, the bride will be dressed is elegant Pilgrim attire. Groomsmen will escort her while the bridesmaids escort the bridegroom to an open green where the wedding ceremony will take place. The wedding feast will be held outside the Bradford House, and visitors may join in rounds of songs, games of tug-o-war, egg races, and dancing.

The Plantation is located on Warren Avenue (Rte. 3), three miles south of downtown Plymouth.

National League

Gladu fly wins for Mosca, 1-0

NEWTON — The Mosca Club emerged victorious in a 2-1 pitchers' duel with Our Lady's on Monday night in National League action at Cabot Park, thanks to a sacrifice fly off the bat of winning pitcher Ray Gladu. The righty lofted a towering fly in the fifth inning to score Dan Pill with the winner.

Gladu's heroics were set up by Pill's good baserunning. After leading off with a single, he was running on the pitch as Matt Spengler ripped a safety, and just beat the throw to third. Gladu's fly ball allowed Pill to almost walk home.

The winner quelled an attempted rally in the seventh. After two singles, Andy Lyons walked, loading the bases with only one out. Gladu then got tough and induced Britt Ryan to pop to third and struck out Aldo Tramantozzi on a 3-2 count to end the game

Our Lady's designated hitter Bill Bilodeau evened the score at one with a homer to right field in the fourth, the only long hit off Gladu for the night.

With the win, its ninth straight, the Mosca Club goes to 10-1.

St. Bernard's defeated Auburndale Sports, 8-3, on the strength of a five-run outburst in the third inning. The win improved St. Bernard's record to 10-1.

Glen Legault began the big inning with a single. Ed Natale followed with a safety, and Kevin Hiltz plated LeGault with a single. Dave Boule's shot to second was misplayed, allowing Natale to come home, and Ben Adner followed with a two-run single. Steve Caissie singled home Adner for the final run of the frame.

The win went to righthander Chapman, now 3-0, who was picked up by Boule in the fifth.

Righthander Jon Sudkin, in his first start of the season, pitched Upper Falls to its first win of the year, a 6-2 decision over the Warriors at Newton South High School.

The 17-year-old twirled a three-hitter, and in addition started both run-scoring rallies for the winners, including the five-run third.

That explosion put the game out of reach, the way Sudkin was throwing. It made it 6-0, as the Warriors didn't score until the sixth, when they got on the board twice.

To start the big inning, Sudkin reached on an error. After Chris Pappas singled, Sudkin came home on an error by the catcher to make it 2-0. Ed Murray followed with a walk and stole second, setting the stage for second baseman John Doherty, who laced a single to center for two big runs.

Upper Falls wasn't through yet. Jason Kaufman reached on catcher's interference, and Mike Berman slashed a single to right to score Doherty. Kaufman scored the final run of the inning on John Vachon's fielder's choice.

Errors also helped the winners score in the first, when Sudkin walked, stole second, and scored on a pair of miscues.

Upper Falls now owns a 1-7-1 record.

'Best ever' for Lion lacrosse

By Mike Flanagan
Sports Correspondent

NEWTON — The Newton South boys' lacrosse team this year enjoyed its first winning season ever, but when Coach Paul Murphy's club finally broke the .500 barrier, it did it with style, winning the Division 2 South Championship. Murphy's squad was led by a host of seniors, six of whom played in the Senior All-Star game this spring, but he thinks that a winning tradition has begun at the school, and is looking forward to next season.

The Lions had a season to cherish. Captained by Brendan Wilcox, Tom Dorf, Dean Goldberg and Rob Shone, the team posted an 8-6 record, saving its best for the second season.

The playoffs began with a grudge match against Acton-Boxboro. A foe during the regular season, Newton had split a pair of games against A-B. This contest showed the competitiveness which had begun with the two previous contests. In a nip-and-tuck battle, the Lions emerged victorious when Phil Burnham put one home with only 1:15 left in the game.

The final pitted the lions against Peabody, and this was another nail-biter. Dorf and Peter Kline combined to win 16 of 19 faceoffs, and Burnham came on to score three goals in the second half to provide the offense. Sophomore goalie Alex Levine fended off many tough shots in the closing minutes to save the victory.

Murphy believes that the key to this season's success was the hard work and spirit of the seniors. Said the coach, "They never gave up, not even when we went down to defeat. I'm hoping that their example has rubbed off on the younger players."

From that championship team, 14 have graduated. Six defensemen, Six midfielders, and two attack. The defense corps has been hurt the most by graduation, and Murphy must find replacements for the seniors.

The eight-year coach said, "We will really have to rebuild our defense, the six who left got almost all the playing time throughout the year."

Two returning back-liners who saw some varsity action this spring were Scott Katz and Jon Linder. They will be expected to help the players coming up from the junior varsity to develop next year. Katz and Linder are both described by Murphy as, "very physical, aggressive players." Both wrestle and Linder plays football as well.

They will have big shoes to fill; Goldberg was a two-time All-League selection, and received honorable mention on the All-Scholastic team. Jim Wilcon, Eric Vayle, and Steve Shapiro all played very steadfast, reliable defense, and they are gone.

There is hope, however, coming up from the junior varsity team. P.J. Haley's group posted a mark of 12-1 this year, and they should supply the varsity squad with some players who can step right in. Chris Murphy heads the field of new defensemen along with Katz and Linder.

One would think that Levine would feel secure in his goaltending job after an All-League year, but Murphy feels that he has three athletes vying for the position. Levine, only a sophomore, enjoyed an outstanding year in the net. Murphy attributes Levine's success to his great quickness and all-around athletic ability.

Mark Baron was beaten out by Levine this past season, and he will be in the thick of the competition for the job. Baron and Levine will have a tough time finding playing time if Aram Blankenship performs for the varsity as he did on the JVs. He posted a 24-5 mark in the two seasons he spent between the posts for the junior team, and was an integral part of the JV's success this past season. It's likely that whoever isn't in goal next year out of these three will find playing time at other positions as all are excellent athletes.

The midfield is in better shape than the defense, although this area is also losing six players. Dave Kowal and Mark Millender are the two best midfielders that Murphy has coming back. Kowal had a very good season, and he and Millender are both outstanding faceoff men. Peter Spinelli played some varsity during this year and will be counted upon to step right in and solidify the middle.

Murphy's prime candidates for midfield action from the JVs include Seth Oliver, Peter Murphy, and Whit Dorf. These players were the key performers for the junior varsity. Murphy expects that all three will be able to have an impact on the team almost immediately next season.

The big guns are gone from the attack: the four forwards who appeared in the Senior All-Star game have graduated. Leading scorer Wilcox, Dorf, Burnham, and Kline were the nucleus of the offense last season, and all four played in the all-star game along with Rob Shone and Goldberg.

There are however, four returning forwards who should be able to provide plenty of scoring for the Lions.

Matt Ranen leads the group; the diminutive attackman makes up for his lack of size with his excellent speed. Said Murphy, "When Burnham went down with an injury, Ranen more than made up for his scoring. We're really looking for big things from Matt next year."

Garth Bloch's excellent stickhandling complements Ranen's attributes perfectly, and Steve Alter's performance was a pleasent suprise when Bloch was felled by injuries. Alter came on to start the last six games of the season; he and Scott Passman should be able to add a lot of scoring to the Lions attack next spring. David Abrahams is expected to make a major offensive contribution after his sterling season with the JVs.

Overall, Murphy realizes that he has some tough work ahead of him. Fourteen quality seniors have been lost, and they will not be replaced easily. The success of the jayvees, coupled with Murphy's belief that a winning tradition has been started at Newton South, should be enough to make next spring's Lion lacrosse team at the least, very competitive.

King Hammill Award winner

By Roy LeBlanc
Staff Writer

NEWTON — As a team, it wasn't a season to remember for Newton North baseball. But for Joe King, it was a senior year to remember with pride for a long, long time.

The committee that selects the winner of the Bill Hammill Award each year agreed, recognizing King as the 15th person to receive the trophy signifying Newton's best high school baseball player.

"Teamwork did it," said King, who wanted to share the credit. "With Chris Pachus hitting behind me I saw a lot of good pitches."

King knew what to do with a good pitch when he saw it, hammering the ball at a .386 clip during the season with a pair of home runs and 20 runs batted in to lead the team.

"Joe did everything we asked this year and did it well," said Newton North coach Dick Walker in nominating King. "Rotating as our number one pitcher and playing second base when not pitching, we could always count on his consistency, flawless play and effort in the field."

The fact that King was able to maintain such a consistently high level of performance is somewhat amazing, considering that he was all over the place defensively for most of the year. King started out as a pitcher-second baseman, played some first, and wound up starting at short for the second half of the season when Walker needed to stabilize a somewhat shaky infield. That move did exactly that, and the Tigers were a different team the rest of the year.

On the mound, King was consistent as well. His efforts included a pair of shutouts. One was a three-hitter versus Walpole early on, and the second a one-hitter against Quincy late in the season. In the latter game, King came off a layoff of over two weeks to hold Quincy to only a single infield roller that went for a hit.

In his nomination, Walker also cited King's "leadership abilities both on and off the field," saying that he "performed in a manner that exemplifies the true spirit of sportsmanship.

A tremendous competitor, King was named to the Suburban League All-Star team as the starting second baseman.

From the high school season, the Fairway drive resident stepped right into summer baseball. He is playing for the Post 440 team in American Legion baseball, as well as the Boys' Club team in the Newton National League.

King hopes that baseball is in his future in college, too, but he hasn't picked an easy road. The righthander will be attending the University of Maine at Orono, which is well-known for having the best baseball program in New England.

The Hammill Award is named for the former three-sport star at Newton High. Hamill graduated from Newton in 1955 and went on to play two years of baseball at Holy Cross before signing with the Boston Red Sox.

After four years with the Allentown, Penn. team in the Eastern League, Hammill called it a career. He died suddenly of a brain hemorrhage in 1969.

The committee which chooses the award consists of several well-known baseball names. Russ Halloran is the Commissioner of the Newton Parks and Recreation Department. Howie Ferguson is a former Newton North coach, as is Ed Fratkman, who is also the principal at Day Junior High. Moe Maloney, currently an assistant baseball coach at Bentley College, is a former head coach at Watertown High School and Mass. Bay Community College. Also on the committee are attorney William Matthews and Paul Burke, a member of the Park and Recreation Commission.

King succeeds Scott McAdam, who had a tremendous season for Newton Catholic in 1983. Other previous winners include Joe Slamin of Newton North (1982), Mike Kasten of Newton South (1981), Gary Frechette of Newton North and Mike Dwyer of Newton South (1980), Chris Chaloff of Newton South (1979), Bob LeBlanc of Newton North and Mike Reddish of St. Sebastian's (1978), Tom Carey of Newton Catholic (1977), Bruce Jennings of Newton South (1976), Steve DiBenedetto of Newton North (1974 and 1975), Ned Moan of Newton South (1973), Dave Boyajian of Newton North (1972) and Jethro Mills of Newton North (1970 and 1971).

South's Stoller chosen on DCL All-Star squad

Newton South's Steve Stoller and Weston's Jack Cort and Chris Potter joined 14 other Dual County League baseball standouts on the circuit's all-star team, which was recently announced by the coaches.

As befits a league champion, Lincoln-Sudbury put the most players on the team with four, led by slugging outfielder Chris DeFranco, who was named the circuit's Most Valuable Player in a unanimous vote. Joining him on the dream team were younger brother Mike, Paul Leighton and Todd Burke.

Chris DeFranco is a senior, much to the relief of opposing coaches, while Mike is a junior second baseman. Leighton is a senior pitcher and Burke a junior outfielder.

STEVE STOLLER — Like Boston Latin, Newton South should be a force to be reckoned with in 1985, with several outstanding underclassmen coming back, including Stoller, Steve Altman, and Pillan Thirumalaisamy. Stoller, a junior co-captain roamed center field for the Lions in this, his second varsity season.

Newton coach Neil McPhee called Stoller "one of the best defensive outfielders we've had at Newton South in many years...He has a pretty good arm and never makes a mistake in any phase of the game."

Although Stoller hit only .254 this season, on 15 hits in 59 trips, the league's coaches recognized the contributions he can make offensively. The lefthanded hitter uses his excellent speed to get on base from his position at the top of the order for the big guns in the middle. He scored 20 runs this spring.

The coach also called him "an excellent clutch ballplayer...He has come through with many key basehits in the last two years."

JACK CORT — "He's probably the best high school player I've ever coached," said Weston mentor Cliff Wilson. "He has had an incredible year."

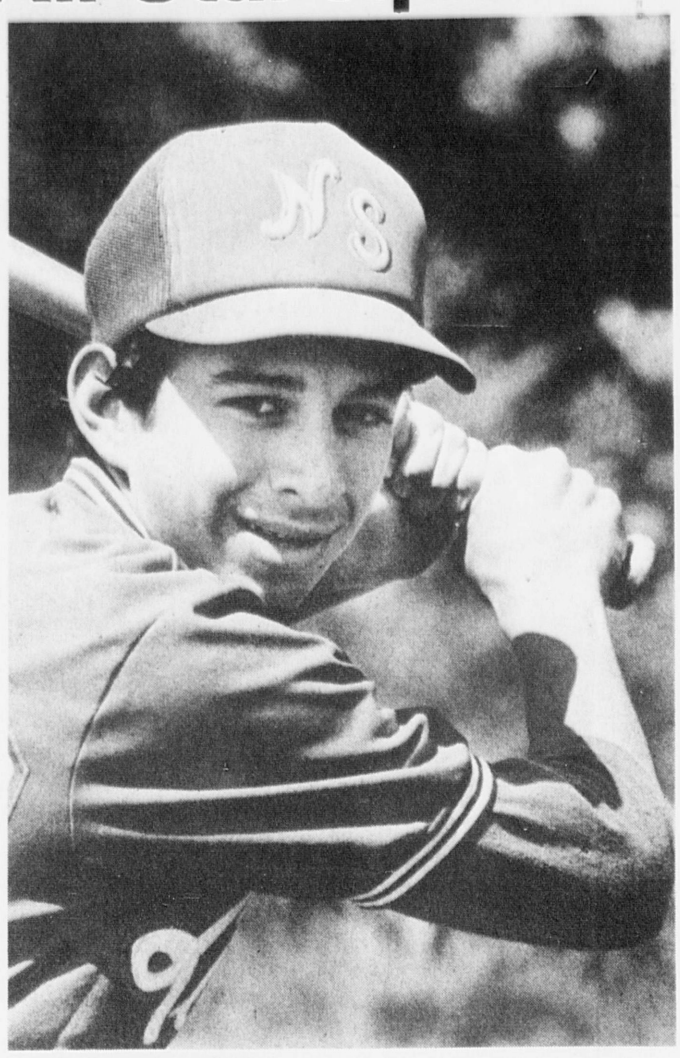

Wilson knew from the time Cort joined the team as a sophomore that he had potential, but it wasn't until this year that it was realized. After two respectable seasons in the .260-.270 range, Cort put it all together in his final year to hit .451, which included hitting safely in all 22 of the Wildcats' games.

Cort also had 10 multiple-hit games, drove in 16 runs, and ripped 10 extra base hits.

CHRIS POTTER — This senior was the ace of second-place Weston's pitching staff. He went 6-2 during the regular season with a 3.33 earned run average, despite a late-season slump.

Despite the fact that Potter is not really considered a power pitcher, the righthander led the league with 78 strikeouts in 65 innings.

Potter was also an integral part of the team with his bat. He hit .329 and finished second on the club in runs batted in with 12.

Rutan's steals save St. Bernard's

NEWTON — Shortstop Chris Rutan stole second, third and home in the bottom of the seventh inning to give St. Bernard's a 7-6 victory over Post 440 in International League action at West Newton Common on Monday.

The teams went into the frame tied at six, but losing pitcher Steve Lennon made the fatal mistake of walking Rutan. The shortstop took it from there, with clean steals of all three bases to end the game in a hurry.

That spectacular finish capped a comeback by St. Bernard's, keyed by Dave St. Germaine's third grand slam of the season. In the fourth inning, with the bases loaded and his team down, 5-3, the center fielder slammed a line drive into the gap in right center that just kept on going. St. Germaine also saved the day defensively with a great bases-loaded, diving catch in the second to end the inning.

Post 440 had a comeback of its own left, deadlocking the game on a sixth-inning suicide squeeze by Tim Burke that sent home Steve Bliss.

Thad Frost, a 14-year-old righthander, went the distance for the win and is now 3-0. He has given up only four walks in 34 innings this season. Frost also contributed a two-run single in the first.

Lennon drove in three runs with two hits for the losers.

St. Bernard's upped its record to 6-5, while Post 440 fell to 7-4.

Newton Catholic lefthander Nick Abruzzi outdueled Derek Brown as the Upper Falls Lions nipped the arch-rival Abruzzi Club, 3-1, at Upper Falls Playground.

Abruzzi surrendered only five hits, striking out five and walking two. Brown also pitched an excellent game, allowing seven hits and two walks, while striking out four. He also had a pair of hits.

Upper Falls had to chip away at Brown slowly, picking up single runs in the first, third and fifth.

In the initial frame, catcher Ted Donovan singled, swiped second, took third on a passed ball and came home on a fielder's choice.

Donovan also had a hand in the third-inning run, doubling home ron Vachon, who had singled and stolen second.

Winning pitcher Abruzzi sent home his own insurance run in the person of Ron Carson with a fifth-inning single.

The Oak Hill Cubs escaped with a 6-5 victory over On the Road despite a four-run rally in the last of the sixth by the losers. Mike Xidea retired the last two batters on weak grounders to get the win. The 14-year-old righthander also scored the winning run.

Noone HR nets Legion split

Matt Noone's solo homer in the bottom of the seventh inning on Sunday saved Newton Post 440's weekend in American Legion Baseball as it broke a 7-7 tie with Arlington and won the game. Saturday North Chelmsford pounded Post 440, 10-3.

There were none one and one out on Sunday when the sophomore from St. Sebastian's unloaded a shot to deep left-center at Ferguson Field. He helped his own cause, as he earned the win by getting the last four batters.

Bill Martin's speed had brought Newton within one run in the bottom of the sixth. He led off with a single to right, and when the fielder had trouble with the play, Martin went all the way to third. Joe King then hit a shot at the Arlington shortstop, but Martin was able to beat the throw home.

Noone came on to pitch in the top of the sixth, and retired the last batter with two runners on base. In the seventh, Arlington put a man on third with only one out, but Noone induced one hitter to fly out to short right, and another to ground out to earn the win.

On Saturday, Post 440 didn't do as well as North Chelmsford brought out the bats and used them in a 10-3 win. The winners notched five runs in their fourth inning, which put the game away. Newton scored two runs in the second and one in the fourth.

In the second, King walked, stole second, and scampered home when Alex DeNucci ripped a single to right. Bob Connerney singled, putting runners on the corners. Chuck Proia then delivered DeNucci with a single to left.

In the fourth, King scored Newton's last run. He led off with a walk, moved to third when Connerney's shot down the first base line couldn't be handled, and scored on a single by Proia.

Post 440's record is now 5-6.

Indians capture North LLB crown

NEWTON — The Indians nosed out the Cardinals, 7-5, thursday night, clinching the second-half title and assuring themselves of the Newton North Little League Championship.

Mike Connell picked up the win for the Indians, and helped his own cause with an RBI and a run scored. The Indians got going early, scoring one in the first. Tommy Donnellon doubled and came home on Mike Connel's triple. The Cards answered with two in the bottom of the second. Ronnie Fremault walked, Sam Wilson singled, and both scored on a passed ball.

The Indians won the game in the third and fourth innings, scoring three runs in each. In the third, Peter Kochansky reached on a fielder's choice, Donnellon singled, and Angelo Cappello drew a walk loading the bases. Bob Collela than ripped a single to right, scoring Kochansky and Donnellon. Cappello came home when a ball was bobbled in the infield.

In the fourth, three walks loaded the bases for Cappello, who unleashed a double which plated three.

The Cardinals battled back with two in the fifth on Ronnie Pang's single which rescued Miles Balgochian and John Kelley. the Cards were able to pick up one more in the bottom of the seventh, but it was too late as Connell, a 12-year-old righty, was able to shut them down when it counted.

Your No. 1 Guide For All Your Transportation and Service Needs

"IM" YOUR OFFICIAL MASS. INSPECTION MAINTENANCE STATIONS

Now that your car is inspected just once a year, the last number on your plate determines when.
If your plate ends in 6, get inspected in June.
Zeros come in October, though, and plates with all letters in November.
We'll do the traditional safety checks as well as the new computerized tailpipe emissions test. Quickly and efficiently.

How to care for camera equipment

By Chuck Hoppe
Minolta Regional Service Manager

NEW YORK (UPI) — These tips will help keep photographic equipment in top condition for taking quality pictures:

—Always make sure cameras are clean before they are put away. Remove dirt and moisture from camera bodies and lenses.

—Store equipment and batteries in a cool, dry place.

—Clean the camera body with a blower brush, a silicone cloth or a piece of chamois. Use the blower brush to remove dust within the film chamber (inside the rear cover). If the camera is used in damp weather or salt air, wipe it dry following the photo session.

—When they are not in use for extended periods, remove batteries from cameras and from flash units, motor drives, auto winders. Batteries can corrode and damage the camera's electrical system.

—Never touch the mirror, focusing screen or other glass surfaces with your fingers. If necessary, use a blower brush to remove particles, but do not wipe glass surfaces. For in-depth cleaning, contact your local authorized serviceman.

—Dirt, fingerprints and smudges on lenses produce a soft picture. Optical glass is more sensitive than regular glass and scratches more easily. To remove dirt and dust particles, use lens cleaning paper which is moistened with lens cleaner. The lens should be wiped in a circular fashion — from the center to the outside. Avoid using a handerchief or other common cloth. These may produce scratches which cannot be removed. If lens cleaning paper is not available, use a soft, clean and unstarched cotton cloth. Fingerprints should be removed immediately. They produce acid that eats into coatings on optical glass.

—Keep a lens cap on the camera to avoid contact with other objects. When shooting, a skylight filter will protect the lens. It is less expensive to replace than the front lens element.

—Protect cameras from shock, rain, snow, dust and direct sunlight in the lens. A gadget bag is the ideal protection. ——

If cameras are not used for an extended period of time:

—Operate the camera controls every three to six months.

—Check key functions: Batteries, shutter, diaphragm, auto exposure, auto focus, film advance.

—Check flash units. Fire them every two to three months.

—If something is wrong with your camera, do not try to disassemble or repair it yourself. Contact a camera repair facility. ——

Precautions on weather:

—When it's cold, keep your camera inside your cntil you are ready to take a picture. Battery performance deteriorates in cold weather, so use fresh batteries whenever possible and bring along some spares. Film also becomes brittle in cold weather, so advance film slowly.

—Gradually, readapt the camera to the indoors when you move back inside.

—Avoid hot environments for extended periods of time. Heat can have an adverse effect on photographs.

—Keeping cameras in a vinyl bag when not shooting will protect them from the elements.

Tips for traveling photographers:

—Keep your gadget bag zipped or latched shut when equipment is not in use.

—Bring along clear, plastic bags for storing exposed film and for providing a shelter for your camera at the beach, so sand won't drift inside when changing film or switching lenses.

—In case of loss or theft, keep an itemized list of all photo gear, including make, model and serial number of each piece of equipment. Your insurance company will need this when you file a claim.

—Take double the amount of film you think you're going to shoot and carry spare sets of batteries.

—If traveling by air, never check equipment through as baggage. It is not designed to withstand the handling that even strong luggage sometimes can't survive.

—When passing through airport security, keep film separate and ask the guards to hand-check photo gear if possible, since the cumulative effect of X-rays can damage film. Alternatively, film can be protected by using lead-lined foil bags which are available at most photo dealers.

Shop around for the best buys

The bewildering array of camera ads stuffed in small print in the backs of popular photo magazines offer enticing prices to lure the customer into making that toll-free call and placing an order.

But the rule of thumb when it comes to buying a camera should be shop around — then shop around some more.

Before making a purchase, the buyer first must decide what kind of pictures the camera will be used for — simple snapshots or more complex pictures that utilize the photographer's creativity to compose memorable scenes.

For the person who is interested in serious photography, 35 mm cameras with interchangable lenses are the starting point. The camera should have a good reputation for optical quality, durability and variety of components, such as Nikon, Canon, Pentax, Minolta or Olympus.

Although most cameras come "stock" with a 50 mm lens, buyers should consider instead a 35 mm lens, one that gives a wider field of view and allows the photographer to be more creative by getting closer to the subject.

A good choice for a second lens is in the 105 mm to 135 mm range. These allow the photographer to stay far enough away from the scene or event to avoid interferring with it. This is especially important when making pictures of small children or animals.

First decide what camera to buy for your needs. Take a day or so to browse at the local camera shop, get all your questions answered and compare prices.

Often the ads in the back of the photo magazines appear to tout low prices, but in many cases the price quoted over the phone is higher. It includes added costs — as described in the fine print at the bottom of the ad.

The buyer also should ask what accessories come with the camera because in many instances, the price quoted for a camera doesn't include such essential items as view finders, and those parts jack up the final price.

Snapshots for keeping in touch

NEW YORK (UPI) — Exchanging family and individual portraits and other photographs can help families keep in touch and make them feel closer, according to a family therapy specialist.

"The old cliche 'one picture is worth a thousand words' is, I think, very true," said Dr. Ira A. Glick, Professor of Psychiatry and Director of the Family Therapy program at New York Hospital's Payne Whitney psychiatric clinic.

Today, the most common way for families to communicate is by telephone. A portrait hanging on the wall of a loved one's home can make this contact more personal, he said.

"What this does is put an internal image to a voice that connects up with one's own emotions, and with the content of the conversation in a way that makes things more meaningful."

Requesting a family member's portrait is another way of reaffirming closeness.

"This fills an important need," Glick said. "For our self esteem, we need to know that somebody cares." He said this helps fuel the self-love that everyone needs to have in order to keep going.

Holidays, birthdays and anniversaries are some of the best times to start your own family portrait giving tradition.

Work with your professional photographer to create just the right feeling in your portrait, so that it will be the perfect gift, to be displayed and admired for years to come.

"I think its a clever idea, exchanging photography," Glick said. "It doesn't replace seeing your family, but it may be a useful substitute in this complex world to keep up with them."

Next development in personal stereos
Walkman-type compact record players

The use of personal stereos has skyrocketed in the last several years, zooming past earlier predictions of their popularity.

In 1981, one manufacturer predicted the personal stereo business would hit $2 billion by 1985. Today, that figure already appears too low.

"We think it's more than that," said Fred Wahlstrom, a spokesman for Sony Corp. of America, which from the start of the personal stereo craze has commanded better than a 50 percent share of the market.

"We've sold 9 million units ourselves worldwide," he said.

The company's best-sellers are the Super Walkman models, both just slightly larger than a plastic cassette tape box.

Personal walk-around equipment comes in all shapes, sizes and price ranges, from $10 solar-powered AM receivers — a modern version of the crystal radio — to sophisticated tape recorders for use with home stereo systems.

Consumers have three basic choices when it comes to buying one of these machines.

Those content to listen to someone else's programming can select either an AM, FM, or AM-FM radio. Radio reception can be a problem in metropolitan areas, however, because of skyscraper interference, and in rural areas where FM signals tend to fade.

Cassette tapes can be played either on a tape player or tape recorder, but tape player units are unable to record sound onto a blank cassette. In addition to carrying the stereo unit, owners also must decide how many tapes to bring along, and find a place to store them.

The ultimate in programming flexibility can be found in units combining both a stereo tape recorder and AM-FM radio. In general, the more features, the higher the price.

Sony this month unveiled its most advanced Walkman product to date, the WM-DC6, with a list price of nearly $350. It features auto-reverse, Dolby C noise reduction, quartz-locked circuitry and a built-in stereo microphone.

Many people intrigued by the idea of personal stereos — but turned off by the umbilical nature of a headphone cord — have discovered stereo headphone radios. These units feature a radio receiver and controls built into each earpiece — with no headphone cord to get in the way.

After a few bad experiences, personal stereo users learn to avoid turnstyles, which can snag a cord and rip the phones from their head.

While Sony dominates the field, many other companies also offer personal stereos. The major ones include Aiwa, Akai, General Electric and Panasonic.

But let the buyer beware — there are many budget-priced units on the market with fragile construction and poor sound quality that are no bargain.

The biggest problem facing personal stereo owners is battery consumption. Most tape players and radios use either two, three or four AA-size batteries as a power source, and on the average will run 8-12 hours on a set of batteries — or about 15-25 plays of a long-playing album. Radios will operate longer, of course, because there is no motor to run.

The battery problem is easily solved with the purchase of several rechargeable nickel-cadmium batteries and a battery charger. This setup can pay for itself in a matter of weeks.

Support products for personal stereos range from button-type headphones that fit snugly in the ear without a headband, to external booster speakers and elaborate carrying cases.

"This phenomena is reaching all age groups now," Wahlstrom said. "It's opened up a whole new business for consumer electronics."

Sales of prerecorded tapes have risen along with the popularity of personal stereos. Statistics compiled by CBS Records show the company shipped more cassettes than albums to retailers in 1983 — 53 percent to 47 percent.

What is the real future of personal stereos?.

"Down the road we see people using compact audio discs with Walkman-type products," Wahlstrom said. Compact discs are 5-inch records "played" by laser light units ranging in price from $500-$1,200.

"Compact disc players for the car probably will be introduced in June at the Summer Consumer Electronics Show in Chicago, and ultimately the discs will get smaller for personal stereos," he said.

Tips on instant cameras

By Shelley Candidus
Polaroid Photography Specialist

Instant photography is an exciting medium. Your subject will feel more involved as soon as you produce your first picture, particularly if you give your subject a picture of himself or herself.

Threse tips for the neophyte photograwith a camera that produces finished pictures on the spot also will help other snapshot takers:

—Move in close. The best pictures fill the frame against a simple background. The closer you get, the better.

—things in focus. Even with an expensive camera with a terrific lens, you will get unsatisfactory pictures if the focus is not right, especially at close distances. The beginning photographer may want to consider one of the new inexpensive cameras tocus themselves.

—Your pictures will be much stronger if you take a minute to compose your shots. Move around, consider different viewpoints.

—Keep it simple. Avoid cluttered backgrounds that distract from the censubject of the picture.

—Add light. One of the most common problems is making a good photograph under low-light conditions. Some cameras have an automatic flash. With others, be sure to use a flash where necessary.

—Pick colorful subj Subjects with rich, bright colors will give good results, even on a dull day. Avoid shooting pale colors in weak light. You'll get a lifeless, monotone result. Even a small area of strong color makes a picture more interesting.

—On overcast days or in dull, gray areas, look for isolated colors — a street sign, a person in a colorful outfit. For maximum impact, place the spot of color off-center.

Consumer Report

Watch interest rates when looking for loans

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

Paying off a loan early might be a good idea. But the amount of interest that will be rebated to you may be a bit difficult to figure.

With many consumer loans, the interest to be paid is computed for the entire loan period and added to the amount borrowed. That total is divided by the number of months in the loan. Therefore, your monthly payment is to be made in equal installments.

However, our Consumer Reports financial consultant points out that the interest isn't divided equally over the number of payments you have to make. Instead, you pay more interest at the beginning of the loan, when you have the use of more of the money. Since each monthly payment is the same, the part of the payment that goes toward the principle increases; the part that goes toward the interest decreases.

If you pay off the loan early, the amount of interest for the total term of the loan is too much for the now-shortened term of the loan. Some of it must be rebated.

In order to calculate the amount of interest to be rebated, many lenders use the Rule of 78s — a complex mathematical formula. The Rule of 78s takes the falling interest payments into consideration in figuring the rebate due. You need not know the actual formula in order to understand how the rule is named.

The name of the Rule is derived from the first step in the formula. In that step, the lender adds the sum of the digits for the number of payments scheduled to be made. For example, for a typical one-year loan repaid in 12 monthly installments, the sum of those numbers (12 plus 11 plus 10, etc.) equals 78. Thus, the Rule of 78s.

Understanding the different interest rates on various certificates of deposit also can be confusing. Our financial consultant says it will be less confusing if you concentrate on the number known as the effective yield. It takes into account differences in the way interest is compounded — differences that can be significant, especially for CDs in higher denominations.

For instance, a 9 percent interest rate that isn't compounded — commonly referred to as simple interest — yields only 9 percent. That amounts to $90 in annual interest earned for a $1,000, one-year CD.

A 9 percent interest rate compounded daily has an effective annual yield of 9.42 percent, or $94.20 in interest earned on that same $1,000 CD. That extra $4.20 becomes $42 in additional interest after one year if the CD is in the amount of $10,000.

According to the Bank Rate Monitor — an industry newsletter that follows rates paid by banks and thrifts — more and more institutions are beginning to pay simple interest rates with no compounding. So, the financial consultant says it's wise to look for the effective yield to make sure you'll get the benefit of compounding.

Appliance Clinic

When things go wrong

By UPI-Popular Mechanics

Q. I have a General Electric dryer, model No. DDCO580NLLWH, serial No. DA233774G. It doesn't exude any vapor or steam and theems to be a lot of lint in the basket after each load. We've removed the pipe from the dryer to the outside two times and vacuumed it, but the problem remains. Hope you can help.

A. Sounds as if your problem is in the area of the blower wheel. Lint may have accumulated on it, or possibly a sock or washcloth fell down into the blower wheel through the lint trap and may cause restricted airflow. To check the blower wheel, first disconnect the power to the dryer, then remove the front panel. To do this, open the front door, then look up under the upper lip. Remove the four Phillips-head screws you'll find there. This will allow the dryer top to be raised.

Now, while still in front of the dryer, reach down to the bottom left and right of the dryer front. Loosen the two 5-16-inch screws on the toeboard. Then remove the two screws at the top left and right corners on the inside of the dryer. These screws hold the front to the cabinet. Close the door and lift the front up and off and set it to the side.

Now the blower wheel is exposed on the lower left-hand corner. Remove any lint or blockage. Use a vacuum to clean out the wheel and duct work inside the cabinet front which goes from the lint filter to the blower inlet. Reassemble the dryer.

Q. I own a Montgomery Ward Signature electric range, model No. 4366, serial No. 88120772. When the oven is set for 325 degrees or 350 degrees F, the temperature in the oven goes to nearly 500 degrees F. The thermostat has been replaced four times. After each installation the serviceman checked the operation and it worked fine, but the problem always returns at a later date. What, besides a faulty thermostat could be causing this problem?

A. Perhaps the wrong replacement thermostat was installed. We contacted Montgomery Ward Plaza, Customer Service, Div. 4N, Chicago, Ill. 60671. Send them the name and address of the appliance service company that installed the replacement, and the part numbers of those thermostats if you can. They'll handle your problem from there.

Q. I have a problem with my Sears refrigerator, model No. T-14-G-1, serial No. 26113374. The refrigerator itself keeps cool enough, but the freezer won't freeze. The cold control is on high and the manually operated defrost cycling clock works fine. Any suggestions?

A. It sounds like your problem is a restriction of the airflow between the refrigerator and the freezer sections, caused by ice build-up on the evaporator. This could be caused by a defective defrost bimetal or defrost heater, or possibly by a defrost timer not functiohing properly. I suggest you have a service technician inspect the unit and determine which part or parts you need.

Q. I am going to be overseas for three years and plan to put my washer, dryer, stove and refrigerator into storage. How should they be prepared?

A. Ideally, appliances should be stored in a cool dry place to prevent the possibility of rust. And the appliances should be covered with a blanket or dropcloth to keep dust off. Do not store them in areas where children will have easy access. Here are some specifics:

Washer — Unplug the wahser and remove the rear access service cover. Disconnect the drain hoses at the pump. If the machine is equipped with a self cleaning filter, remove the drain hoses from it also. Allow all water to drain from the pump, hoses and tub. Disconnect the water fill hoses.

Dryer (gas or electric) — Use a vacuum cleaner to remove any lint that may have accumulated in the filter or the exhaust duct in the dryer. When disconnecting the gas supply from a gas dryer, cap the gas line tubing that services the dryer with a black iron pipe cap.

Range (gas or electric) — Clean it thoroughly. If you have a self-cleaning range, position the door locking mechanism in the bake (open) position. Cap the gas line to the range with a black iron pipe cap.

Refrigerator — Clean the interior with a solution of baking soda and water. Clean the water collection pan underneath the refrigerator if there is one. Spray the door gaskets with silicone lubricant. Keep in mind that the doors should be left ajar a few inches. Even though most modern refrigerators close by magnetic seal, which can be pushed open easily from within, an additional safety measure is wise. Prop the door open with a piece of styrene foam, then tie a rope around the door so the foam cannot be dislodged or the door opened easily.

Legislative briefs

Foster care bill awaits approval

Placed on the Governor's desk to await signing into law is a bill given final approval by the legislature which would mandate a full review of all foster care placements made through the Department of Social Services. Sponsored by Sen. Jack H. Backman (D. Brookline-Newton), the bill would create a review unit to conduct case reviews of children in foster care at least once every six months.

Arts in Park held as urban model

Innovative ideas in Newton's City Livability Award entry, the Arts in the Park program, will be included in the National Clearinghouse on the Arts as a model for other cities to follow.

The Clearinghouse is part of the U.S Conference of Mayors Livability Awards Program, which salutes cities whose creative use of urban arts improves the economic vitality of their communities.

Citing Mayor Theodore D. Mann's "contagious enthusiasm for the arts," the judges praised his efforts to promote the municipal program of the Arts in the Parks, which now involves more than 20,000 participants and employs more than 200 artists annually.

Despite a limited budget, the judges noted, the programs bring the arts to all people in the community through free concerts, enrichment classes, musical productions, special projects and festivals.

Hog-tying allegations confirmed

Allegations that prisoners at Walpole State Prison were being "hog-tied," presented in a prisoner's letter to Sen. Jack H. Backman (D. Brookline-Newton), were confirmed by a recently unannounced visit to the prison by Backman and a staff aide, Barry Phillips.

"We saw gouges on wrists and ankles on some prisoners, caused by the cuffs and shackles used in hog-tying. We also saw deep red patches over the arms, shoulders, backs and leges and ulcerated gas burns," stated Sen. Backman. In response, the senator said he has sent a second letter to Gov. Michael Dukakis, listing his observations and urging that the abuses be ended.

"Deputy Superintendent Mike Corsini, who was present when the prisoners made some of their statements to us, did not deny that hog-tying was a practice in the segregation block," Sen. Backman said. "I have called for a federal and state investigation."

"It should be clearly understood that the Constitution and Bill of Rights do not stop at the prison gates. Human rights must also be observed by our prison administrators," said Sen. Backman.

"I have called upon Governor Dukakis, Human Services Secretary Phillip Johnston, and Correction Commissioner Michael V. Fair to immediately end these abusive practices," he added. Backman chairs the Human Services Committee, which oversees legislation governing prisons.

Prisoners are "hog-tied" by shackling the wrists behind the back and bending the legs backward so that the ankles are shackled on the wrists.

In total, the senator and his aide found more than 20 prisoners who had been subject to shackling or observed it.

Backman also stated that he was informed by the deputy superintendent of Walpole that all officers and personnel of the prison are under a gag order themselves, and cannot talk to any state legislators.

Revenue recovering bill pending

Legislation sponsored by Rep. David B. Cohen (D.-Newton) that could recover up to $40 million in revenue lost due to counterfeiting of cigarette excise tax stamps, has passed the House and received initial approval in the Senate. The bill would mandate the use of decals as proof of cigarette excise tax payment instead of the widely used and easily circumvented Pitney-Bowes system of metered impression.

Renovation funds set for 3 receiver schools

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The aldermanic Finance Committee has given its unanimous go-ahead for renovations in three city receiver schools needed to make space for additional students coming from the recently closed Hyde and Oak Hill elementary schools.

FinCom Monday night approved close to $80,000 of funding for the expected construction costs at the Angier, Mason-Rice and Zervas schools. The School Committee asked for the money at its June 11 meeting, the aldermanic Public Facilities Committee okayed it two weeks ago and the request now awaits only the approval of the full Board of Aldermen on July 9.

Roy Cornelius, director of support services for the school department, presented the item to FinCom explaining the work was needed due to the recent consolidation decisions and estimating construction costs at $79,513.

At the Angier School, $12,265 worth of renovations will be undertaken mostly by Building Department craftsmen and workers on existing service contracts.

The Angier project, which is expected to be completed by July 27, will see a girls' lavatory converted into a teachers' room, a music room converted into a classroom and another classroom created by the demolition of a wall that separates a teachers' room and nurses' room. Construction at the school is scheduled to begin July 10.

At the Mason-Rice School, construction is expected to start July 16 and be completed by Aug. 24. About $10,918 of work will be done there, with a storage room slated for conversion into a small group instructional area and improvements expected in the heating and lighting of the auditorium's stage.

The renovation project at the Zervas School, totalling $56,330, is not expected to be fully completed until Christmas vacation or perhaps the February break due to the time needed for ordering and installing a large folding wall to divide the school's kindergarten room.

A storage room at Zervas is also scheduled to converted into a new art room, but not in time for its September opening. Because of a late arriving ventilation unit, work on the room, which will also receive an additional door opening into the corridor, will not be totally completed until Sept. 28.

Lacy Estate sold

By Eric Fehrnstrom
Staff Writer

One of the largest remaining private estates in the city has been sold for development — a 30-acre tract of open space in the midst of an area undergoing intense development pressures.

Jack Antaramian, local developer and owner of the Antaramian Construction Co., announced last week an agreement to purchase the Lacy Estate in Newton Centre for in excess of $2.5 million. The land, located at 261 Nahanton St., is already undergoing architectural property studies, Antaramian said.

Described by city planners as a "substantial piece of open space," the property is owned by John Lacy and three siblings who reside out-of-state. Lacy would not comment on any aspect of the sale.

The property and surroundings are zoned for single-family homes with a minimum lot size of 25,000-square feet. Any different type of development would require a zone change and special permit from the Board of Aldermen.

According to city planning department figures, the land could be subdivided into approximately 40 single-family lots.

The sale of the land and any potential development at the site raises "a number of concerns," according to Alderman Cynthia Creem, chairman of the Land Use Committee and ward representative from the area.

"There's been a lot of development in that area, especially along Nahanton Street and Dedham Street," she said. "There's been quite a bit of development for that neighborhood to face. I also feel (Antaramian) has in the past been a responsible developer ... so we'll just have to wait and see what happens."

Teenager needs home

Roger is a tall, lanky teenager who appears much older than his 14 years. He is in the 10th grade at Newton South High School in the Turn-Around Program.

Presently, Roger holds two part-time jobs and finds this very satisfying. During his spare time he writes poetry and plays the guitar.

Roger likes younger children and adults and is a polite and friendly person. Over the years there have been unresolved issues in the family which made it very difficult for Roger to remain at home. However, the goal is for Roger to return home to his family within six months.

The most desirable type of foster family for this teen is a two-parent family, or single-male parent, who can provide an environment conducive to Roger's growth.

The family that Roger needs should live in Newton because of his school program.

Those interested in knowing more about Roger should call Priscilla Dillon, Newton Area Homefinder at 965-2607.

Police log

Girl grabbed indecently

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — A Newton girl reported Monday that a man grabbed her in an indecent manner while she was about to enter the Newton Highlands MBTA station last Monday afternoon.

The girl said she was walking toward the station at 4:30 p.m. when she noticed she was being followed by a white male aged about 25, tall and black hair and sporting a tatoo on his left bicep.

The man asked her for directions, the girl said, and a short while later he approached her again and grabbed her breast. The victim said she jabbed him in the ribs and he left the scene.

Man pleads guilty to hit and run

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — A Cottage Street man turned himself into police last Monday afternoon and admitted he was responsible for a hit-and-run accident that sent a bicyclist to the Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

Terrance J. Macallion, 21, of 50 Cottage St., was cited for driving to endanger and leaving the scene of an accident after causing personal injury.

The bicyclist, Alison Gross of 48 Maplewood Ave., was listed in good condition in the hospital last Tuesday.

Police said that a 1974 Ford pick-up truck later identified as belonging to Macallion struck Gross at the intersection of Centre Street and Miller Road Sunday evening. Macallion told police he did not stop because he was "scared."

Conviction on arson charges

NEWTONVILLE — A 19-year-old Newton man recently convicted on charges of arson and breaking and entering into the Newtonville Public Library Wednesday was ordered to serve 45 days of a 20-year term at Concord State Prison.

Superior Court Judge Edith Fine suspended the remainder of the sentence and ordered defendant David Regan, 673 Centre St., Newton, to pay restitution to the probation department in the amount of $10 per week and to serve 1000 hours of community service over a period of four years probation.

According to Assistant District Attorney Adrienne Lynch, the fire which occurred May 14, 1983 caused an estimated $300,000 damages to the library and to library books at the facility located at 345 Walnut St.

2 flashing incidents reported

NEWTON — Two incidents of indecent exposure were reported to police over the weekend, records show.

A woman walking her dog early Friday morning at about 7 a.m. reported a white male sitting in a grey-green car indecently exposed himself in front of 540 Commonwealth Ave. The man was described to police as in his twenties, with medium length dark hair and wearing a t-shirt and shorts.

In a separate incident later in the day, a woman crossing a footbridge at Cold Springs Park at about 2 p.m. Friday reported a white male yelled for her attention before removing his pants. She described him as a white male with a pockmarked face, about 30 years old, 5' 6", average build, medium length brown hair and wearing a blue t-shirt and blue pants.

TV, video recording device stolen

NEWTON CENTRE — A color television and video recording device were reported stolen Friday from a Centre Street residence, records show.

Police said the basement door of the home was kicked-in sometime between the hours of 7 p.m. and 11 p.m. Also stolen were a camera and Sony Walkman radio, police said.

'No plea' after median hop

NEWTON — A 49-year-old Medford man entered no plea at his arraignment yesterday in Newton District Court for driving under the influence when he jumped a median strip Saturday night on Commonwealth Ave., flattening all four tires on his 1979 Chevrolet.

Miguel A. Gonzalez, of 98 Dudley St., Medford, was released on personal recognizance by Judge Monte Basbas and will appear for a pre-trial conference on July 19.

Gonzalez was arrested Saturday night at about 9:30 p.m. for driving under the influence.

Disregard of signs prompts tow zone

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NEWTON — Residents who park along a section of Homer Street to use the Newton Centre Playground may find their cars towed away if aldermen approve a recent Traffic Commission suggestion.

The eight-member commission's unanimous decision to recommend the "No Parking Between Signs" zone in front of the field's chained-off emergency access driveway be made a "No Parking Tow Zone" leaves some residents of the area and users of the field with mixed feelings.

Habitual disregard for the parking ban and an incident earlier this month in which ambulances could not get onto the field to attend to an injured resident prompted the police department's traffic division to propose the tow zone, Capt. John Bartinelli told commission members.

"I guess people don't mind getting ticketed, because they keep parking there," he added.

The curving stretch of Homer Street near the field is a notorious bottle-neck during weekday evenings in April, May, June and early July when Newton East Little League games are held at the city's recreation complex near Newton Centre.

While residents and game spectators can legally park at the nearby Mason-Rice School and along most of the Homer Street berm, the 20-yard long stretch between the "No Parking" signs, directly in front of the access driveway for emergency vehicles almost always serves as the home for seven cars that blocking the driveway and create only enough room for a single lane of vehicles to travel along the two-way artery.

One middle-aged Homer Street resident who lives just a few houses down from the driveway said she doesn't mind cars being parked in front of her home, but called the blocked driveway "a very dangerous situation."

"I think it's a fine idea (creating a tow zone), but I think they have to distinguish it better by marking the curb with yellow lines. Visitors can't see the "No Parking" signs because they're hidden by the trees," she said late last week.

A 60-year-old West Newton man, who said he has lived in the city "a very long time" and travels to the field to see his son play ball, acknowledged that cars blocking the emergency driveway and narrowing the street "is a problem," but said city traffic officials would have a "better case for being strict" if they created ample parking for the users of the field.

"What is really needed is some kind of parking area. I don't think (a tow zone) is fair unless they utilize some space as a place to park," he said noting that the field is one of the most heavily used in the city.

A 40-year-old West Newton woman, who described herself as "a baseball mother," agreed the driveway area should be kept open, but was not sure the creation of tow zone would change residents' habits.

"When I come by here, it's hard to get by. The cars line both sides of the street and there's traffic going both ways on a blind curve. It has a lot of potential for a serious accident. I travel all over the city to all the fields, I know how it is," she said.

She noted that at the Albermarle Field, another large recreational complex used mostly by West Newton and Nonantum residents, the emergency access driveway to the pool area is always open and free of parked cars.

"Sometimes you're just dealing with a different kind of people," she said glancing at the Homer Street driveway. "I don't think they should park there, but where there's a will, there's a way."

The Traffic Commission's ruling on the playground will be debated by the aldermanic Public Safety and Transportation Committee during July. If the committee rules favorably, the final step toward creating the tow zone will be in the hands of the Board of Aldermen. City recreation department officials say Little League games at the field will probably be over for this year before a decision on the stricter parking ban is made.

Arts grant deadline Sept. 24

The Newton Arts Lottery Council has announced that Mass. Lottery grant applications are now available through the office at the Newton Parks and Recreation Department for the next funding cycle. The deadline for applications is Sept. 24.

Both individual artists and arts organizations are eligible to apply for grants, which are funded twice yearly by the Newton Arts Lottery Council. According to the guidelines established by the Newton Arts Lottery Council, applications that are of a creative and innovative nature from individual artists and organizations are most welcomed.

Applications can be secured in person or will be mailed upon receipt of a self-addressed stamped (37¢) legal-sized envelope sent to the Newton Arts Lottery Council, 70 Crescent St., Newton, 02166.

The Massachusetts Arts Lottery, funded through Megabucks, the disperses monies twice yearly to cities and towns throughout the Commonwealth. Newton received approximately $10,000 for each funding cycle to be distributed by the Newton Arts Lottery Council. The Newton Arts Lottery Council now has its own set of guidelines for the applications process which will be distributed with the applications. Application deadline is Sept. 24. Applications will be reviewed at a public meeting at City Hall, Oct. 23.

She keeps the city running

This is the first in an occasional series on the women who, through their drive and diligence, keep the Garden City growing.

By Suzanne M. Dulude, Asst. News Editor

In Grace Lennon's office the clock is an hour slow, the calendar is a month behind, the floor is littered with three pairs of shoes and a pair of sneakers and the coffee pot is spotless, because, "It's easier to buy a cup downstairs" than to clean the pot.

From these somewhat discombobulated surroundings, surprisingly enough, comes the limitless energy and unflagging attention to detail that keeps the City of Newton operating smoothly.

As Assistant City Clerk, Lennon is responsible for the day-to-day operation of the office that some consider to be the heart, if not the head, of municipal government. Besides being responsible for issuing a host of different licenses and permits, the office keeps the city's vital statistics up-to-date, directs the traffic of interdepartmental business and fully documents the every move of the state's largest municipal legislative body, the Board of Aldermen.

It has been said that behind every great man there is a great woman. Some might think that about Lennon and her boss, City Clerk Edward English. "Too many women are ...not this year...

No fireworks for Nonantum

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Nonantum residents and citizens throughout the city who look forward to the fireworks that traditionally cap off the annual Italian festival at Our Lady's Church can forget the display planned for this Sunday night.

Fire Chief Edward B. Reilly, Jr., citing "public safety issues," said Monday he will not issue the permit necessary for a Nonantum religious organization's upcoming fireworks display.

His apparent failure to put the reasons for his decision in writing, however, may constitute a violation of state fire regulations.

Reilly made known his steadfast refusal to issue the permit for the seven-minute, $1,800 pyrotechnic display, sponsored by the Saint Mary of Carmen Society, in a Friday meeting with

Tax exemption policy criticized

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NEWTON — A movement is underway to reverse a recent Board of Assessors policy change significantly limiting the distribution of hardship exemptions for elderly, infirmed and poor taxpayers.

While that action is taking place in the city's aldermanic chambers, citizen taxpayer activists and aldermen are also considering asking the state legislature to allow the city to create definitive guidelines for determining hardship under a currently ambiguous clause of state tax codes.

If they are succesful in receiving home rule authority to rewrite one of the only statutory tax exemptions in the Commonwealth, the city could assume a state-wide leadership role on the issue.

At the center of concern is "Clause 18," an almost purely interpretative state tax regulation that allows city assessors to exempt all or a portion of due taxes for a taxpayer who "by reason of age, infirmity and poverty cannot fully contribute to the public charges."

The city's Board of Assessors unanimously implemented a new policy recently that directs taxpayers who find themselves unable to pay their full tax bill but have adequate assets to defer their taxes under Clause 41A of state tax law, thereby discouraging Clause 18 tax exemptions. Assessors say the reversal is intended to bring more tax revenue into the city and to reduce the tax burden of a majority of the city's residents.

However, critics of Clause 18's current wording say the literal intention of the regulation is that age, infirmity and poverty all form the basis for deciding exemptions, but state and local interpreta-

Supreme Court backs local Jaycees

By Frank DeBenedetto, Correspondent

NEWTON — Although spokesmen of the national Jaycees felt last week's U.S. Supreme court ruling, which requires that they admit women as full-fledged members, was a defeat, representatives of the local chapter consider it a victory.

"The closer these decisions move to allow women to participate as full members is a move in our favor," said Sharon Rae Yarkoni, new president of the Newton Jaycees and the first female president the group has had in it 35-year history.

Recently, at the Jaycees annual convention, held in Atlanta, Georgia, both Yarkoni and Jean Hudson, president of the Massachusetts Jaycees, were denied the same privleges accorded male members. They were only allowed to participate as associate members.

Jeff Levine, past president of the Newton Jaycees and the chapter's membership director feels the decision can only help the Jaycees.

"It is definitely going to change membership in the U.S. Jaycees, since many people simply won't join the group because they feel we discriminate," he said.

He also felt that because the Massachusetts Jaycees are required by law to admit women, they are, at times, discriminated against by the national organization.

NONANTUM — Pure outrage and disgust greeted Fire Chief Edward B. Reilly's decision to deny the permit necessary for a Nonantum religious organzation's traditional fireworks display, as aldermen and Nonantum community leaders Monday night slammed both the chief and Mayor Theodore D. Mann for their handling of the controversy.

The Board of Aldermen signalled its overwhelming dissatisfaction by unanimously passing a resolution "deploring" the permit decision and stating its "expectation" that the fireworks will be held without any problems next July when the St. Mary of Carmen Society, which sponsors the annual pyrotechnic show in conjunction with a three-day festival honoring its namesake saint, celebrates its 50th anniversary.

Meanwhile, the aldermanic Public Safety and Transportation Committee made known its intention to pursue the matter by requesting Reilly and his fire prevention colleagues to appear before aldermen on August 6 with a written explanation of the decision.

A possible further deterioration of relations between aldermen and the fire chief could be in the offing, as Alderman Richard Bullwinkle responded to Reilly's permit denial by saying, "Maybe we'll think the same thing when his budget matters come before us."

Reilly's decision, which he claims is based on "public safety issues," focussed on state regulations calling for 200 feet of clearance during a fireworks display and alleged permit violations which occurred during last year's show, is also expected to send shockwaves throughout the tightly-knit and highly ethnic Nonantum community.

Physicians disagree; officer dismissed

By Eric Fehrnstrom
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Officer Thomas Frost, a 14-year veteran and member of the police union executive board, has been dismissed for allegedly refusing to remove himself from injured-on-duty status and return to work on a full-time basis.

Frost was served Friday with a notice of job abandonment — a technical provision in the civil service code that enables an employer to dismiss a worker for unexplained absences from work.

Frost, a recording secretary for the Newton Police Association, has requested a hearing before city officials on the precise nature of the violation and to determine whether he should be restored to his position.

"It's not a very pleasant thing to have to terminate anybody," said Police Chief William Quinn. "This is strictly a medical matter and not a disciplinary one."

Quinn said Frost was originally injured in February, 1982 and, since that time, has returned to work on only an occasional basis — despite being certified by the city physician as capable of performing full duty.

Frost's personal physician has informed him he is suffering from a herniated disc and cannot perform the full duties of a police officer, according to Lynda Glenn, president of the union.

"The notice he received says he has separated himself from his duties," Glenn said. "(But) he has been in contact with the department almost on a daily basis."

She said Quinn was fully apprised of his medical condition and added the union will take "whatever action" considered necessary in support of Frost.

"I think we have a problem here when his doctor says he has a herniated disc and the city physician says there is no problem," she added. "They must both be looking at the same X-ray, so where's the problem."

In other action:

- The city and union have filed a joint statement of fact in Middlesex Superior Court, where the union has filed suit asking for an interpretation of the state statute governing injured-on-duty leave, particulary with regard to limited duty.

Real 'Grace' under pressure

carrying men these days," said the assistant city clerk. "But that's not the case with Ed and I. I work well with him."

Although Lennon has been working at Newton City Hall for 16 years, the piles of papers on her desk give the impression she has been there for decades longer. Her "boys," Philip and Shawn, overlook her desk from a collage of pictures on the wall, as the assistant city clerk puts her foot on a stool to keep the torn ligaments in her knee from swelling.

Lennon confesses she is reluctant to see the chiropractor about the two-week-old injury: "I hope he doesn't hope to get me off my feet. I can't right now."

And so goes the tale of Grace Lennon.

"I'm not a 'sit-stiller'," said the 55-year old who feels she is "forever 35". "I exhaust myself. I believe in it ... When you get your pay check, make sure you earned it. That carries into everything you do."

This fervor has carried into other aspects of Lennon's life. After a year and a half as a justice of the peace, Lennon said, "I adore it. Everyone is so happy." She prides herself on trying to get to know the couples she weds. The Boston native recalled a particulary interesting ceremony last week. She explained to the couple and the bride's 12-year-old daughter that the wedding was "not the beginning of a marriage, but the beginning of a family." It was when the couple exchanged rings with each other and presented the child with a ring that Lennon cried — the first time she had ever cried while officiating a ceremony.

The youngest of seven children, Lennon said that one of her great strengths as a justice is that she is a woman. "Couples call me because I am a woman. I think it is absolutely fantastic that women are being recognized.

"I love being a woman. I love dressing up and being complimented." But as the principal clerk to the Board of Alderman, Lennon also said, "I'm one of the guys ... but I don't want to do everything a man does."

Widowed with two young children at the age of 30, Lennon began to work to support her family. She explained, half regrettingly, that times were tough for her two and four-year-old, but beamed that her sons, also her "best friends," are "the kind of people they are today because of it."

How would her "super beautiful" sons describe her? "They would say the sun rises and sets on me. They are very proud of me," — a feeling that is obviously reciprocated.

For years after her first husband, merchant seaman Philip McCole, died, Lennon ran a secretarial service out of her home. "The kids needed care, love and tenderness" — something she felt she couldn't give them if she were not at home.

"Now when we sit on the porch and talk about it, we laugh. I never thought we'd make it," the Framingham resident said.

Eventually, Lennon came to work for the City of Newton, initially as secretary to the city clerk, then in the Purchasing Department and, finally, back to the city clerk's office. Her relationship with City Clerk English is one she terms "brother and sister."

"I've learned a lot from Ed. Everything he was, I've become. He was a justice of the peace, now I'm a justice of the peace. He was a commissioner to qualify public officers, now I am. I'm walking in his footsteps."

Lennon recalls the days when it was the two of them in the clerk's office, but those days are gone. "Issues now are more complex and there is more work to do." When asked to explain an average Wednesday, she replied, "Nothing is average. Every day here is unique. Wednesdays could be normal if the aldermen would sleep all day, but with 24 minds going all the time ... " The anxiety in city hall is "healthy stress," according to Lennon.

"How does my husband feel about all this?" she asked herself aloud. "He is the most patient man in the world." Now married to retired Newton city printer Charles Lennon, a man 16 years her senior, she said they spend weekends "puttering around" together. "We go shopping and I buy a few more things I didn't need."

Although Lennon doesn't feel that she is "carrying" boss English, her role at home is a somewhat more dominant one. "If I didn't come home and make dinner, my husband would starve to death," she commented.

Lennon facetiously apologized for not having a long resume or college career to speak of, "Living life is enough experience."

local Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci, the group's leaders and concerned aldermen. The show, which is usually held in the parking lot of Our Lady Help of Christians Church on Adams Street, was planned as a finale to the society's 49th annual three-day festival in honor of the saint.

The reasons for his decision, which has enraged the tightly-knit Nonantum community and the Board of Aldermen, have not been put into writing and given to those requesting the permit, an omission that appears to be in direct violation of state law.

Under Chapter 2.04, Section 6, of the Code of Massachusetts Regulations regarding fire prevention as written by the Office of the State Fire Marshall, once a municipal fire commissioner has investigated and inspected all the aspects pertaining to a firework permit request he must then inform both the state fire marshall's office and the local applicant of his decision in writing.

"Upon completion of such an investigation and inspection, but not later than five days after receipt of such application, the head of the fire department must transmit one copy (of the application) to the Marshall and one copy to the applicant with his endorsement thereon in compliance with the provisions of the law, or his reason or reasons for withholding such endorsement," according to the regulation.

While the state fire marshall's office could not be reached for comment, the president of the Saint Mary of Carmen Society, Anthony Gentile, a licensed pyrotechnic expert who was going to arrange the group's fireworks, said Monday night he has not received any written correspondence outlining Reilly's reasons for denying the permit.

Reilly, who is on vacation, said Monday night his decision was not based on political or ethnic considerations, but was made because Gentile "exceeded the permit" he obtained for last year's festival by shooting off aerial rockets, an incident which he termed "a misunderstanding between Mr. Gentile and myself."

The permit, which only Reilly has the authority to issue, allowed a standing ground display of the pinwheel variety, he added.

"I told him after last year's display that he would never get another permit in Newton - not under the conditions that existed down there for the last two years," Reilly said.

He also said the parking lot at the Our Lady's school and church complex was not big enough for the display, calling the Hawthorne/Adams Street confluence near the church "one of the most congested areas of the city." State law prohibits fireworks from being shot off within "200 feet from the nearest permanent building or public highway..."

The 43-year-old Gentile, a Lincoln Road who recently dazzled Waltham residents with a spectacular 30-minute display in honor of the city's centennial, has been arranging fireworks for municipal and group events for the last 20 years and estimates he has given over 600 shows without a serious incident.

During last year's Nonantum show, which traditionally occurs as the statue of the Madonna is carried back to the church from a temporary chapel erected at Hawthorne Park, where the festival is held, Gentile carried $300,000 of insurance in case of any mishap.

Village vitality concerns aldermen

By Frank Mulligan
Correspondent

NEWTON — Aldermen have issued an opinion stating their belief that neighborhood villages are important to the city as a whole and affirming the Hyde Elementary School's importance to the character of Newton Highlands.

After amending the proposal twice, the Board of Aldermen approved by a 17-4 vote Monday night a resolution expressing their concern with the state of villages here and the future use of the recently closed Hyde School. Aldermen Wendell R. Bauckman, James P. Regan, Edward L. Richmond and Robert L. Tennant voted against the resolution.

The proposal, submitted by Newton Highlands Aldermen Rodney Barker, Michael A. Malec and George E. Mansfield, requested the board's "affirmation of the importance of the Neighborhood Village Concept to the vitality of the City of Newton and that the Hyde Elementary School is of great importance to the continuing vitality" of Newton Highlands.

It had first been debated on the floor of the board on the eve of the June 20 referendum regarding the fate of the Hyde, but discussion was terminated by Alderman Robert L. Shuman, who felt the resolution issue was too closely tied with the city-wide vote. Almost 10,000 residents eventually went to the polls and decided to close the school by a 3-2 margin.

The most significant change in the wording of the original proposal was passed by an 18-3 vote and stated, "This board affirms that, when public facilities are closed or constructed, consideration should be given to the impact of such actions on affected neighborhoods."

It also expressed the board's concern over "the absence of long-range planning (within the school department and School Committee) for dealing with changing population structures."

After the resolution's passage, Susan Mirsky, president of the Newton Highlands Neighborhood Area Council (NHNAC), said, "I think its an important resolution and that it goes beyond being simply a 'motherhood' issue. There are issues of development that do threaten our villages."

In a letter to aldermen regarding the public hearing, Mirsky criticized the attitude of the citizen's action group that supported keeping the Hyde closed: "Over 50 people identified themselves to us in advance as concerned citizens who wanted to address changes in their own neighborhoods and villages.

"However, another group of people opposing the Hyde School referendum, calling themselves CSNS (Coalition to Save Newton Schools), decided to use the hearing as a forum for criticizing the council's support of Hyde School and airing their views on the school closing issue," she added.

A founding member of the 10-year-old NHNAC, Bobbi Croce, said after the resolution passed, "When the School Committee wants to close a school, the aldermen don't want to step in. And the School Committee doesn't want to deal with neighborhood impact issues. The passage of the resolution gives the aldermen the opportunity to deal with neighborhood impact issues."

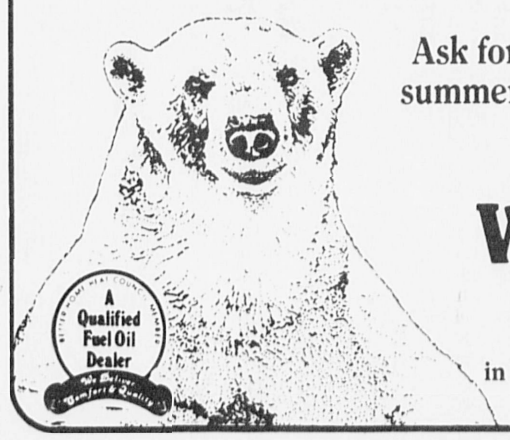

Some debate on the proposal occurred during a suggestion to amend part of its wording from "deploring the loss of the opportunity for an innovative mixed use of the Hyde School building" to include the phrase "previously formulated innovative mixed use ..." referring to the board's unanimous endorsement of a mixed use plan for the school last year.

Alderman Richmond argued that, even with the amendment, the clause was stating policy prematurely.

"That says to the new committee (the Real Property Reuse Committee recently formed to decide the fate of all surplus buildings) that you must have innovative mixed use - not all business" or other single subject or subject-intensive use, he said.

The tantalizing beat of calypso music wafted through the evening air of Newton Centre Sunday as "Real Steel," a steel drum ensemble from Trinidad, titillated a large crowd on the green. The group played traditional music from their homeland as well as steel drum adaptations of "Beat It," "Summertime," and other popular tunes. The event was sponsored by Arts in the Parks, and the Recreation Department with a grant from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities. Shown above, clockwise from the top left: "Real Steel" band members conjure up the spirit of their homeland; the complete group spread out before an appreciative crowd on the green; a father teaching his baby of the joys of Calypso music; adults and children alike prodded into motion by the driving rhythmns; Peggy McKenna, Alphonse the Dog and Carol Weyland soaking up the spirit of the occasion; and (center) a close-up of the instruments made out of steel oil drums.

Presitigious Truman Scholarship

Local student earns honors

By Charlotte Meryman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Andrew Lopatin's interests may surprise a lot of people, but they have served him well: he has just earned one of the prestigious Truman Scholarships.

An Orthodox Jew who lived in Israel for four years and spent a year studying at a rabbinical college, Lopatin is now at Boston University double-majoring in International Relations and Islamic Studies. The 19-year-old junior says he feels it is important to understand the Moslem culture and hopes to eventually work on peace relations in the Middle East.

Lopatin, who lives with his parents in Newton Centre, was one of four Massachusetts residents and 100 students nationwide selected by the Harry S. Truman Foundation.

The award, which amounts to $20,000 over four years, is intended to provide education leading to a career in public service. The foundation was established by Congress in 1975 in honor of the late president.

In order to qualify, students must maintain a 3.8 grade average or better out of a possible 4.0. Colleges and universities screen and select the sophomores, who are then re-screened and interviewed by members of the foundation. At least one student is chosen from each state.

Lopatin believes that among the deep-rooted political, religious and cultural differences between the Muslim and Jewish people, lie some common bonds. And he hopes that his own strong knowledge of the two sides may help to bring about some resolution of the now-raging conflict.

"Despite their religious differences, Islam and Judaism have been very close in the past," the aspiring diplomat said. "I felt if I could understand the Islamic point of view, I could contribute to the (peace) process."

When interviewers from the Truman Foundation asked him what position he would like to hold, if he could have any in the world, Lopatin answered that ideally he would want to be president because "you can do so much." But, practically, he told them, "the only thing I could strive for is Secretary of State."

Lopatin says he has been interested in politics since elementary school and got into Islamic studies through the study of Arabic, which he took mainly because of its linguistic relation to Hebrew. When he was in elementary school, his family moved to Israel and he attended school in Jerusalem for third through sixth grade.

After attending the Maimonides School in Brookline from seventh through eleventh grades, Lopatin spent a year at Brisk Rabbinical College in Chicago. He has been at B.U., on a Trustees Scholarship, for two years.

Aside from his parents, Lopatin says his most important role model has been Merlin Swartz, an associate professor of religion at B.U.

"He's had a big impact on trying to broaden my horizons and (help me) to see more objectively," Lopatin explained.

Riverside plans will predict future

Those residents who are wondering just what direction future development of Newton's limited space will take should keep an eye on the progress of development planned for the MBTA property at Riverside.

Whatever goes up on that site can be taken as an indication of which course the city will steer between a growing concern for the preservation of the city's residential quality and a fiscal crunch that makes commercial development look better and better every year.

Mayor Mann has reassured residents of Auburndale and Lower Falls, who will be forced to live with whatever is created at Riverside, that their neighborhood concerns will be taken into account in any plans for the site. Spokespersons for those neighborhoods are taking those reassurances with a grain of salt, which has led to the creation of a "watchdog" committee to monitor the situation.

But the "bottom line," as they say, threatens to drown out the concerns voiced by residents. Maximum financial return is the MBTA's number one priority. The T has been good enough to admit that, out front. The neighbors should be thankful for that. It's to their advantage to know exactly what they are up against at the outset.

The only real protection for residents lies in the city's zoning laws, and they do not apply to any development considered to be directly related to transportation. What remains to be seen — and what the neighborhood watchdogs should concentrate on — is how much of the Riverside site is designated as transportation-related and, therefore, not subject to our zoning regulations.

In the outcome of those maneuvers can be found a thumbnail sketch of future development all over the city.

All U.S getting 21 drinking law

Pressure for states to get in line on a 21-year age minimum drinking age has been applied by the U.S. Senate. In a bill tied to highway funding, it decreed states not in conformance would be denied highway construction funds.

Since the House overwhelmingly approved a similar bill, it appears this would be the federal policy. This kind of backdoor approach is less than desirable. It infringes on the rights of individual states to determine what the conduct of its citizens should be in matters of public morality or conduct. It runs counter to a long-respected attitude in the Congress in such areas.

There is a further provision in the Senate bill offering an incentive in the way of additional highway funds for states adopting automatic penalties for drunken drivers.

Again, Big brother in Washington is sticking his nose in statehouse jurisdiction in a way which is highly questionable.

Not that there isn't a lot of justification for a 21-year minimum. It is most unfortunate that youths who were given freedom from restraint when many states okayed 18-year drinking laws have so badly handled the privilege.

Speaker fight still sizzling

By Loring Swaim
State Columnist

With the legislature savoring a recess until the September primaries are over, where does the battle for Speaker stand?

What are Speaker McGee's chances of surviving the challenge from his erstwhile lieutenant, George Keverian?

Not much improved would be the short answer.

Clearly, the Speaker is playing on every card he has to try to nail down the vote when the legislature reconvenes in 1985. He has passed the milestone as the longest-sitting Speaker in modern times; it is a matter of personal pride now to demonstrate he cannot be pushed aside by anyone.

He leaned over backwards, i.e., wielded a slow gavel, throughout the tedious budget debate lest he antagonize potential supporters. He is moving around the state making his case for one more term, talking to selected editors, issuing press releases, sending out commentaries, keeping up a PR barrage. And strategy is being developed with a handful of hardball committee chairmen whose leadership positions depend on his staying in power and who may take the gloves off completely after the election.

George Keverian is playing his cards no less carefully. He is perhaps best known for his meticulous redistricting work whittling the House from 240 members to 160; he is applying the same, thorough, brooding attention to detail in his bid for the 81 votes in January to oust McGee and become Speaker himself.

Counting heads - or knowing what goes on inside heads - is a Keverian specialty. Bear in mind that what some members say publicly isn't what they say privately - and it's too soon for some to go public.

The fact that Keverian and Co. are quietly confident these days, showing little anxiety, suggests they believe they have the votes to change speakers and it's only a question of time and patience.

"There's been a change in the House," says Rep. John Flood of Canton, one of the first to break with McGee, side with Keverian and press to reform rules which give the speaker such autocratic powers.

Speaker McGee, left, and challenger Kevarian

"Members are feeling freer to think things through now and vote issues on the merits, instead of looking to the Speaker for instructions. Used to be that if you asked questions, you were considered antagonistic; a troublemaker. A speaker, however macho, can't deliver votes now by just calling in chits. In fact, a new kind of candidate is entering the legislature interested in issues and positions and thinking things through, not just in currying favor with the leadership to advance."

"No longer can the leadership get results by threatening to take away member's goodies," says Rep. Nick Paleologos, another in Keverian's corner.

The first concrete clue to the Speaker's battle comes with the September primary. Pro-Keverian, and/or pro-rules reform, forces figure they can win only half the 18 open-seat contests as a worst case scenario, add them to 50+ solid votes already in their camp, to say nothing of Republican votes, and McGee is gone. Alternative speculation has it that if McGee comes away from the primary and election with the votes to be reelected, he will do so, then hand his gavel to Majority Leader Rep. Jack Murphy and bow out gracefully.

Keverian cohorts have opened an office at 15 Court Sq., Boston, - phone: 742-1985! - to give organizational focus to their effort. Reluctant to get directly involved in some campaigns, they intend that in critical races, the central issue of House Change vs. Status Quo will be raised, debated, argued fully - and, if so, decided in their favor.

Better still, how about several enterprising civic organizations around the state offering no-holds-barred, eyeball-to-eyeball televised forums at which the two protagonists - House Speaker Tom McGee and challenger George Keverian - thrash out their viewpoints and perspectives in prime time for the edification of the enthralled public?

What better way to let the voters know exactly what these two men and their respective supporters are really fighting for?

Beacon Hill roll call

Voting on abortion

"Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' votes on 12 roll calls and local senators' votes on five roll calls from the week of June 25-29.

Abortion (H 673) - Constitutional Convention approved, 120-67 (House approved 101-50, Senate approved 19-17) a proposed constitutional amendment stating "no provision of the Constitution shall prevent the general court from regulating or prohibiting abortion unless prohibited by the U.S. Constitution, nor shall any provision of the Constitution require public or private funding of abortion, or the provision of service or facilities thereof, beyond that required by the United States Constitution. The provisions of this article shall not apply to abortions required to prevent the death of the mother."

(A "yea" vote is for the proposed constitutional amendment.)

Sen. Backman - no.

Rep. Cohen - no, Rep. DeNucci - yes, Rep. Schur -no.

Mother (H 673) - Concon Defeated, 133-53 (House defeated 109-42, Senate defeated 24-10) an amendment striking out the section exempting from the provisions of the constitutional amendment cases where an abortion is required to save the life of the mother. (A "Nay" vote is for keeping the exemption.)

Sen. Backman - yes.

Rep. Cohen - yes, Rep. DeNucci - no, Rep. Schur - yes.

Rape and Incest (H 673) - Concon defeated 144-37 (House defeated 117-31, Senate defeated 2-6) an amendment exempting case of rape or incest from the provisions of the constitutional amendment. (A "yea" vote is for the rape and incest exemption.)

Sen. Backman - no.

Rep. Cohen - no, Rep. DeNucci - no, Rep. Schur - no.

Drug Sentencing (S 256) - Senate 18-17, refused to table a bill discouraging the reduction of charges in drug cases from possession with intent to sell to mere possession. The Senate later gave initial approval to the bill on a voice vote. (A "Yea" vote is for tabling the bill.)

Sen. Backman - yes.

Marijuana (S 257) - Senate 21-16, tabled a bill moving marijuana from its classification as a class D substance to a class C one. The shift to class C would make possession of marijuana a felony.(A "Yea" vote is for tabling the bill.)

Sen. Backman - yes.

Voter Listing (H 1199) - House 127-25, rejected a bill allowing names on the annual street listing prepared in each city and town to be included in the register of voters if they meet all other qualifications to vote. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill.)

Rep. Cohen - yes, Rep. DeNucci - no, Rep. Schur - yes.

Supplemental Budget (H 6081) - House 137-3, gave initial approval to a new $78 million supplemental budget for fiscal 1984. (A "Yea" vote is for the budget.)

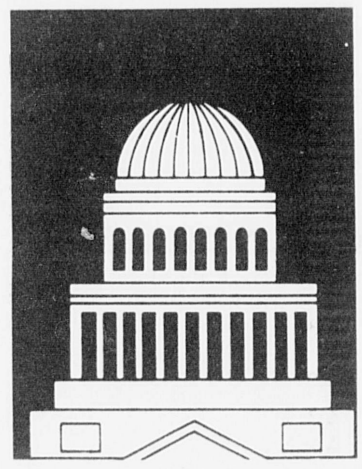

Rep. Cohen - yes, Rep. DeNucci - yes, Rep. Schur - yes.

Divide Surplus (H 6081) - House 105-37, rejected a supplemental budget amendment requiring that any surplus remaining in the general fund at the end of a fiscal year be divided equally among those persons filing a state income tax return the following year, by allowing these taxpayers a tax credit equal to the calculated share. (A "Nay" vote is against the amendment.)

Rep. Cohen - no, Rep. DeNucci - no, Rep. Schur- no.

Local Aid (H 6081) - House 89-53, approved a supplemental budget amendment providing that if state revenues for fiscal 1984 exceed the projected $4.4 billion, then 40 percent of the excess must be distributed under the lottery formula to cities and towns. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment.)

Rep. Cohen - no, Rep. DeNucci - no, Rep. Schur - no.

MDC (H 5583) - House approved 92-53, but failed to gain the necessary two-thirds margin to override Governor Dukakis' veto of a supplemental budget item providing $17.8 million, to be distributed under a detailed formula, to cities and towns outside the area served by the MDC. (A "Yea" vote is for the $17.8 million.)

Rep. Cohen - no, Rep. DeNucci - no, Rep. Schur - no.

Transportation Building (H 5999) - House 108-36, gave near final approval to the bill authorizing the Theatre District Limited Partnership, a private partnership, to lease floor space in the new Park Square Transportation Building for up to 36 years. (A "yea" vote is for the bill.)

Rep. Cohen - yes, Rep. DeNucci - yes, Rep. Schur - yes.

Exploring hidden dangers of MTV

By Randy Szyba

The nation's child psychologists are concerned (which is something they always seem to be) — this time about the impact of MTV, rarely but properly known as Music Television, on our youth.

There fear is a very real one. They say that MTV brings a little too much sadism and violence into the homes of impressional teens and pre-teens. One such psychologist termed some of the videos "disgusting and destructive violence" and "gruesome sadism."

"MTV and other violent TV networks are out to guarantee that the second television generation will be more violent than the first, which turned out to be the most violent generation of Americans on record," said Dr. Thomas Radecki, chairman of the National Coalition on Television Violence.

Actually, Dr. Radecki is directing his attack at the secondary source of this bad stuff. It's the popular singers who create it; MTV just airs it. And it's not just cable any longer. Those videos have slipped into network TV as well.

I've seen some of the stuff he's talking about and I say good for you, Dr. Radecki, for being honest and outspoken enough to call this stuff disgusting. Some of it is; some of it is merely badly done.

Unfortunately, the good doctor hasn't gone far enough in exposing the evils of this alleged entertainment. It's not only the violence-rubbing-off-on-our-kids we should be worried about. There's a bigger problem, more insidious because it has so far gone unnoticed, or at least unreported.

Long before videos turn the current crop of kids into violent young adults, they're going to turn them into non-productive, uncreative zombies.

Songs seem to fit, like comfortable jeans, into certain moods and with and about certain events and people. I admit I even look around the radio dial for songs to fit my current mood.

I don't know if music hath charms to soothe the savage breast, but it sets the creative, interpretive soul free.

But the last time I heard Lionel Ritchie on the car radio, I couldn't get that blind, beautiful Black girl out of my head. Mention the name Cheri, and a blond in a tight white shirt appears before my eyes. And that's dangerous, especially driving on Broad Street.

I can no longer hear the words of the songs. And I can no longer just hum a tune to pass the time. I have been programmed instead into "seeing" the song, and I walk around like Pavlov's dog, my will triggered into obedient response at the first notes.

The visual impact has taken control. Luckily these songs only last a few minutes and I haven't seen many of the videos. So I'm still hanging onto some of the musical individuality.

But for the addicts, who are already spending passive zonked-out hours in front of their TV, it's going to get worse before it gets better. Those who know all about these things — who are those who make lots of money on these things — say current videos are dull, dull, dull and video makers are running the risk of losing their audience if they don't broaden their horizons and even increase their play time to as much as an hour, doing whole sets of numbers against a unified backdrop. A mini-musical, if you will, each time you turn on MTV.

The typical clip, said Dick Ebersole, executive producer of "Saturday Night Live," now lasts four minutes and contains 150 images. "There's a whole generation of 2- to 11-year-olds falling in love with this much matter being thrown at them. When they get older, they will demand this eye candy" on a regular basis.

Sort of like a fix. Unable to create a mood, a feeling of their own, they'll punch the channel selector and sit back passively for countless zonked-out hours, while offbeat, violent or merely uncreative producers pump images into their heads and syphon off imagination.

I've seen grown, college-educated men work themselves into a frenzy talking about and even pantomiming the antics in some of these things. Pre-cable, these same people talked about songs and the meaning of the words of songs. Now they simply recount what they've seen. Pre-cable, they used to talk about sports and even women. Now it is Wang Chung and Martha Quinn.

I'm worried about it because, as Dr. Radecki feels, lots of it is disgusting and grotesque.

But I'm more concerned because it's so popular, which means there are a lot of lazy people around who don't mind being dictated to, having thoughts and dreams and emotions formed for them.

It is, you know, 1984.

Objects to proposed change in anesthesia certification

Representative Barney Frank has proposed a bill in Congress (H. 4683) which would allow certified registered nurse anesthetists to bill for their services independently of a physician anesthesiologist.

Apparently, such legislation is intended to reduce the cost of medical care delivery; however, the end result is to make unsupervised nurse anesthesia care equivalent to physician anesthesia care.

The education and training for a nurse anesthetist differs considerably in both intensity and duration from that of a physician. Whereas nurse anesthetists receive a total of five or six years of training plus one year of practical experience (three or four years of nursing school/college equivalent, one year of general or intensive care nursing practice, two years of anesthesia training), anesthesiologists receive a total of either 12 years of training or 11 years of training and two years of practical experience (four years of college, four years of medical school, one year of internship, two years of residency, and one year of fellowship or two years of practical experience).

Simply as a result of these different training programs, an anesthesiologist has a much greater knowledge of physiology, pharmacology, anatomy, etc. than any nurse anesthetist. Mr. Frank's proposed bill, however, assumes that the levels of knowledge, training, and skill between the two professions are equivalent. Allowing nurse anesthetists to function independently would be comparable to allowing a surgical technician to perform an appendectomy and then to submit a bill to the patient for services rendered.

I have devoted my life to training physician anesthesiologists and nurse anesthetists, and often they perform an equivalent service. But, when a life is on the line, an anesthesiologist has the depth of knowledge and experience which cannot be matched by a nurse or anyone else. There are many fine well-trained nurse anesthetists who deliver very safe routine anesthetic care with appropriate medical direction. However, nurses still require proper supervision and medical advice by appropriately trained physicians so that should a life-threatening emergency arise there is someone available with the proper background and knowledge to efficiently deal with the problem.

Mr. Frank's bill would allow non-physicians to perform physician functions, and will delude the public into thinking that equivalent care is being delivered while money is being saved. Unfortunately, you cannot have it both ways. In the long run, nurse anesthetist fees will rise because they will have to pay the high costs of medical malpractice insurance; this cost will be passed on to the patient.

The purpose of my letter is to inform residents of this community- particularly older individuals - who are most likely to have severe medical problems and to require surgery - that such legislation has been proposed. I think that they are entitled to proper anesthesia care; the proposed legislation may make this less than ideal.

Schmidt, White for Shannon

As many regular readers of the Newton Graphic probably know, columnist Mark White and I don't see eye to eye on several issues such as county government and the Democratic State Committee. However, regarding the best choice for United States Senator this year, I wholeheartedly agree with Mark that it's Jim Shannon.

As a former legislative assistant to a United States Congressman for more than two years, I believe that I know something about what it takes to be an effective leader in Washington. Also, as an elected official in Middlesex County for the past year and one-half, I have had the opportunity to observe Jim Shannon perform his duties as a Congressman on numerous occsions.

In those instances, I have been very impressed with Jim's knowledge of the issues, his dedication to the needs of his district, his compassion for his fellow men and women, his commitment to high ideals, and his political sophistication in getting things accomplished on Capitol Hill. Since, the next United States Senator from Massachusetts could possibly serve in that position into the 21st Century, we need someone in that body who has already proven himself as a respected leader and advocate in Washington - Jim Shannon.

Of course, no candidate or public official is absolutely perfect, and I might disagree with a few of the votes Jim has made as a Congressman. However, Jim is the only candidate with a Washington record of performance to run on. We can see what he has done, as compared to what others promise they will do. When that most important distinction is taken into consideration, Jim Shannon looks very good.

Newton voters who choose to support Jim Shannon for the United States Senate can be proud of the fact that their candidate is a hard-working Congressman with a very progressive voting record who knows how to get things done in Washington.

Middlesex County Commissioner

MBTA heads are liable too

If the cash has been stolen from the M.B.T.A., the Boston area's transportation system, then those who stole it should of course be prosecuted.

However, those responsible for, but negligent on, supervision and security should also be suitably penalized.

Every owner and renter, whose taxes contribute most of the M.B.T.A.'s expenses, loses money because of such a theft. It therefore behooves anyone who becomes aware of such activity at any time to suitably report it. If not, such parties are also negligent.

Liberal arts suit business world

The following commentary was sent to us by Boston University Prof. Michael Useem

Many college seniors graduating with degrees in the liberal arts are wondering whether they can find a future in business. Such anxieties are misplaced. Business demand for skills learned in the liberal arts curriculum are widespread and probably higher than ever before.

Nearly a quarter of the college graduates currently employed by General Motors Corporation, for instance, are liberal arts majors. "We place a very high priority on a liberal arts background," observed Roger B. Smith, GM's chief executive, " of everyone we hire." The same is increasingly heard from the nation's other major firms.

Recent research findings show why liberal arts graduates can expect a good career in business management. they reveal that a liberal background helps managers in learning to learn. Mastering art and music, for instance, is found to facilitate the mastery of mathematics and other technical subjects.

A liberal training helps managers in learning to lead. The non-vocational curriculum of the liberal arts, according to the work of several psychologists who have carefully tracked the careers of graduates, make alumni (1) more able to think critically, (2) better at setting goals, and (3) quicker to seek leadership roles.

A broad liberal curriculum advantages alumni in learning to communicate. The writing and verbal skills acquired in English and other courses are invaluable assets when a rising manager's responsibilities include the persuasion of such diverse groups as the company's engineering division, the city's mayor, and the local media.

The liberal arts also help managers in learning to change. Humanities and social science graduates rise high in the ranks of American Telephone and Telegraph, according to another study, and the chairman explains why: " The humanities and social science majors were most suitable to change - the leading feature of this kind of high speed, high pressure, high tech world we now occupy."

Seniors who received their diplomas in the liberal arts this spring will find no easy start in a business career. But as their career develops, many will find that the liberal arts background prepared them well for the fast track to the corporate top.

only spur youngsters of "the Lake" area to take to the streets with all varieties of illegal fireworks, creating a situation they say will be far more noisy and hazardous than the traditional pyrotechnic salute.

The society is also considering legal action against the city and has retained James Burke, who believes Reilly may have "abused his discretion" concerning the permit, as its legal counsel.

After allegedly informing Mayor Mann of his permit decision, Reilly met Friday morning with Ward 2 Alderman Elaine M. Gentile, Ward 1 Alderman Ronald A. Marini, State Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci (D-10th Middlesex), St. Mary of Carmen Society President Anthony Gentile, Anthony "Fat" Pellegrini and other members of the society at fire department headquarters.

Although society members, DeNucci and the aldermen all said they "bent over backwards" to reach some compromise with Reilly - including roping off the display area, moving the site to the more spacious Cabot Park and paying for additional fire equipment to be on-hand - they say the chief had decided the issue long before the community meeting took place.

"We tried to compromise, but his mind had been made up. He wasn't going to budge from that position," according to Tony Gentile, the licensed fireworks expert with 20 years of experience who was supposed to arrange the festival's finale this Sunday night.

Ground displays featuring a crucifix, pinwheels, American and Italian flags, along with "salutes" that shoot exploding balls of ignited confetti 50 feet in the air had been planned for the seven-minute show, he added.

He also told of a meeting with Reilly three days after last year's festival during which the chief allegedly read him a letter saying the society "had no right to force its ethnic beliefs" on the rest of the city.

"I'm sure he wasn't using it as a reason, but why he did he have to read it to me," Gentile asked.

DeNucci, a member of the society and whose grandfather originally arranged fireworks for the festival in the mid-1900's, said he was "disappointed" that a compromise could not be reached and urged his constituents not to react to the decision through the use of illegal fireworks which could reflect negatively on the society and lend credibility to Reilly's claims.

Alderman Bruce B Carmichael said, "Fire Chief Reilly's decision shows a total disregard for a 49-year-old tradition and a community that has given far, far more to the city than it has received in return," adding that he showed "insensitivity not fitting of a respected department head" and "unwittingly encouraged the use of illegal fireworks."

He decsribed Reilly's decision as "utterly amazing" and expressed disappointment that Mayor Mann didn't "intercede for a compromise."

Marini, who represents the Nonantum area, angrily said Reilly's "eyes and ears were totally closed. It's a shame a tradition like this is being destroyed. It reflects badly on the mayor, after all, he is the chief's boss. The people just got slapped in the face. This is the biggest insult to our community ever."

Marini, who remembers his mother carrying him to the celebration when he was just a toddler, also contended that his civil rights were violated by the decision because the festival and the fireworks honoring the Madonna are inextricably linked to his religious beliefs.

An enraged Pellegrini said, "I'm surprised that the mayor does not intervene. I think the mayor and the chief got together and said 'No way, Jose,'" and, of the board's unanimous action condemning Reilly's decision, added, "I don't know if your resolution will do any good. Sometimes, the mayor justs throws them in the waste basket."

In expectation of the unstoppable use of illegal fireworks, he said, "After Sunday, (Reilly) will have something to hang his hat on. He'll say 'See, I told you so,' and he'll blame the society."

Bullwinkle said he thought the decision against the fireworks was "done deliberately" and accused the city of singling out Nonantum for reprisals, a belief that was echoed by Aldermen Gentile and Richard J. McGrath, who described the permit denial as the "city using its muscle to intimidate these innocent people."

Alderman Carol Robinson said the underlying basis for Reilly's move "appears to be (ethnic) discrimination" and also expressed anger that Reilly and two other senior members of the fire department, despite a request by Public Safety Committee Chairman Gentile, refused to attend the board meeting and explain their reasoning.

Tax changes scrutinized

tion of the clause, even the arrangement of the written application for it, has historically allowed any one of the three conditions to be considered as a valid reason for a tax exemption.

They also contend that the city's new policy of steering taxpayers toward Clause 41A tax deferrals, only granted to those 65 years of age or older who have lived in the city for a decade or more, does not take into account the situation of taxpayers under 65 who have not lived here that long and are still unable to meet their tax burden. The fact that judgement or "whimsy" calls by assessors denying a Clause 18 application cannot be appealled to any state or local body is also a violation of constitutional rights, they claim.

While assessors say their decision to emphasize tax deferral is based on the work of a mayoral committee which examined Clause 18 exemptions, some members argue assessors warped the group's intentions, choosing to do away with hardship exemptions rather than using the committee's guidelines to extend additional help to suffering taxpayers.

The argument over the future of the hardship exemptions culminated in a recent aldermanic Finance Committee meeting when committee Chairman Paul E. Coletti, who was a member of the mayoral group that produced Clause 18 guidelines in March, promised to docket an item asking three separate aldermanic committees to approve a request that assessors return to their former policy of using Clause 18 as the primary source of assistance to taxpayers.

Coletti, some other board members and several citizen taxpayer activists are also hoping aldermen will initiate a home rule petition asking the state legislature to allow the city to come up with its own guidelines governing the dispersal of the hardship exemption, whose wording, even city assessors admit, leaves the decision of hardship up to the "judgement" of assessors while simultaneously not providing even cursory indications as to what constitutes an inability to pay taxes.

In 1981, 51 taxpayers were awarded Clause 18 tax exemptions that totalled $27,417. A year later, after the city's controversial 1981 revaluation, the number of awards skyrocketed to 211 and exemptions totalled $117,801 and, in 1983, 189 Clause 18 exemptions were awarded amounting to $116,412.

This year, however, only 25 hardship exemptions were granted from 143 applications, totalling a mere $11,750, a low demand assessors attribute to a general decrease in a majority of the city's residential tax bills.

Coletti, who said he intends to press the issue to some final resolution, argues that the "city has an obligation to fulfill real, identifiable needs," not force indigent or elderly taxpayers to "mortgage their future to pay taxes."

"I don't want to give the city away, but we owe it to some of these taxpayers, who have lived here all their lives and always paid their taxes, to help them in a time of hardship. I'm saying we should be giving out more (exemptions), not less," he added.

Reaction by union grievance with the state Labor Relations Commission alleging unfair labor practices in the recently ended police negotiations. The union contends the city had no right to declare an impasse in negotiations and unilaterally implement a disputed contract.

• The state Contributory Retirement Appeal Board overturned a decision last week by the Newton Retirement Board to deny an injured officer a disability pension. The Newton body said officer Paul Ginnetty, who has been out for three years with an allegedly incapacitating injury to his shooting hand, is not eligible for a pension because he can be retrained in the use of a firearm. The state board overturned that decision.

He also felt that because the Massachusetts Jaycees are required by law to admit women, they are, at times, discriminated against by the national organization.

"We've never been able to get a national Jaycee convention here, and Massachusetts is always the last stop on the national president's visits to local and state chapters. At the past national convention we were discriminated against because our local and state presidents were not permitted to participate fully because they are women," he said.

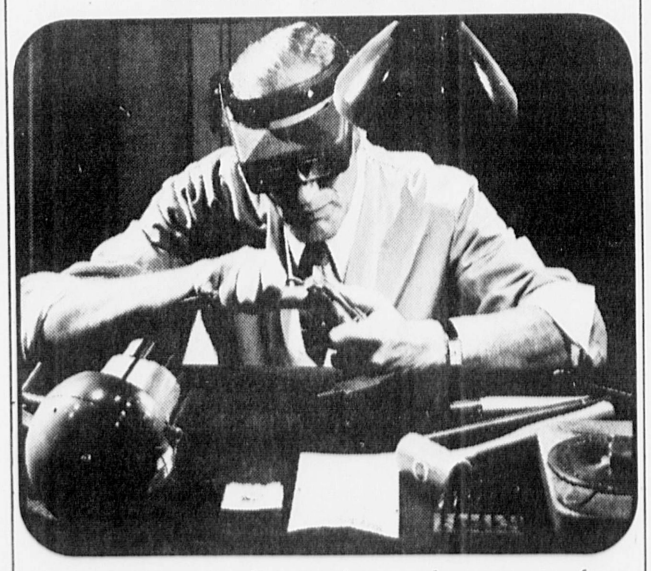

Members of the national leadership-training organization argued that being forced to admit women as full members infringed on their First Amendment freedom of association.

"As far as I'm concerned that's a lot of bunk," Levine said. "They feel that way because they believe women have more time to rise to the top of the organization. Now women are working as many hours as men so that argument doesn't apply. Our purpose is to share ideas, and now we may be free to do that with another 100 percent of the population.

"I'm happy that the organization will not have to live with the burden of being 'anti-women.' Now, I hope we can be free to make it the best of its kind," Levine said.

The court decision overturned a federal appeals court ruling that Minnesota was wrong in citing the organization's males-only policy as a violation of the state public accomodations law.

Kathleen and Ricardo Freeth

Kathleen Dustin marries Mr. Ricardo A. Freeth

Kathleen A. Dustin of Waltham, daughter of Mr. and and Mrs. Bruce and Mary Dustin of Billerica, became the bride of Ricardo A. Freeth, son of Cornelia Freeth and the Late Richard Freeth of Waltham on May 5 at St. Mary's Church in Billerica.

The Rev. John T. Lawler, head pastor of St. Mary's Church in Billerica, officiated at the 5:30 p.m. double-ring ceremony. Two end altar pieces made of daisies and pink carnations decorated the altar for the ceremony. A reception followed at the Billerica Lodge of Elks.

Given in marriage by Mary and Bruce Dustin, the bride wore a square-necked gown of white polyester with long sleeves and a lace trim border at the hem, dropping to a sweep train. A floor-length cap veil with seed pearls and motifs was worn and she carried a bouquet of white roses, dark purple carnations and white baby's breath.

Anne Marie Dustin of Lowell, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. Bridesmaids were: Patricia Collins of Lowell; Diane Dustin of Billerica, sister of the bride; and Mrs. Toni Vlass of Newton. Heather Dustin of Lowell, sister of the bride, was the flower girl for the ceremony.

Serving as best man was Thomas Young of Orlando, Fla. Ushers were: Garry Vlass of Newton; James Crowley of Needham; and Alan Jacques of Auburndale. Kevin Muise of Billerica, cousin of the bride, was the ring bearer.

After a wedding trip to Orlando, Fla., Mr. and Mrs. Freeth made their home in Waltham.

The bride is a graduate of Shawsheen Valley Technical High School in Billerica and of Bunker Hill Community College in Charlestown. She is presently employed at Purity Supreme Super Market in Newton.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Newton South High School in Newton, and is presently employed at Water Chemicals, Inc. in Chelsea.

JCHE Golda Meir House celebrates 5th anniversary

The elderly residents of the Golda Meir House, one of four buildings owned and managed by Jewish Community Housing for the Elderly, celebrated the Newton facility's fifth anniversary this month with a gala dinner for residents and special guests.

Newton Mayor Theodore Mann reminisced with Golda Meir tenants, many of whom have known him and his family for many years. Greetings were also offered by JCHE President Herman Snyder, Vice President Rudolph Kass and Executive Vice President Ellen Feingold. Rabbi Philip Kieval of Temple Reyim offered the invocation.

Ballons and flowers festooned the building's dining room as residents enjoyed a kosher roast beef dinner prepared by the dining room staff and entertainment by the Shirim Klezmer Orchestra. Partial funding for the concert was provided by a grant from the Klezmer Conservatory Foundation.

Golda Meir House provides 123 apartments for elderly and handicapped tenants of all creeds and races.

Jackie Kinsella made 2nd-team all-star

Owen named to Suburban 'Stars

By Roy LeBlanc
Staff Writer

Waltham High may have finished third (tied with Newton North) during the softball season, but it led all teams when it came to the Suburban League All-Star team, which was named recently in a vote of the circuit's coaches. No fewer than five Hawks were named to the league's dream first unit. Two more made the second team.

To top it all off, senior shortstop Sue Giangrande was named the league's Most Valuable Player.

Newton North was also well-represented. The Tigers put one player on the first team, three on the second and had another make Honorable Mention.

The Tigers were represented on the first team by pitcher Nancy Owen.

Newton North put junior shortstop Jackie Kinsella and senior outfielders Sue Gerson and Mary Reynolds on the second team.

Kinsella is a power-hitting shortstop who also has good speed. She led off for the Tigers. Gerson moved from catcher to left field this season and had a great year for Newton. Another fast runner, Gerson usually hit third. Right behind her in the lineup came Reynolds in the cleanup spot. Like Kinsella and Gerson, she started her varsity career as a sophomore. Reynolds is a tremendous defensive player in center.

The five Waltham players on the first team included Giangrande, third baseman Annellen McNamara, outfielder Linda Horrigan, catcher Tracey Woods and Karen Chiarelli, who made it as a utility player.

League champion Brockton was next in representation after Waltham, with three players on the first team. Second baseman Liz Garner, outfielder Ellen Kent and designated hitter Jodi Holyoke were the Boxer nominees.

North Quincy, Brookline, Quincy and Cambridge Rindge & Latin each had one player. Rounding out the team were first baseman Mary Holleran of North Quincy, outfielder Cindy Leung of Brookline, utility player Andrea Griffin of Quincy and utility player Laura Damilink of Cambridge. Griffin is a junior, the others seniors.

Second baseman Sandra Plourde and outfielder Pam Vaughan, both sophomores, made the second team from Waltham. Plourde hit .386 for the Hawks from her leadoff spot this year, while Vaughan posted a .321 mark. Plourde is a smart baserunner and Vaughan has outstanding speed.

Making Honorable Mention were Newton North senior third baseman Julie Wilgoren ("our fiercest competitor," according to Newton coach Carolyn Harrington), Brockton senior first baseman Nancy Gastonguay, North Quincy senior second baseman Ann Sousa, Quincy junior shortstop Beth Veneto, and Brockton junior catcher Maria Rella.

NANCY OWEN — Her story begins two years ago when she was struck in the eye during batting practice. The depth of her commitment was proven then as she came to every practice and every game as soon as she was able, despite five broken bones in her face.

That commitment paid off this season. As a junior Owen was a solid pitcher, but in her final year she was outstanding. By midseason, almost every pitch that Owen threw was a strike, according to Harrington.

"She's not overpowering, but she works hard on placement and fielding her position," said the coach.

A co-captain, Owen led by example rather than words and it nearly put the Tigers in the tournament.

The All-Stars:

Most Valuable Player -- Senior shortstop Sue Giangrande, Waltham.

Coach of the Year -- LuAnne McCauley, Brookline.

Newton North -- Senior pitcher Nancy Owen.

Waltham -- Senior shortstop Sue Giangrande, senior third baseman Annellen McNamara, senior outfielder Linda Horrigan, senior catcher Tracey Woods, senior utility Karen Chiarelli.

Brookline -- Senior outfielder Cindy Leung.

Cambridge Rindge & Latin -- Senior utility Laura Damilink.

North Quincy -- Senior first baseman Mary Holleran.

Quincy -- Junior utility Andrea Griffin.

Sonia singles West to second victory

NEWTON — Newton West edged Watertown Central, 3-2, in a District 17 Little League Tournament on Monday, on Rick Sonia's run-scoring single in the top of the sixth inning. In its first outing, on Sunday, Newton West trounced Parkway National, 13-1.

Doug Mitchenton, running for Nino Tramantozzi, who doubled, scored the winner. Watertown pitcher Frank Cacia struck out the next batter after the double and got an infield out. Mitchenton took third on the grounder, and with two gone, Sonia came to the plate.

Sonia also won the game in relief of Doug Leone. After allowing a single to the first batter, he got the next batter to bounce back to the box, and flipped to shortstop Don McDougall who completed a double play. Sonia then finished strong, retiring the next ten batters in succession.

The other four runs were scored in the second and third innings. Newton began it with one in the top of the second. Mike Armstrong led off with a single to right, went to second on an error in the infield, and earned third on a passed ball. Scott Popsi delivered him with a deep sacrifice fly to right.

Watertown answered with two in the bottom of the inning to take a one-run lead. Rick Diodate walked, went to second on Chris Kelley's single, and when Brendan Dickey walked, the bases were loaded. Cary Drateau unleashed a single which plated Diodate, and Kelley scampered home on a passed ball.

Newton evened the score after two were out in the top of the third. Paul Melanson, Armstrong, and Marty Burke drew consecutive walks to load the bases, but could only get a run when Molanson came home after a passed ball.

For Watertown, Cacia put in a strong effort for the losers. The pitcher struck out seven batters and only gave up five hits.

The Newton Central team suffered a 12-8 defeat at the hands of Watertown Central in the opening round of the Little League Baseball Tournament on Sunday at Bunker Field.

Watertown had to rally back after Newton took a 4-0 lead in the first inning. Pitcher Mike Sprangio settled down after that, and contributed a two-run single in the fourth inning.

Mike Robertson led Newton's 10-hit attack with three singles. Jason Connolly rapped a triple, while Colin Casey chipped in a couple of hits.

Sean Becker drove in four runs for the losers, two of which came on a two-run double in the first inning.

Newton North Little League dropped a narrow decision to Parkway American, 10-9. At one point in the game, Newton held a 4-1 lead before Parkway battled back.

Six runs in the fifth gave Parkway a big lead, but Newton refused to quit and scored five times to create the final score.

Mike Connell slashed two doubles for Newton, while Tom Donelan added a pair of singles.

Angelo Coppola ripped a pinch-hit single and Jeff Holland doubled to key the five-run fifth.

Newton East was downed by Parkway Central, 20-5. Drew Calcoff did what he could for Newton with four hits, including two doubles, to drive in four runs.

Catcher Chris Guzzi contributed three hits, including a double, while Dan Tafe rapped out two safeties.

Charles River title to Viola, Marchesi

NEWTON — Tom Viola and Rudy Marchesi combined to fire a 67 in the championship flight of the Charles River Member-Guest Golf Tournament on Sunday, earning them top honors for the weekend tourney. Club member Viola, a Dover resident, and Marchesi, from White Beeches, N.J., had to hold off a late rally by Joe Flynn and Jack Recco to take the honors by one stroke.

With three holes to go, Flynn and Recco were three strokes back of the winners, but two 15-foot putts brought the margin to only one stroke, and finished with a 68.

Also in the championship flight were Steve Bassett and John Mahoney Jr.; they received consolation honors with a score of 64.

In the first flight, John Harding and Tom Swan combined for a 68 to win, while John Conners and Steve D'Agostino were the runners up with the same score. The first flight consolation was taken by Bob Salmunsen and Peter Norwell of Heather Hill who notched a 66.

Newton's Gary Mosca teamed with Tony Crovo in notching a 66 which was good for the win in the second flight. Mosca also had the closest drive to the pin on Friday, as his mark of seven feet, eight inches on the ninth hole was three feet closer than John Breen's.

The third flight was won by Charlie Barbera and George Toohey. Their 69 tied them with Peter Dromshaver and Charlie Johnston, but Dromshaver and Johnston were runners up on the basis of comparison of cards.Peter McCracken and Paul Keating played a strong round, finishing at 63, but were in the consolation class.

Jack and George Lynch paired up to shoot a 67 and win the fourth flight, while Dick Odell and Tom O'Leary earned runner-up honors with a 68. Odell pulled out an amazing drive on Sunday, launching a shot that was a mere three-fourth's of an inch from the pin. The next closest mark was three feet, six inches, which was reached by Roger Travis.

The fifth flight was taken by Mike Smith and Curt Oberg; their 65 edged out Jack and Bill Lynch who shot a collective 66. In the consolation class, John Daley and Scott Nicholson led with a 67.

Jeff Oberg and Charles Sincerbeaux took the win in the sixth flight with a 65. Two strokes off the lead were Jack Callahan and Matt Lynch, as they took runner-up honors.

The seventh flight saw John Graham and Ray Mathes win by three strokes over John Maloney and Bob Cahill. The winners shot a 66. In the eighth flight, Gene Reis and Kenneth Smith combined for a 66, edging Frank Bell and Hank Newman by two strokes.

Peter Ainsworth and Paul Frost fired a 69 to edge Barry Flanagan and Tom Kenney by two in the ninth flight, while in the tenth, Denny Maher and Jim McNeill shot a 67. The eleventh flight was taken by Jim and Richard Carolyn who also shot a 67.

The twelfth flight was won by Harold and Jim Gleason who had a 73. Joe Doyle and Dave Chapman took the thirteenth flight with a 69.

LeConti leads Warriors

NEWTON — Eighteen-year-old southpaw Rob LeConti hurled a four-hitter and went four-for-four while driving home five runs to power the Warriors to a 19-1 laugher over Knights of Columbus Friday in a Newton National League game played at Newton North High. The win improved the Warriors' mark to 5-7-2.

The Warriors used the home run route to capture the win, as three batters collected round-trippers. Larry Meltzer, a 19-year-old first baseman from Skidmore College, was the first to take advantage of the rightfield fence by knocking a three-run shot over the chained-link in the first inning. That blast capped off a six-run barrage, which also saw LeConti and Mike Solomon hit RBI singles. Solomon finished the game with six runs batted in, including a two-run liner over the fence in left-center field in the second inning.

Jim Giddon also had a home run for the winners. He led off the third stanza with a solo shot down the line in left field.

The summary:

WARRIORS(19)-S.MacKay 4-1; Bachner 1-0; M.MacKay 1-0; Casey 4-3; R.LeConti 4-4; Solomon 5-4; Meltzer 4-2; Giddon 2-1; Burke 3-1; D.LeConti 2-0; Larson 4-0; Tot.34-16.

Tufts letter to Wilcox

MEDFORD — Cecilia Wilcox, a freshman attacker from Newton, has earned a varsity letter with the women's lacrosse team at Tufts University, Coach Nita Lamborghini announced recently.

Wilcox was the leading goal-scorer on the Tufts team with 21 this season. She had six multi-goal games, highlighted by a five-goal performance which knocked Bowdoin out of the Northeast Tournament, 11-6, and was the only Tufts player to score in all 12 games.

Following the season, Wilcox was selected to represent the Northeast All-Stars in the Women's National Lacrosse Tournament which was held in Hamilton.

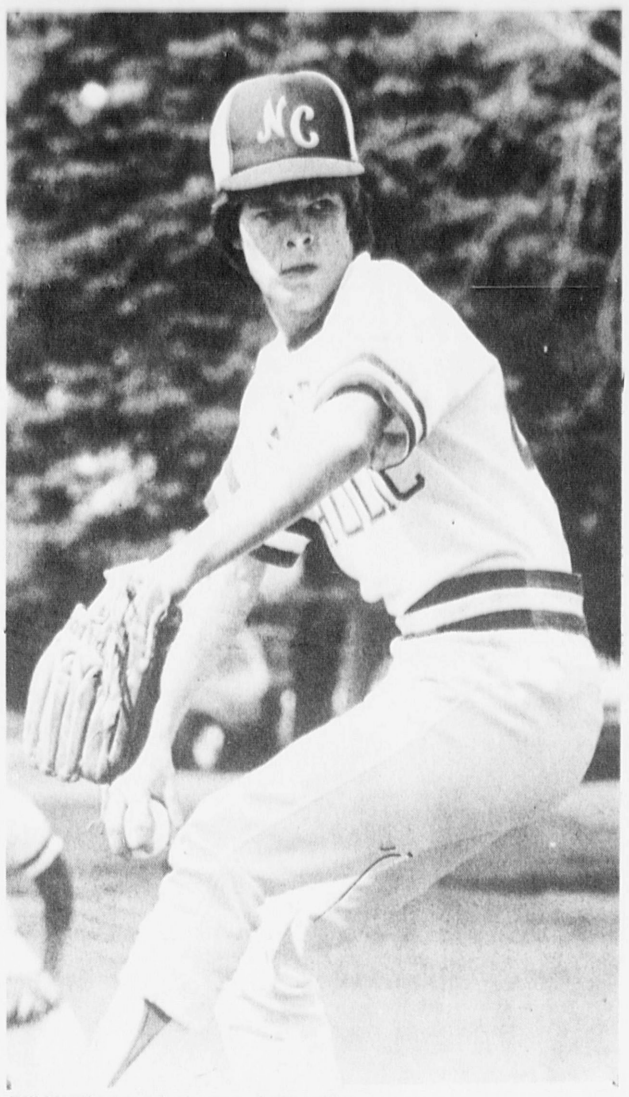

A former three-sport standout at Newton South High School, she is the daughter of Robert and Ann Wilcox of 418 Woodward St., Newton.

Tower hurls shutout

NEWTON — Patty Tower twirled a three-hit shutout as Faber Construction breezed past Cherry Tree, 16-0, in a Village Bells Softball League game at Albemarle on Sunday.

Mary Manning ripped a grand slam in the fourth and finished the game with five RBIs on her two hits. Mai Bianco also drove in five on a pair of safeties.

Sally Widerstrom added three hits and two runs batted in for the winners, who are now in second place with a 9-2 record.

Bill Martin saved win over Somerville

Triples key Post 440

MALDEN — Newton's Post 440 American Legion baseball team built up a 7-0 lead by the middle of the third inning and hung on to win, 9-7, at Devir Field in its most recent outing on Friday.

The Newton team used booming triples by Joe Noone and Nick Faggas to account for five of those runs.

In the second, Post 440 took advantage of a wild streak to force in the game's opening run. Nick Gingola and Sean O'Brien were each hit by a pitch before Dave Boule and Bill Martin walked to send home a run.

Center fielder Joe Noone got a good pitch to hit and didn't waste it, roping a three-bagger to deep center to clean the bases.

Faggas, who played for Watertown High this spring, accounted for two more with another three-bagger after Chuck Proia walked and Nick Gingola reached on an error.

Boule then rescued Faggas with a single.

Newton's last two runs, the first of which proved to be the game-winner, came across in the fifth. Yet another triple figured in the scoring, as Matt Noone slashed a line drive down the right field line to chase home Faggas, who had walked. Boule banged out another single to plate Noone.

Malden made the game interesting with five runs in the fourth inning to make it 7-6. The big blow was a three-run double by Ron Montecalvo, as Malden capitalized on a wild streak by Post 440 pitcher Sean O'Brien. He walked four and hit a batter in the frame. Matt Noone finished up, hurling the last two innings.

In is previous outing, Post 440 was able to end a late Somerville rally and down the previously-unbeaten team, 6-4, in Somerville. Matt Noone carried a one-hit shutout into the bottom of the seventh before Somerville exploded for all four of its runs.

Noone loaded the bases and allowed one run to score on a walk before Bill Martin relieved him with no outs. Martin walked in another run, but Joe Noone nailed a Somerville runner at the plate for the first out of the inning.

Somerville was not finished yet, however, as two doubles brought home two more, and cut Newton's lead to 6-4 with only one out, and runners on second and third.

Proia came through with a clutch play at second, catching a shot off John Whalen's bat and throwing to first to double up Val Vindice and end the game. It was Noone's second win in as many days, as he defeated Arlington in relief on Sunday.

In the seventh, Newton what proved to be two badly-needed runs, the first of which proved to be the winner. Joe King (two hits) singled, and came home on a triple by Sherman. An error at shortstop scored Sherman with an insurance run.

Newton scored three in the top of the first for an early lead. Alex DeNucci walked, Bob Connerney singled to left. After two were out, Sherman singled, bringing home DeNucci. Proia unloaded a triple to right which scored Sherman and Connerney.

The winners added one in the fourth. Proia drew a walk and Colin Ryan singled, with Proia going to third. Greg Larson ripped a hard single to center which plated the second baseman. The two runs increased Post 440's lead to 5-0 at the time.

The winners had to have some sterling defensive plays in the last of the seventh once Noone tired to save the game.

Biotti stars for St. Michael's

NEWTON — Frank Biotti starred at defense for the St. Michael's College lacrosse team this year, and is helping to build a two-year-old varsity program into a strong NCAA team.

The Newton resident made significant contributions this spring. Coach Jeff Culkin described Biotti as, "an aggresive, physical player." Only a freshman, he started every game this year.

St. Michael's captured fifth place in the Coxe League, and since only one player was lost to graduation, the 1985 team will return virtually intact.

Burlingame shuts out Elks, 14-0

NEWTON — The bat of Peter Groussis and the arm of Ben Burlingame were all that Abruzzi Club needed to breeze past the Elks, 14-0, in Newton International action Friday at Albemarle Field. Abruzzi Club now holds a 4-7-1 record while the Elks are slumping at 1-8.

Groussis, who plays shortstop and was a member of the Newton South High team, drove home three runs with a round-tripper in the sixth inning and scored three times for the winners. Meanwhile, Burlingame, a 14-year-old righty, was tough on the mound, allowing only 19 Elks batters to reach the plate. He finished the game with a three-hit shutout and six strikeouts.

Leading 3-1 after four innings played, Abruzzi Club blew the contest wide open with a six run barrage in the fourth. In that frame, David Strassburger pushed home a pair of markers with a single and with two outs Jay Jewett drove in a runner with a base hit. After a run was walked across, Jewett and Groussis scored on a catcher's error.

Abruzzi Club scored six more runs in the sixth inning to take the game handily.

In a closer contest at Newton South High, the Oak Hill Cubs rallied from a 4-1 deficit to defeat the Tigers, 5-4, on a two-out double by Dan Freeman in the bottom of the sixth.

In that final inning, Freeman lined the ball over the rightfielder's head to score Dan Monbouquette from first base. Monbouquette had reached on a walk.

The Cubs got on the board first in the bottom of the first inning when Dave Seghorn walked and reached third on an error before scoring on a ground out. But the Tigers rallied for four runs in the top of the second stanza to take the lead. The big blow in that attack was Jim Rizza's RBI single.

Oak Hill pulled to within one with a pair of runs in the fourth inning on a fielder's choice and an RBI single by Eric Santucci. The Cubs tied the game in the fifth on a single by Mark Stern which set the stage for Freeman's heroics.

Righthander Anthony Calcagni twirled a no-hit shutout for Oakley Spa in action earlier last week at Cabot Park for a 6-0 victory over the Tigers.

The 15-year-old's biggest threat to the gem came from Mike Francione in the seventh. Leading off the frame, Francione rapped a fly to deep center that Chuck Frail ran down with his back to the plate, keeping the no-hitter alive.

Calcagni wasn't overpowering, striking out eight and walking five, but he showed good control most of the way and got a lot of ground balls off the Tiger bats.

One run was enough to win this one, and Oakley picked up that marker in the very first inning with the aid of the Tiger defense. Anthony Filiponi singled and promptly set out for second. The throw down went over the second baseman's head and through the center fielder's legs as Filiponi never stopped running.

In the second and fourth, the winners got two-run singles. Third baseman Arthur Magni had the first and second baseman Neil Hatem the second.

The Auburndale Warriors pounded Carson Post, 12-4, at West Newton Common on the strength of a five-run second inning which put the game away.

Mark Adams set the tone for the night by blasting a solo homer to right field leading off the game for the Warriors. Adams added a triple in the second.

Aris Coralis began the second inning outburst by drawing a walk. Al Clark then homered to center, scoring Coralis before him. Rob Kelley drew a base on balls, and Adams unleashed his triple to score him. Mark Markunas drew a walk, and Anthony Whiting ripped a second triple to score Adams and Markunas.

McLaughlin seeks re-election

Michael E. McLaughlin

Citing his past success in reducing the county budget and his intention to continue the streamlining of county services, Michael E. McLaughlin announced his intention to seek re-election to the Board of Middlesex County Commissioners.

A county commissioner since 1975, McLaughlin has been a vocal advocate of fiscal accountability during his tenure on the board. Professionalizing the management of county sevices has been a goal of his current term of office according to the commissioner.

McLaughlin holds a B.A. from Plymouth State College and has studied for a master's degree in government at the Maxwell School of Government, University of Syracuse. The commissioner has served six years in the House of Representatives and is a former Billerica selectman and town meeting member. He now resides in Lowell with his wife Donna and their three children.

Children's mental health hearing

Children's mental health services in the Commonwealth will be the subject of a day-long public hearing in Gardner Auditorium at the State House on today conducted by the Special Committee on Mental Health, chaired by Senator Jack H. Backman (D. Brookline-Newton). The proceedings began at 9:45 a.m.

The hearing is designed to allow agency heads, advocates, mental health professionals, consumers and the public to respond to a 35-page report released early in June, the result of a year-long study of children's mental health programs and services offered by the Department of Mental Health, Social services, Youth Services and the Office for Children.

Findings of the report, which found children's mental health services "inadequate, often inappropriate and uncoordinated," will be discussed and evaluated in a variety of formats.

Cigarette bill gets initial approval

Legislation sponsored by Rep. David B. Cohen (D-Newton), that could recover up to $40 millin dollars in revenue lost due to counterfeiting of cigarette excise tax stamps, has passed the House and received initial approval in the Senate.

The bill would mandate the use of decals as proof of cigarette excise tax payment instead of the widely used and easily circumvented Pitney-Bowes system of metered impression.

In discussing the bill, Rep. Cohen stated: "The public is paying a cigarette excise tax that never reaches the state coffers because it is diverted at the wholesale level. It is intolerable that such a substantial source of revenue goes unretrieved when there are so many human services that desperately need more funding.

"By enacting this legislation the state can kill three birds with one stone. It can stop what is a multi-million dollar consumer rip-off. It can ease the future burden on the average taxpayer and it can significantly increase the amount of revenue flowing into the state coffers."

Human Services was the subject of a recent conference of the Legislative Service Bureau in conjunction with Boston University School of Social Work. Principal participants included, from left, Prof. Leonard Bloksberg, of Boston University; Claira Monier, regional director of the U.S. Dept. of Health and Human Services; state Rep. Marie J. Parente (D-Milford); and state Sen. Jack H. Backman, (D- Brookline-Newton) right, who chaired the panel. Jack Leonard photo

BC tailgating on city streets to stop, city legislators hope

By Eric Fehrnstrom
Staff Writer

NEWTON — City legislators have sent a letter notifying Boston College administrators of their intent to regulate the use of portable grills and hibachis in the hope that alumni and students will keep tailgating confined to campus during the upcoming football season.

The aldermanic Public Safety and Transportation Committee is currently mulling over three separate draft ordinances to prohibit the use of portable grills on public lands. The committee has already unanimously endorsed the idea of such a law.

The Board of Aldermen has voted in favor of notifying BC administrators of impending approval of a regulatory law that would keep open grills off city streets and recreation lands.

Gamegoers at BC home football contests have been identified as the major reason for putting in force a new ordinance protecting residents from open fire hazards that could accompany the popular practice of tailgating, which sometimes occurs off-campus.

The Newton Police and Fire Departments endorse the proposal, which was pushed by members of the Chestnut Hill Neighborhood Association.

Weekday supper provided

West Suburban Elder Services will begin providing a soup/sandwiches type supper at the Newtonville Senior Drop-In Center. Sponsored by the Elder Service in cooperation with the Newton Council on Aging, the Thursday evening supper is an attempt to supplement and expand the already existing noon lunch program. Serving time is 4:30 p.m. and participants must be Newton residents who are 60 or older. Reservations can be made by calling 527-6770. A 75-cent donation per meal is requested.

Newton family brings Portugal home

By Charlotte Meryman
Staff Writer

NEWTON CORNER — The door to the Moshers' home was open and the lilting notes of a Portugese folksong filled the heavy air of the hot, July morning. Inside, several square, white tiles painted in delicate Portugese patterns of blue, gold and red were displayed above a mantle in the entryway.

Ralph and Jessica Mosher talked of the beauty of the Portugese countryside, the contrasting scenes of agrarian tradition and modernization, and the warmth and intelligence of the people.

Although their four-month stay in Lisbon is over, the Moshers have brought the spirit of the Mediterranean back to their Newton Corner home. They have become, as Boston University Professor Ralph Mosher describes it, "Portugalphiles."

"I was enormously impressed by the caliber of the Portugese educators with whom we were working," Mosher said. "And I was spoiled rotten by the respect accorded professors in Europe ... We were received with great courtesy and graciousness by the Portugeses people. We were spoken of as very special guests."

From January through April, Mosher, his wife, Jessica, and their youngest daughter, Suzanne, lived in Lisbon, where Mosher was teaching in a cooperative program set up by the Portugese Ministry of Education and B.U.

The project is part of a major commitment by the Portugese government to upgrading the country's public education system and accompanies an extension of compulsory education from sixth grade to ninth grade.

Mosher, who is chairman of B.U.'s Counseling and Psychology Department and describes himself as "comfortably middle-aged," trained close to 100 Portugese teachers in elementary and junior high education. The 100, selected from among 1,000 applicants, will be assigned next spring to 11 new teacher training institutes under construction throughout Portugal.

Newton Public Schools Science Coordinator Robert Kilburn is among another group of American educators who will travel to Portugal this fall to supervise the teachers as they write their discertations. All of the work is done in English.

His experiences in Portugal, where public education is just taking off, were a refreshing change for Mosher, who was used to the budget-cutting, school-closing atmosphere of the New England states.

"I was heartened and encouraged by the emphasis they are giving to public education in their government policy," he said. "If they are going to upgrade their economy, they're going to have to rely very heavily on skilled manpower and womanpower within the country. And they see that and are investing precious resources toward that objective."

Mosher was fascinated by the signs of rapid change throughout Lisbon. The democratic revolution took place only 10 years ago, in contrast with America's 200-year development.

"You can literally feel a society being recreated when you're there," he commented.

The family lived in the Lisbon Penta Hotel, a modern 18-story structure, "very cosmopolitan in clientele," located near the University of Lisbon campus. Nearby, several new highrises and an $18 million American embassy were under construction. But in between the hotel and the embassy was a gypsy encampment.

"They lived in tents and every evening they clustered around their campfire," Mosher said. "And every day they would drive their sheep across to the lawn of the hotel (to graze)."

Also within easy walking distance was the traditional architecture of one of Lisbon's older sections.

The family spent their vacation on the sub-tropical southern coast, in Algarve, Portugal's French Riviera. They remember fondly the exquisite, flowering almond trees and the prolific orange harvest.

Jessica Mosher, a travel agent with a taste for art and music, spent much of her time studying watercolor and traditional Portugese tile-painting at the Institute of Fine Arts in Lisbon. She toured the city frequently, photographing tiles, used outside and inside buildings, to save the patterns for future reference.

The Moshers' daughter Suzanne, 14, attended the American International School of Lisbon with the children of American and foreign diplomats, businessmen and military personnel, as well as some Portugese students. The entire school had only 240 students in the elementary through high school levels.

"The amount of kids in the whole school didn't even come close to the amount of kids in my class at Newton North High School," Suzanne said. "Everyone was so courteous. I didn't have any problem being accepted ... (I was struck by) the closeness of everyone in the school.

Suzanne picked up Portugese much more quickly than her parents, they reported, and even learned a little Spanish on a weekend trip to neighboring Spain.

Mosher, who has also taught in Canada, Italy and Germany and has lectured in England, hopes to return to Portugal. He plans, at the very least, to maintain a personal and educational rapport with his new colleagues.

County race already hot

By Kevin C. Kennedy, News Editor

NEWTON — While an extensive campaign to reform Middlesex County government might have won the praises of some of the watchdogs who precipitated it, an early glimpse of this fall's election preliminaries promises the same kind of freewheeling three-ring circus that put the county into the headlines in the first place.

As candidates jockey for position, press releases are flying thick and fast, some touting candidates while others charge opponents with improper and illegal tactics.

Albert J. Onessima, of Somerville, has announced his candidacy for the office of Middlesex County Commissioner and charged present County Commissioner Thomas Larkin with submitting "pages of forged signatures on his nomination papers" and using county employees and county facilities to solicit campaign funds.

Albert J. Onessimo

In 1976, Onessima's name was kept off the ballot in a race for the U.S. Senate because the state Ballot Law Commission found him guilty of the exact practice with which he has charged Larkin. Onessima has affadavits signed by eight Arlington residents saying their signatures are not the ones Larkin has purported to be theirs in his nomination papers.

Indeed, the signatures in question, along with others not being questioned, appear, to the untrained eye, to be manufactured, with many names written in the same hand. Lorraine T. Kibit's

Divorces without discord

By Suzanne M. Dulude

After four years of bitter fighting, the Smith's divorce has finally been granted. Within two months, neither will adhere to the terms of the agreement.

John and Mary Jones, after a long time in therapy, have decided to terminate their marriage. They want to avoid the bitterness and anger that they have seen grow between other divorced couples they know.

These couples are similiar to many who have chosen divorce and are uncomfortable with the "my-lawyer-your-lawyer syndrome." As of 10 years ago, these couples have another option — divorce mediation.

Although divorce mediation, called "the wave of the future" by Boston lawyer Richard Bourne, is not for everyone, it is a viable alternative for many couples seeking assistance with settlements.

As defined by Barbara White and Lynne Halem of Mediation Associates in Newton, "Divorce mediation is a method for settling marital or post-marital disagreements outside of the adversarial system." The process is heavily dependent on the cooperation and participation of the two parties, they stressed.

Halem said she feels that there is a general misunderstanding of "mediation as therapy." White interjected, "We do everything from soup to nuts," including planning for health care, education and property. Both women stressed that as trained

Dismissed cop might sue city

By Eric Fehrnstrom
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A lawyer for dismissed officer Thomas Frost says the city faces a legal court challenge if the 14-year police veteran is not reinstated to his former post.

Kenneth Pollenz, a Boston attorney, said last week there is evidence of "malicious action towards this officer" and is investigating the possiblity of a federal civil rights suit against city officials responsible for Frost's firing last week.

Pollenz, who works for the law firm of Avery Dooley Post & Avery, added the suit would seek both compensatory and punitive damages in connection with the dismissal.

Frost, who is accused by Police Chief William Quinn of "separating" himself from his duties, claims he is suffering from a recurrence of a back injury he sustained while on duty over two years ago. He has not been granted injured-on-duty (IOD) status and, over the past two months, has exhausted his special leave privileges.

A hearing on the dismissal has been set for July 26 and will take place before Quinn and Mayor Theodore D. Mann.

"Frost is going to pursue the hearing ... and hopefully the Mayor and the Chief will re-examine their position and reinstate this officer. If they do not, we're investigating other remedies ... specifically, a claim of unjust termination in federal

Highlands council is criticized

NEWTON — Ward 6 Alderman-at-Large James P. Regan has accused a Newton Highlands neighborhood group of fragmenting that village's residents by excluding many of them from the community's grassroots political process.

In a strongly-worded statement issued Monday to "set the record straight," Regan questioned the Newton Highlands Neighborhood

Area Council's (NHNAC) commitment to the Highlands as a whole and its handling of the Hyde Elementary School closing issue.

The freshman alderman's charges came in response to a letter written to the Board of Aldermen by NHNAC President Susan Mirsky in which she criticized a citizen's action group that supported closing the school.

Mirsky's letter, which was distributed to aldermen a little over a week ago, charged the Coalition to Support Newton

Trips with kids

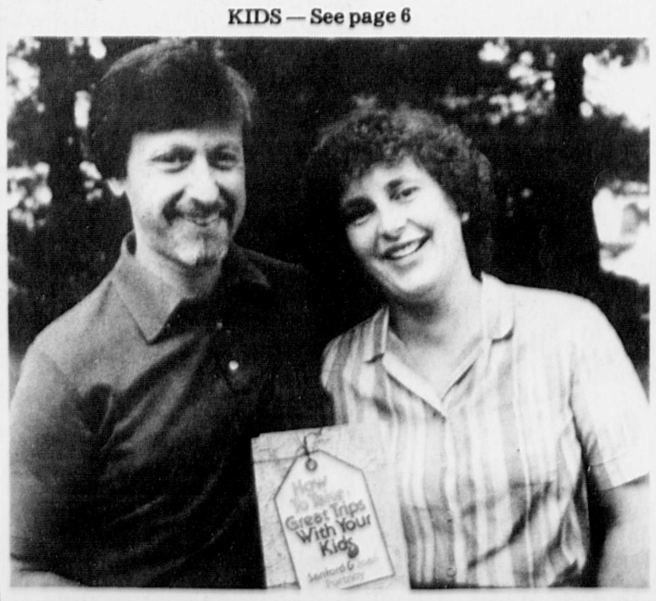

By Charlotte Meryman, Staff Writer

WABAN — You've been dragging yourself and your children around a sweltering city for over eight hours, visiting every museum, historical site and tourist attraction you can find.

Your feet are killing you. The kids are fighting and whining. You and your spouse are standing in the middle of a public thoroughfare screaming at each other. And your week-long, $1,000, once-a-year vacation is turning into the worst trip you've ever taken.

It was at just that point, standing with their then two- and four-year old children on a subway platform in Washington, D.C., six years ago, that Sanford and Joan Portnoy decided there had to be a better way.

In Nonantum

Fiesta finale fireworks-free

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NONANTUM — A shower of fireworks, brassy band music and the clanging toll of an iron bell marked the 49th annual procession honoring St. Mary of Carmen Sunday night as hundreds of residents followed the saint's statue through the streets of Nonantum.

The parade, which began at Hawthorn Park, turned onto Watertown Street and then travelled down Adams Street to Our Lady Help of Christians Church, lasted close to 30 minutes and took place under heavy police supervision. Earlier in the afternoon, the statue, framed by donated money pinned to masking tape, had been carried throughout the neighborhood on its way from the church to the festival grounds.

With the usual pyrotechnical display cancelled for lack of a permit, residents along the procession's route resorted to their own brand of entertainment by igniting a barrage of colorful Roman candles, whistling rockets, firecrackers and red flares.

Police kept traffic and crowds along a flag-festooned Adams Street away from the "illegal" fireworks and the only incident occurred after the crowds went into Our Lady's for Mass when police confiscated about two dozen rockets from the trunk of a car in front of the church.

Young and old took part in the traditional candlelight procession that signalled the end of a four-day fundraising festival sponsered by the St. Mary of Carmen Society, a carnival which officials estimate over 50,000 people attended.

It also marked the end of a controversial week of debate over a decision by Fire Chief Edward B. Reilly, Jr., not to issue a permit for the society's planned seven-minute fireworks show in the school yard at Our Lady's due to alleged past permit violations, public safety concerns and lack of adequate space for a supervised display.

Society president and fireworks operator Anthony Gentile joined festival chairman Nunzio Leone and Newton/Waltham Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci at the head of the procession and slowed the pace of the walk when participants came too close to the decorative explosives ignited in their path.

By the festival's end, according to Gentile's estimates, over 3,000 people had signed a petition requesting Reilly to grant a fireworks permit for next year's festivities marking the society's 50th anniversary.

Reilly explains ban

NEWTON — Fire Chief Edward B. Reilly, Jr., said two previous "direct violations" of fireworks permits issued in 1982 and 1983 resulted in his refusal to grant permission for a seven-minute display at a Nonantum religious group's festival last Sunday.

Reilly also pointed out that he was the first fire chief in the city's history to issue a permit for the St. Mary of Carmen Society's "traditional" fireworks and that the vast majority of previous displays had all occurred illegally.

Reilly's comments came in a telephone interview as the chief and his family prepared to travel to New Hampshire for his son's wedding. It was Reilly's first detailed discussion of the controversial permit denial that has enraged aldermen and Nonantum residents for the past week.

signature appears with one "r" in the first name on the nomination papers and two "r's" on her affadavit.

But, in 1976, a handwriting expert told the Ballot Law Commission that at least 16,000 of the signatures on Onessimo nomination papers were "non-genuine," according to David Sullivan of the Election Division of the Secretary of State's office. The expert added that, in her opinion, it was possible that only 270 of the thousands of signatures Onessimo submitted in 1976 were genuine, according to Sullivan.

The decision to drop Onessimo's name from the ballot was later affirmed in the courts.

An official in the office of the Somerville Election Commission said of the city's "native son," "Historically, his signatures are bad. We have had problems in the past."

For his own part, Larkin explained that more than 18,000 signatures were collected for his nomination papers by "dozens of people" and that he could not account for the origins of the signatures to which Onessimo had referred in his complaint.

Larkin further commented, "There has been an effort on the part of Albert Onessimo to pull dirty tricks. I've retorted that effort through the district Attorney, and he is looking into the matter."

Onessimo has charged the Middlesex County DA Scott Harshbarger "deliberately and systematically continues to cover up for violations of law engaged in by Commissioner Thomas Larkin.

Concerning Onnesimo's charge that Larkin solicited funds through a county employee, using a county telephone, in a county building while on county time, Larkin said that, since the matter was under investigation, he could not comment.

That charge stems from a newspaper ad that solicited contributions for a Larkin fundraiser. Larkin claims Onessimo send private investigators to the county office to purchase tickets to the fundraiser. He also said no tickets were solicited because of the ad.

Larkin suggested there was something lying under the surface of the Onessimo charges. "I understand he had spent more than $20,000 for an investigation of the signature challenges. That's an extraordinary amount of money to spend. There's something going on behind the scenes," he said.

Onessimo, who describes himself as an "owner of substantial real estate" was unavailable for comment. While he is running for public office, he still enjoys the luxury of an unlisted phone number. So far, all his campaign materials have been sent out with no return address on them.

Along with indicting Larkin in his press releases and calling on him to resign, Onessimo promised to turn over whatever salary he would receive as a county commissioner "to various charities."

He stated, "I seek to offer my services, not for a salary, but to create decency and candor in government. I have no army of workers thirsting to drink at the public trough. I ask the voters of Middlesex County to ask yourselves, "Isn't it time to send a message to the 'County Boys' that the people want to be represented by ONE OF US, not by ONE OF THEM."

The 128 Venture Group

High tech needs 'critical mass'

By Kevin C. Kennedy
News Editor

AUBURNDALE — One glimpse of the early morning gathering of more than 100 area businessmen immediately dispelled a lot of the stereotypes that have grown out of such gatherings over the years.

The suits were there, along with the white shirts and freshly polished shoes, but that is where the similarities stopped between last week's meeting of The 128 Venture Group and more traditional gatherings of businessmen — the ones that gave birth to the stereotypes in the first place.

First off, the crowd was younger than most. They radiated health and fitness. They were quite sleek, overall, in contrast to the types that usually make up the majority at such functions.

There was no back-slapping and no arm-twisting.

In the course of the long meeting, only one of the 100 in attendance lit a cigarette. And he knew enough to confine the effluent of his messy habit to a far removed corner of the function room at the Marriott.

There was a lean, hungry look to the participants of this business meeting that contrasted sharply to the smug smiles that dominate similar meetings.

The 128 Venture Group came together about a year and a half ago, according to Steve Ford, of Carpenter Consultants, Inc., Chestnut Hill, one of its founding fathers. It is modelled after a similar group in Connecticut, Ford said, although the model had to be reshaped to fit the unique needs of this area. Its purpose is to put together various components of the capital-intensive, highly technological sort of industry that has sprung up around Route 128, "America's Technological Highway."

Ford describes the group's purpose as "networking" — trying to assemble the winning combinination of resources necessary for creating a stable, profitable company in an industry marked by rapid change.

> 'These are the risk takers.'
> Steve Ford

At meetings of the group, according to Ford, "providers of capital," "providers of technology," "providers of services" and "management team candidates" gather to see if they can pool their resources. Members' name tags are color-coded according to whatever resource they have to offer.

Several young execs in attendance admitted that some of their colleagues did, indeed, come to the group's meetings in search of jobs, but the goals they expressed as being central to the organization were more long-range and high-minded.

"These are the risk takers," Ford said proudly of the group he had helped assemble.

The group's present chairman, Michael Belanger, commented that the group's aim is to assemble various resources until they have reached what he called "a critical mass" — an entity that can go on to create its own energy.

An idea, theoretically, is put together with the capital necessary to test its feasibility. Given a positive potential, the idea would then be combined with more capital, a capable management team and the services needed to make it bear fruit.

Given the credentials of those in attendance, the combination of ingredients available through The 128 Venture Group has yielded a cornucopia of fruitful collaborations.

The "risk takers" introduced themselves to each other and rattled off their qualifications as easily as participants at another business function would start playing "Who do you know... ?" One has assembled $50 million and he is looking for a great idea to invest it in. Another has added an idea to his already long list of successful innovations, and he needs some "seed money" to get things going.

Random selection and "the coincidence of want" that so often determine who meets whom and what gets done have been effectively whittled down by the 128 Venture Group. Efficiency has been enhanced significantly and the appropriate hookups are accomplished with a minimum of effort.

A most important product of the group's meetings is a simple list of who was there, what they have to offer and how to get in touch with them.

The main speaker at the meeting was Jerry Rosen, a corporate lawyer from Boston who specializes in bankruptcy proceedings. Typical of the far-reaching perspective of the 128 group, bankruptcy was explained in terms of "management tools." Far from being the nemesis of the businessman, bankruptcy is an opportunity for real creativity in management, judging from Rosen's comments. He told tales of companies that have managed to come out with whole new product lines in the midst of bankruptcies.

"I look at bankruptcy as creative medicine, not disaster," the Chapter 11 specialist commented.

Rosen's listeners listened intently, hoping his material would never become crucial or immediate to their operations. But the drive for collaborations, contacts and connections never slackened.

In the middle of Rosen's presentation, one young exec passed a piece of paper under the breakfast table to another young exec. When the latter brought it up into the light to read it, there were no less than three young execs from a neighboring table peering unabashedly over his shoulder.

The group of ambitious young inventors, investors and entrepreneurs that have joined together to form The 128 Venture Group are proving themselves to be a new breed of businessmen. Like the traffic on the artery from which they take their name, they might be slowed down at times, but they will not be stopped.

Opinions differ on divorce mediation

mediators they have "a wide knowledge base" of divorce law and divorce precedents.

The two Newton residents pride themselves on developing "exceedingly thorough" agreements, sometimes stretching to 30 pages of single-spaced type.

These agreements, which are usually the culmination of seven or eight two-hour sessions, are best described by Halem as "living agreements." They focus on "steps of how to discuss changes," where eventually the couple "learns to negotiate for themselves."

Halem, who has her master's degree in family policy, and White, a licensed psychologist who specializes in developmental psychology, have practiced this type of divorce mediation in Newton for over two years. In their Centre Street office, they explained that there are "raging debates" between lawyers and mediators over the merits of the such services. Litigation, referred to as an "adversary" process, often pits lawyers against one another trying to get the most for each of their clients, according to the women. On the other hand, legal counselors often "lump mediators together" as unable to deal with complex financial matters, Halem said.

One such skeptic of the mediators' financial knowledge is Haskell C. Freedman, retired justice of probate and family court in Lawrence. He seemed most concerned with the mediators inability to deal with the complicated Internal Revenue Code, which he said figures instrumentally in the deposition of property in divorce settlements. "In a mediators naivete or ignorance, the agreement doesn't make sense taxwise," he said. "Some lawyer has to look it over later and often do it over again."

Working part-time since his retirement six years ago, Freedman explained that he thinks mediation works best when the couple "has no children, little or no property, and has been married for a short time," or in situations where child custody and visitation rights are an issue.

According to statistics quoted by White, over 50 percent of divorced couples with children who have litigated eventually "re-litigate." Many litigated divorce settlements, she explained, do not account for future change. "They tend to freeze everything in time," she said.

Lawyer Ruth Budd, chairperson of the Family Law Committee of the Boston Bar Association, said she has "some reservations" about divorce mediation. She said that she feels that mediators cannot remain neutral. "Mediation is two against one, inevitably, on the basis of sex or profession or intimidation ... The imbalance in the marriage goes right through the mediation process. There is more of an opportunity for one party to dominate."

Legal ethics can also play an important part in mediation, especially if the mediator is a lawyer. "It's risky for a lawyer to be there and not to wear a lawyer's hat," Budd said.

Her main concern, however, seemed to be that "Mediation adds another layer to the process ... You still always need lawyers.

"Mediation is great if you have a custody or visitation problem, but it's a terrible way to deal with financial interests," said the partner in Hemenway and Barnes. "A time of stress, insecurity and fear is a time to be represented (by a lawyer)."

Family law specialist Arlene Bernstein shares some of Budd's reservations. "Some people need to vent" frustrations in the adversary process, the Newton Centre resident said. "They need to feel someone is on their side." As far as she is concerned, divorce mediation is just a "phase ... So long as the adversary system exists, it(divorce mediation) remains only an alternative."

Bernstein did cite some benefits of divorce mediation. Topping the list were a reduction in time and cost to the couple, as well as "establishing a rapport between the couple that makes lawyering later easier," she said.

Not all lawyers are adamant skeptics of this process. Richard Bourne not only believes that it is "the wave of the future," but also that "the parties are more committed to the agreement than if it were court imposed."

Himself a lawyer and mediator, Bourne said the only drawback he sees in the process is "not every couple can be mediated successfully and the mediator must be skilled enough to know that it won't work."

Bourne, who earned his doctorate in sociology from Harvard University, said, "Mediation involves both legal and therapeutic issues, as does divorce. You have to be both lawyer and therapist ... It's the best of all possible worlds."

It is this mesh of services that is offered by a second area center, the Divorce Resource and Mediation Center in Cambridge. Begun by Newtonville resident Jerome Weinstein and partner Harry Keshet in 1976, the center offers "complete services under one roof, with mediation as the cornerstone," according to Weinstein. Divorced with three children himself, Weinstein said the philosophy at the resource center is that "the family must continue after divorce.

"The traditional system is not adequate in dealing with families in crisis," he said.

The staff at Divorce Resource and Mediation Center, unlike the two-women staff at Mediation Associates, has nine part-time employees, including specialized psychologists, therapists, mediators and attorneys. Patrons are referred to the appropriate person based on their needs and the complexity of the issues.

Even though lawyers and mediators often come from opposite sides of an issue, lawyer Budd cited one overriding commonality: "We all want our clients to be stronger (after a divorce)."

As Budd said, lawyers are still needed in divorce cases and mediator White has not denied that. In fact, she said she understands why couples need this type of representation. "Lawyers represent individuals and will push for them — to give that up (completely) is to give up too much."

Larkin vs. Onessimo

Quinn, to collect campaign contributions during working hours in a county building — a possible violation of state election law.

Onessimo is seeking to win one of two county commission posts available this year.

Claiming he is being "set up" by Onessimo and Onessimo's lawyer, Albert C. Bielitz, Larkin accused Onessimo and his "agents" of resorting to "political dirty tricks" in an attempt to oust him from office. Larkin is seeking re-election to his second term as a Middlesex County Commissioner.

Larkin would neither confirm nor deny Onessimo's charges saying, "I have reported these efforts (alleged political dirty tricks) to the District Attorney's Office and I really don't want to comment anymore until the district attorney looks into the matter."

The office of District Attorney Scott Harshbarger has announced that it is investigating Onessimo's charges of election law violations and that the results should be made public within the next week. Onessimo has made complaints about Larkin to Harshbarger, the Attorney General's Office, the State Ethics Commission and the Office of Campaign and Political Finance.

The charges arose in relation to a June 14 notice in the Cambridge Chronicle Newspaper announcing a June 21 fund-raising event on behalf of Larkin's re-election effort. The notice stated that tickets could be purchased by calling Quinn at Larkin's office at the Middlesex County Courthouse.

Cool jazz refreshes listeners

By Kevin C. Kennedy

OAK HILL — The verdant grounds of Mt. Ida College were the ideal setting for a jewel of a jazz concert that kept its cool throughout last Sunday's record-breaking sweltering, inescapable heat.

The event, billed as "People Are Music, The Highland Jazz 1st Annual All-day Jazz Festival," was the largest in a string of productions Highlands restaurateur Mario Bocabello has brought to the city over the past several years. His past experience might have led to the concert's running as smoothly as it did, but the decision to hold it at Mt. Ida was pure inspiration.

Jazz lovers from all over the Boston area, alerted to the event by promotions that showed up in all the local media, spread their blankets, their coolers and their picnics on one slope of a small, tree-ringed valley on the college campus.

Directly across the valley from the crowd was a bandstand large enough to hold the thundering herd that made up the Greg Hopkins/Wayne Naus Big Band and an extremely sophisticated sound system that filled the valley with music.

At the bottom of the small valley, there was a large, oval pool with a white statue rising out of the middle of it. Kids and adults sidled over to the pool for a refreshing dip whenever the muggy, 90-plus-degree heat got to be too much. Most of the kids stayed in a lot longer than the adults, giggling and flopping around as the music flew over their heads from one slope to another.

A man who took to the cool waters and stayed long enough to finish his fudgesicle won praises from the bandstand for depicting "the ultimate in 'cool.'"

Semenya McCord and her quartet, which had the parish hall at St. Paul's Church packed to overflowing for a concert she gave last winter, continued to win the hearts of the city's jazz lovers. Her interpretation of the late Billie Holliday's work has lent it even more poignant grace than it enjoyed in its original form.

Becky Parris, a Newton native with a strong, agile voice, returned to her hometown for the second time this year and received a rousing welcome. Looking like she was dressed for a day at the beach, Parris titillated the crowd with her updated versions of such classics as "Night and Day," but the most impressive response came after she totally reworked the old rock and roll original, "Teach Me Tonight."

Parris, obviously feeling at home, joked with the crowd and reassured her band, "Relax. I know these people."

Bocabello's efforts to make original jazz an integral part of life in the Garden City were facilitated by Nancy Alimanski, musical director of his concert series. Commenting on his choice of names for the event at Mt. Ida, "People Are Music," Bocabello stated, "The essential characteristics of both music and people are never-changing."

The cool jazz of the day was not enough for some listeners. Many, like the couple above, took refuge from the heat in a Mt. Ida pool.

Assessors deny forgery

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The city's chief assessing official has denied an Auburndale resident's claim that assessors are forging signatures on official documents and attempting to skirt the Proposition 2½ tax cap.

Assessment Administration Director Robert A. Palmer said Monday he has given permission to some members of his staff to sign his name on certain assessing documents and denied charges of forgery made by Stanton Avenue resident Joseph Weinfeld.

Palmer also said a total of 26 assessments were mistakenly omitted during the most recent tax billing, but added that the amount of taxes which the omitted assessments represent could not put the city beyond the Prop. 2½ tax cap.

In a letter delivered to the city clerk's office on July 12, which was sent to the city's 24 aldermen, as well as officials of the assessing and law departments, Weinfeld invoked the Freedom of Information Act and requested a copy of an alleged letter written by Palmer which permits his colleagues in the department to forge signatures.

Weinfeld's letter also asked for copies of all correspondence sent on or about June 6 and June 14 between the city and the state Department of Revenue regarding omitted assessments.

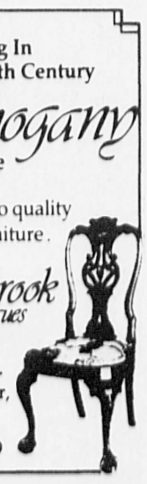

The request represents part of a continuing conflict between the stubborn 60-year-old Weinfeld and members of the city's assessing department. About three weeks ago, Weinfeld announced his intention to file a class action suit charging assessors here with fraud and asking for an injunction to stop any further issuance of tax bills until a full investigation of assessing procedures could be completed.

He also claims to have four other suits in the works, all alleging assessing improprieties under the broad taxation statutes of Massachusetts General Law Chapter 231A.

If more than two signatures of the three Board of Assessing members have been illegally forged onto taxation documents submitted to the state, Weinfeld claims, part or all of the city's entire assessment procedure may be rendered null and void.

Palmer said Monday, "I do not call giving someone my permission to affix my signature to a document forgery," adding that "many, many letters" have been signed by his secretary and by Moynihan, on occasion, all with his explicit permission.

Far-flung philanthropy

Waban resident John Matthews, chairman of the Ward 5 Republican Committee, has created considerable sound and fury with his recent condemnation of plans to rehabilitate the Columbia Point Housing Project.

In a letter to Phillip Abrams, former Ward 5 committee chairman who went to Washington a year ago to become undersecretary of the Dept. of Housing and Urban Development, Matthews protested "the waste of any more of our hard-earned tax dollars on the so-called 'rehabilitation' of the infamous" project.

Matthews complained that to rework the project without getting rid of the people living there would be absurd. Calling the area "a burned out, stinking, rat-infested byword for degradation and danger," he pointed out, "It was people who live there at public expense who did all these things."

Something about the people who live in the project — a sort of cancer that would affect anything they touched — was the cause of the deterioration of Columbia Point, Matthews suggested.

His letter was published in the Graphic on June 20. There was no written response that would imply that our readers were upset by Matthews assertions.

Three weeks later, when the summer doldrums had hit and real news was getting scarce, Matthews' letter was the focus of a front page story in the Boston press. The original story was followed by two "reaction" stories, in which official spokesmen from everything but the Boy Scouts of America commented on Matthews' bad judgement and speculated on the mental configurations that could give birth to such deranged thinking.

Finally, an editorial called Matthews' letter "a declaration of ignorance conceived in social isolation and dedicated to the proposition that 'we've got ours'" and "an incredible display of contempt by the affluent for the poor."

The Graphic finds little merit in either side of the argument.

Matthews and his colleagues seem to know little of what has gone on at Columbia Point except for what they have read in the newspapers.

If the Ward 5 Republican Committee is genuinely concerned for the fate of public housing, why do they have to go all the way to Columbia Point to do something about it? We have public housing in Newton, and it should merit their concerns first. Their attempt to do some good for a neighborhood so far away amounts to "far-flung philanthropy" — social service in its most dilettante form.

As for the reaction of the Boston press to Matthews' letter, members of the Ward 5 Republican Committee must be chuckling at the absolute "knee jerk" quality of the response from the media they euphemistically call "liberal." They made Matthews into a caricature of himself, extracting what meaning they wanted from his letter and leaving behind those parts that did not fit into their prefabricated mold. And then they ridiculed him.

Setting up a straw man and then beating the stuffing out of him is an old ploy. Granted, it has a certain cathartic effect that some people might find salubrious, but it never found anybody a place to live.

Guesstimating budget

By William Poole

Gov. Michael S. Dukakis' veto last week of any tax cut this year has kept the annual budget debate alive.

Every year, politicians on Beacon Hill make guesstimates of what revenue the state can expect for the new year. It's on such shaky ground that the budgetary spending levels for state government are set.

Under the state constitution, the governor cannot sign an unbalanced budget into law. He has said the fiscal 1985 budget submitted for his approval was about $132 million in the red. That's his guesstimate.

The majority of lawmakers who voted for tax reductions apparently have their own revenue guesstimates. The whole revenue guessing games seems to be played out on a giant rubber band that can be stretched any which-way, depending on who is doing the pulling. The process is just about as precise as that.

Whether Dukakis is totally committed to tax increases and the Legislature to reductions depends on how you look at it.

But even more puzzling than this exercise in elastic revenue forecasting is the way the legislators approved tax cuts this year and their lack of courage in showing up until now on whether they were really convinced they had done the right thing.

The tax reduction proposal wasn't submitted as part of any political party policy — or, for that matter, of any single politician or group of politicians. No one likes to explain why he or she favors any particular tax system over another.

The tax cut passed by the Legislature as a whole was basically decided by a few legislative leaders. They saw a chance for lawmakers in general to do the most popular thing during an election year, that is, pass a tax cut and then run away for a summer vacation without assuming any responsibility for what they had done.

They bugged out for a two-and-a-half month recess and had no plans to return until after the Sept. 18 primary.

That left Dukakis holding the bag, an embarrassing situation that could not have happened without the acquiescence of the governor's fellow Democrats.

If there was ever a reason — and there are many — for at least two strong political parties in Massachusetts, it was was what happened last week.

Such a chaotic state of affairs would not exist but for the rule of a few powerful leaders more interested in political gamesmanship than they are in developing coherent policies.

Only one lawmaker — Rep. John Flood, a Democratic maverick from Canton — noted the lack of policy during floor debate. He sharply criticized the way the tax cut proposal emerged in a $93 million supplemental budget for a fiscal year that had already ended.

The tax reduction plan was couched in the catchwords of an election year — phasing out of unearned income levies on the elderly and across-the-board income deductions for everyone, including tax credits for homemakers for the first time.

But how serious were the legislators? Will they be back before the primary to try to override gubernatorial vetoes or will they sail through the summer without explaining why their particular tax cut should be preferred over any other plan? Or even if there should be a tax cut at all?

Without any coherent policy, it seems it's just too easy to shun questions like that.

The value of us vs. them

By Jim Anderson

H.L. Mencken once wrote an essay translating into numbers the romance and folklore of popular American literature and journalism.

It was based on the question, "How many people could an American whip?" He deduced from the literature and newspapers of the times, including the sports pages, that one American (white, naturally, and male) could whip three Englishmen. But, according to the literature, it was assumed that one Englishman could whip three Frenchmen.

One Frenchman, or other (white) European, according to Mencken's analysis, could whip 16 Chinamen, and one Chinaman could probably handle X Abysinnians, any one of whom could whip Y Zulu tribesman.

And so it went, almost indefinitely. By geometric progression, Mencken was able to deduce that one American — according to the popular literature of the time — could easily whip 14,000 primitive tribesmen.

> By geometric progression, Mencken was able to deduce that one American — according to the popular literature of the time — could easily whip 14,000 primitive tribesmen.

Don Shanor, a former United Press International staffer and now a professor of journalism at Columbia University, once took the same idea and translated it into current journnalistic terms: "One American is worth ...."

Struck by the number of times he had seen tiny stories with the headline, "59 Perish in Mexico Bus Crash" squeezed in at the end of long, dramatic stories about the death of one American, he came to the conclusion that the Mencken formula can be applied to current American journalism.

The death of one American, in terms of column inches in American newspapers, he disovered, is equal to the demise of several thousand Tanzanians. Of course the timeliness of the report has a bearing, as does the drama surrounding it.

New evidence has come to hand that the formula still works. There is even a corollary: In terms of editorial interest, the death of one of "our" Chinese, when reported in a timely fashion, is worth the death of approximately 280,000 of "their" Chinese.

One day last week, not a terrifically busy news day, two stories on the UPI wires illustrate the point:

One story dealt with a mine explosion in Taiwan, where about 124 miners were trapped underground. Another reported new and meticulously accurate census figures from the Peoples Republic of China that revealed for the first time that at least 16 million people — and perhaps as many as 27 million — died in the catastrophic upheavals that resulted from Mao Tse-tung's ambitious but ill-conceived plan to drag his country into 20th century, the "Great Leap Forward."

According to the daily sampling of newspapers by UPI bureaus around the country, about 65 per cent of the country's newspapers carried the Taiwan story, but only about 20 per cent carried any mention of the "Great Leap" catastrophe, as reported by either of the major wire services.

The Taiwan story had drama, immediacy and was the sort of tragedy, that could easily be visualized by a newspaper reader — or editor. The census story was about an event that occurred some 25 years ago and the drama had to be inferred from the enormous death toll figures.

But, even taking into account those journalistic values, it is interesting to note that 80 per cent of the nation's newspapers are not interested enough in a major human disaster to devote even 2 inches of space to tell their readers about it as a matter of record.

The magnitude of the "Great Leap" death toll would be roughly equivalent, after all, to the state populations of New York or California being eliminated in mass starvation. The death toll in the "Great Leap" aftermath was three to five times as great, numerically, as the Holocaust in which 6 million Jews perished at the hands of the Nazis.

The only recent example of such a human catastrophe being ignored was in the forced starvation of the Ukraine by Stalin in the mid-1930s, in which the Soviet Union's wheat belt was turned into a starvation chamber for political reasons.

That, too, was mainly ignored by the American press, even when it came to light later, suggesting that in the Mencken formula one Ukrainian is about equal to one Mainland Chinese.

'Jim Smiths' of America

By Dick West

For what, if anything, it might portend for the presidential election in November, a team of Republicans named Jim Smith will play a team of Democrats named Jim Smith in an all-Jim Smith softball game Saturday at Boiling Springs, Pa.

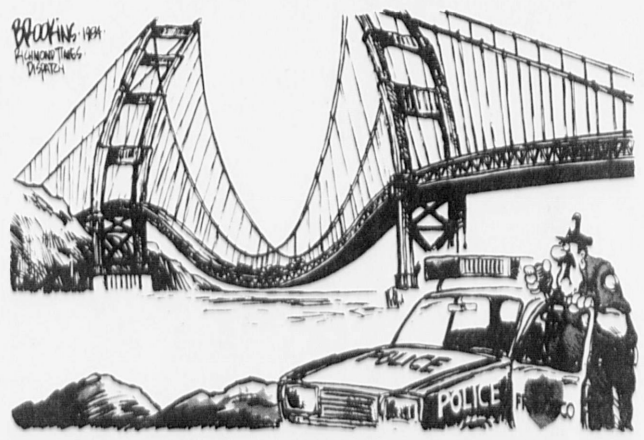

The starting lineups were sent to me by a presumably non-partisan Jim Smith, who publishes, of all things, a Jim Smith newsletter.

No matter how adroit afield a softballer may be, or how hot a bat he might swing, no player need apply if his name is just plain Tom, Dick or Harry Smith. Only genuine Jim Smiths will see action.

A player may, however, have a bizarre middle name, or use a different first initial, as in B. James Smith, provided he doesn't flaunt it.

Personally, I rather doubt the outcome of a six-inning softball game, even with a Jim Smith at every position, will presage very much politically. Of more import, if vaudeville ever makes a comeback, might be the impact on the old "Who's on first?" routine.

I can tell you, however, that any presidential candidate who ignores the Jim Smith vote does so at his own peril.

"THAT'S WHAT I SAID, CHIEF... MR. MONDALE TRIED TO BRING ALL HIS SPECIAL INTEREST GROUPS ACROSS THE BRIDGE AT THE SAME TIME!!"

At last count, the Jim Smith Society, which is sponsoring the softball game, had 1,240 members. That figure, of course, does not include the vast number of closet Jim Smiths who are lurking about omniwheres.

All together, they add up to a considerable political potential.

Considering all the hoopla that attended Walter Mondale's selection of a running mate, I was a little surprised the Democrats didn't put a Jim Smith on the ticket as a vice presidential candidate.

Taking nothing away from Mondale's choice, Geraldine Ferraro simply doesn't have the ring to it that Jim Smith has. Nor would it necessarily have been a sexist nomination.

I am told that one of the Jim Smiths attending the 1981 gathering at Boiling Springs was a woman. Had Mondale put out the word, there probably would have been a dozen or more female Jim Smiths showing up for interviews.

They wouldn't have come from Congress, however. Of the six Smiths currently serving in the House, only one, Rep. Virginia Smith, R-Neb., is a woman. Although definitely of the right gender, she has an unsuitable first name as well as the wrong party affiliation.

There aren't any Jims, not to say gems, among male Smiths in the House either.

Chris, Bob and Denny Smith are, like Virginia, Republicans. Reps. Larry Smith and Neal Smith, while sufficiently Democratic, lack first name creditability.

The Jim Smith who organized the softball game vowed there would be no batters' box or dugout exit polls to indicate how the players are leaning politically.

But surely there will be enough Jim Smiths in the grandstand to make a scientific sampling possible.

If I were a presidential candidate, I would not miss this opinion surveying opportunity. For there may be truth in the old maxim that "as Jim Smith goes, so goes the nation."

Fritz flopped

By Mary McGrory

SAN FRANCISCO — Happiness to some is a dangerous and suspect thing.

Include Walter Mondale in that group. Seeing happiness creep over the Democrats like the fog that sometimes visits this beautiful city, he moved quickly to snuff it out.

The preacher's son, hearing that his people had begun to talk wildly of beating Ronald Reagan, put a stop to it from Lake Tahoe. Thirty-six hours of euphoria, he apparently thought, was quite enough.

He took happiness out behind the barn and shot it right between the eyes.

All over the hotels, bars and coffee shops, Democrats had been babbling about Geraldine Ferraro, the breezy, brassy blonde who promised to be their Joan of Arc. The more they thought and talked about her, the more they found to praise. She could "keep up with George Bush," she could stand up to Reagan.

In something like rapture, they watched her on television. They devoured stories about her husband, her mother, her neighbors, her housekeeper.

Sen. Gary Hart, who would not give up, was receiving calls from previously staunch delegates who wanted to vote for Mondale on the first ballot just to show solidarity with his magical running mate. Californians, especially, did not wish to miss the great new wave.

Amnesty and hope were rampant. The wonder woman had diminished all threats and potential embarrassments.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson's thunders were reduced to hiccups. Even the appearance of Jimmy Carter, which the Democrats had been looking forward to like a visit from the Ancient Mariner, became a mere detail.

They contemplated four guilt-free days among the multiple fleshpots and eccentricities of the country's most charming city, where pleasure is a religion.

That was Thursday. On Friday the 13th it all came crashing down.

The Democrats found out that it had been only Queens for a day. Ferraro was not, it turned out, to be Joan of Arc. She was, instead, the angel of Dienbienphu, someone who could minister to the occupants of a doomed and surrounded fortress, but not save them.

Mondale, for reasons known only to himself, had decided to fire Democratic National Chairman Charles T. Manatt and to put in his place Bert Lance, the Georgia Democratic state chairman. Lance is Jimmy Carter's good buddy, the small-town banker whose borrowings and lendings had finally landed him in federal court, where, as beleaguered Mondale operatives fending off phone calls were saying lamely, he had been exonerated. It was the Reagan standard of personnel management.

Bert Lance? The Democrats were unbelieving, appalled.

They sent up a howl that could have been clearly heard in the all-but-nominee's lakeside lodge. Hart laughed out loud on hearing the news. The "genius" who had picked Ferraro instantly became the "bonehead" who chose Lance.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill raged about the unseamliness of firing Manatt in his own home state, about the folly of stomping the good-times roll of Ferraro stories. Three Nebraska Mondale delegates announced they would switch to Hart. Labor laid it on the line: Either Mondale pulled back his right-to-work choice or it was all over.

Why? A number of explanations, which added up to none, were proffered.

It was to please Jesse Jackson, who gets along with Bert — Jackson promptly called the selection "a fiasco." It was because Mondale "owed" Lance for his desperately needed primary victory in Georgia. It was to please the South, which was shaken by the Ferraro bombshell. Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., made short work of that one — "I can introduce her more rythmically than Mondale down there — they're very enthusiastic."

His suggestion was that Mondale "must be a secret mole for Ronald Reagan." The only special interest served seemed to be the death wish or some Calvinist conviction that suffering is good for the soul.

By Saturday night, word came that Lance would not, after all, be chairman of the party, but only of the Mondale campaign. The change did not relieve the massive heartburn.

Ferraro had promised to remove the Carter albatross from Mondale's neck. He may have felt uncomfortable without it.

Why else pick it up and put it back in place, making sure that he would be pegged throughout the campaign by a living reminder of the miserable years of hostages, sweaters and "malaise"?

Two people were enchanted: Bert Lance, whose vindication is, naturally, a matter of intense moment and personal interest to him; and Reagan, whose dream of running against Carter again has been handed back to him by his opponent.

As for the Democrats, strangers to joy once more, they have their memories of what was the equivalent of a wartime romance or "just one of those things."

A new member for the Fourth Estate

By John Moroney
Correspondent

For better or for worse, for richer or for poorer, in sickness and in health, until death do us part, I have decided to become a member of the illustrious Fourth Estate with all its assets and imperfections.

I'm not really sure why journalism interested me as a career-partner. Certainly, it's not because of my commanding use of English prose or grammar. If that had been the case, I'd probably be a talk show host.

Since I am only student (Northeastern University) of journalism, I am obviously not as qualified as George Will or William F. Buckely to comment on the state of the news media; but the newspaper industry is very special to me. It tugs my heart as well as my family's heritage. For that reason, I feel amply qualified.

My grandfather, Thomas J. Moroney, God rest his soul, was a newsman.

Even though he never spent an afternoon in front of a new-fangled Video Display Terminal writing a story - only to have the first paragraph glanced at briefly by readers who were too busy - he was still what I consider a consummate newspaperman.

He monitored the pulse of a small Connecticut community, not through committee meetings or dramatic prose, but through his position as circulation manager for the Meriden Journal.

Thomas J. 'Scoop' Moroney

Even now, on the rare occasions when I return to the small Connecticut city with my father, the older generation still speaks of "Scoop" Moroney with deep admiration for his role as a pillar of the community.

I never met my grandfather. He died of a heart attack shortly after I was born. But my tenure with Transcript Newspapers has given me insight into what kind of life he led during his professional career.

Thomas J. Murphy, senior editor of The News-Tribune, reminds me of the kind of newsman he must have been and the kind the newest generation of journalists should emulate.

I'm not referring to the fact that they share the same first name, or the same distinguished silver hair and brilliant Irish smile; but rather, they share the same dedication to and attitudes toward the newspaper profession in their respective communities.

Both men, with a combined total of more than 100 years in the newspaper business, became pillars of their communities because they saw their newspapers as organizations which operate as part of the community, and not independently.

Waltham is Murphy's: Meriden was Moroney's.

These gentleman of the press are a far cry from the type of newsman, Bill Kurtz, one of my professor at Northeastern University, claims a young upstart should pattern themselves after.

Kurtz once told my class, "The only way you're going to succeed in this business is if you are an S.O.B."

Hogwash!

Thomas J. Murphy and Thomas J. Moroney are the type of newsmen young individuals should aspire to.

If they had been in class on that early spring morning, they would have censured Kurtz for a such degrading comment.

They did not resort to extortion and arrogance in order to gain information from a community member. Their information and sources were gained through honesty, faith, and trust, which each man saw as important links between the community and the paper.

"Mr. Waltham" and "Mr. Meriden" were and are, instead, gentlemen of their craft who knew the talents they possessed were gifts to be given to the entire community, regardless whether or not it grabbed them a headline.

Maybe the news industry is experiencing a generation gap?

Newsmen like Thomas Murphy and "Scoop" Moroney dedicated their entire lives to making journalism an honored profession. The new breed of reporters seem to find Kurtz's school of arrogance and self-centerness more provocative and interesting. Hopefully, the gap will close on this new generation of so-called journalists. Otherwise, I might reconsider the game show host position.

Council is accused of dividing the neighborhood

Schools (CSNS) with using a June 5 public hearing "as a forum for criticizing the Council's support of Hyde School and airing their views on the school closing issue."

The hearing before the full board, ostensibly called to air residents' views about the importance of villages to the city's character, took place after Mirsky and the NHNAC, acting in support of the Campaign for Village Schools (CVS), gathered enough certified signatures to require the session.

An angry Regan called Mirsky's letter, which charged CSNS with altering the hearing's format in order to switch discussion from city-wide issues to only Highlands-oriented ones, "biased, misleading and untrue."

"Not once did the Coalition discourage, disrupt or ridicule anyone participating in the hearing. Let's stop kidding the public. The hearing was called (by NHNAC) to pressure the aldermen present to agree upon a resolution that could have influenced the referendum election and not to discuss the village concept," according to Regan, who said he "strongly supported" the CSNS effort. He described the group as being comprised of residents from "most of the villages and wards in the city."

The NHNAC is a local area council established under Article IX of the city's charter to encourage citizen involvment at the neighborhood level.

After the hearing, which 150 people from across the city attended, the full board met the night before the June 20 vote on the Hyde to discuss a possible resolution regarding village vitality, but Ward 8 Alderman Robert L. Shuman used a parlimentary procedure to halt the session, thereby short-circuiting any attempt to link a resolution with the referendum. The next day, close to 10,000 voters went to the polls and chose to close the school by a 3-2 margin.

Responding to a portion of Mirsky's letter which called CSNS criticism of the Council "only divisive," Regan said, "If anything has fragmented the Newton Highlands, it's the NHNAC. Its name implies that it represents the whole of Newton Highlands when it doesn't. It represents only a small part of the Highlands, basically the Hyde area."

"Susan Mirsky should not be pointing an accusing finger at anybody," he added, saying he has received numerous phone calls from Highlands residents complaining because the NHNAC has limited its membership to only the Hyde area, leaving citizens of Winchester Street, west of Route 9 and from part of Ward 5 unrepresented.

Regan also chastized Mirsky for thinking that - because her group gathered the signatures to hold the public hearing - members of other groups or residents with different viewpoints should not be given time to have their say.

"A public hearing is governed by established rules on format so all people have the same amount of time to talk. The Hyde closing was discussed openly by all sides - pro and con," he said, adding that Board President Carol Ann Shea made it clear the night of the session that residents with opposing opinions would take turns addressing aldermen.

Regan, a Newton Centre resident, also indirectly charged the Highlands' aldermanic representatives with "forgetting that they have the rest of the neighborhood and the city to be concerned with. I think you have to represent the whole city or the whole ward, not just parts of either," he said, adding that the judge of the quality of his colleagues' representation will be "the next election."

Ward 5 Alderman Michael Malec, Regan's at-large colleague in Ward 6 Rodney Barker and Ward 6 Alderman George Mansfield all were outspoken in the effort to keep the Hyde open. Theoretically, aldermen elected from "at-large" represent all areas of the city.

Hassle-free travel with kids explained

A week later, the Waban couple started to research their own vacation manual for parents.

Published in May by Harvard Common Press, "How to Take Great Trips With Your Kids" ($14.95 cloth, $8.95 paper) is much more than a travel guide. From tips on choosing a vacation style, to planning daily activities, to keeping the kids happy in restaurants, museums and in transit, the Portnoys' book outlines a new way of thinking about family travel.

The first step in planning any vacation is sitting down and talking about what you want to get from it, explains Sanford Portnoy, 40, a psychologist who works with children, adults and families.

"You can start by talking out loud," agreed Joan Portnoy, 38, a former speech pathologist and child development researcher who is now home fulltime with the couple's two children. "You can say, 'I'm tired. I want to be waited on' or 'I'm bored. I feel like I'm in a rut. I need something to get me going again.'

"People think in order to have a good vacation, it needs to be an exciting vacation," she added. "Sometimes you just need quiet and relaxation."

In a group vacation, the styles, needs and interests of each person must be taken into account, says the well-traveled duo. Parents should consider the ages and abilities of their kids and balance them with their own adult needs.

Parents may even find, sometimes, that what they really need is a trip by themselves.

But deciding on a family tour of Europe, a camping expedition in the White Mountains or a quiet cottage at the beach is only the first step. Next, you need to choose the right place and plan the day-to-day details of your vacation.

You need to be a "smart shopper," say the Portnoys. But, they add, you don't have to deny yourself things just because you're with your children.

"You need to ask, ask, ask," Joan emphasized. "'What kind of 'family plans' do you have? Can I do this more cheaply? Do you have booster seats and high chairs?'

"You'd be surprised at the nice restaurants that have booster seats and high chairs," she said. "And no one ever gives their cheapest price first."

Right now, the economy is ripe for family travel, stressed her husband. Luxury hotels that serve mainly business travelers slash their rates on weekends and often offer phenomenally low family packages. Conversely, those catering to pleasure travelers give great deals during the week, he noted.

When you've got the basic details of "where" and "when" taken care of, the next problem is sorting out just what to do with your time and how to keep both the kids and you from getting tired and antsy, say the Portnoys.

A blend of personal experience and interviews with scores of parents and travel industry representatives, led to hundreds of tips on how to keep family spirits from flagging — and some painful examples of what happens when parents don't take the time to plan.

"That (Washington, D.C.) trip was just a monument to bad planning," Sanford recalled. "We made the most common mistake in family travel: we tried to do too much in too short a time. . . We didn't take into account ages and abilities. We didn't bring the right equipment and toys. And we didn't reserve accommodations ahead of time."

They have learned a lot since that trip.

When you schedule your vacation activities, "plan a little less than you can do," Joan advised. "Then you can just rest or go back and do something else."

The Portnoys suggest alternating different types of activities. They also recommend scheduling time, perhaps in a park or hotel pool, for kids to run around, yell and not worry about being on their best behavior.

Parents need to give themselves and each other a break from the children once in a while, the first-time authors recommend. One parent can take the kids for an hour, an afternoon or a whole day while the other visits a museum, shops or just rests. The kids can join in an organized activity at a hotel or campground or you can even get a babysitter and take an evening off.

Babysitters can be found almost anywhere, the Portnoys say. They suggest waiting until you're going to be in the same place for several days and giving the kids the first couple of days to adjust before leaving them. Sitters can be found through hotels and tourist offices, or, if you're renting a house, through the rental agency or local chamber of commerce.

When preparing for your trip, you should pack for size, variety and versatility, Joan advises. "The smaller the better" applies to clothes, games and equipment.

She also recommends grouping items such as beach gear together by use, rather than packing them separately in each family member's suitcase. A friend of the Portnoys' who drove cross-country with eight kids suggested a similar idea.

"Instead of dividing the suitcases according to person, pack a different one for each day, with a set of clean clothes apiece," they write. "The rest can stay in the car each night."

Regan wants to end private use of aldermen's stationery

By Frank Mulligan, Staff Writer

NEWTON — In a response to the furor surrounding last month's unauthorized use of aldermanic stationery in a letter supporting the effort to keep the Hyde Elementary School open, an amendment has been proposed prohibiting any future unauthorized use.

The proposal "prohibiting the unauthorized personal use of official aldermanic stationery", submitted by Alderman James P. Regan, is docketed for a Legislation and Rules Committee meeting Wednesday night.

Regan said, "When Paul Coletti had to get up in front of the board and defend himself and say he didn't know the official stationery was going to be used — it frightens me a bit that it could happen to me. That's why I decided to docket the item."

A letter printed on the official stationery was distributed by the Campaign for Village Schools (CVS) to PTA presidents throughout the city the day before the June 20 referendum on the fate of the Hyde School.

The letter, signed by Ward 5 Alderman-at-Large Paul E. Coletti and Ward 1 Alderman-at-Large Sondra L. Shick, explained a possible procedure whereby supplementary appropriations could be used to continue funding the school, a procedure not mentioned in a letter published by six members of the School Committee stating a reversal in their decision to close the Hyde would necessitate a $300,000 cut in the school budget.

The one-page letter dated June 15 was intended, Coletti and Shick said previously, to provide accurate information for the voters so they could make a more informed decision and was not the official position of themselves or the board.

They agreed to write the letter on plain paper for distribution to local newspapers only but CVS co—president Ann Rawls reprinted and edited the letter on official board stationery, which lists the names of every Alderman in the city, and changed the titles used by Coletti and Shick to indicate their chairman and vice-chairman positions on the aldermanic committee, without their knowledge or permission.

The original letter the two agreed to sign only identified them as "members, Newton Board of Aldermen."

Regan said the issue of the unauthorized use of the stationery was "more or less dropped quickly" and he added that he wanted to find out how the stationery came into Rawls' hands so that a similar controversy could be avoided in the future.

"Aldermen receive the stationery for official letters to constituents or for other official reasons. I don't think that just anybody could walk down to city hall and get it in the clerk's office. Nobody really knows how this happened. When we find out we can take measures to see it doesn't happen again," Regan said.

Regan added it bothered him that his name was included in the letterhead of the unauthorized CVS letter when "it was no secret" to his constituents that he had been a proponent of consolidation and in favor of closing the Hyde.

Ann Rawls said, "The issue is completely misunderstood. They can pass all kinds of rules on the use of stationery but it wouldn't have anything to do with the case in question," and that Regan "was laboring under a misunderstanding."

Rawls, who has refused to say how she got the official stationery, said she would probably attend Wednesday night's meeting.

Rawls said that, although Coletti told a newspaper to delete his title of FinCom chairman and make the letter personal rather than official, he did not tell her. She added that, when he found himself caught in the middle of the issue, he "lashed out."

The unauthorized distribution of Rawls' letter prompted an infuriated response by Coletti who officially disclaimed the letter on the floor of the board the night before the referendum and said he felt "used" by the letter since he had decided to stay out of the issue after "having been involved in consolidations in past years."

Rawls said at the time that she purposely put the CVS logo, along with the disclaimer "Distributed by the Campaign for Village Schools" in large print at the bottom of the letter so it would not be confused with an official aldermanic document. She apologized to Coletti for giving the wrong impression.

Regan said that Coletti was just barely given the chance to clear himself and disassociate himself from the letter before the board the night before the referendum vote.

Rawls said "I told Paul Coletti I would explain that I did that, that it was my mistake the letter appeared official and that should be the end of it."

'Direct violations' led to fiesta fireworks ban

"A lot of people don't realize there wasn't a legal display down there (from 1935 when the festival first began until 1982 when he issued the first fireworks permit), there were only illegal displays," he said.

Reilly, who has headed up the Fire Department for the last five years, said he was "the first fire chief in 30 years" to ever grant a permit for the ground display usually held in the parking lot of the Our Lady Help of Christians Church and school complex.

He had previously refused permit requests in 1980 and 1981 from the society's president, Lincoln Road resident Anthony Gentile, and his "two predecessors" in the department had also consistently denied such applications, the chief added.

According to Reilly, Gentile violated the conditions of both the previously issued permits, with the first incident occurrring in 1982 when about six aerial rockets were shot into the air and again in 1983 when "over 50" airborne rockets were exploded. The permits allowed only ground display shows of the anchored pinwheel variety, but the enthusiasm they created led to more disorderly and unauthorized explosions by numerous individuals, he said.

The fire chief admitted he never gave Gentile formal notice of the permit violations, but said he did so because he did not want to endanger Gentile's professional reputation.

The 42-year-old Gentile, who says he has put on over 600 fireworks displays of all sizes over the last 20 years without a serious incident, works part-time for Telstar Fireworks Display of New Hampshire. Recently, Gentile, who is bonded by the state's fire marshall's office, arranged a 30-minute display in honor of Waltham's centennial that was insured for $1 million and, last year, insured his show at Our Lady's for $300,000.

"I believe that if I had put that in writing he would have lost his license and I think he's well aware of this," said Reilly, who added that Gentile is licensed as "a competent operator of fireworks, not a pyrotechinical expert."

"Fireworks are considered Class C explosives. He should not be considered an expert in the explosives field," he said.

Beside the past permit violations, there were other reasons for this year's denial, according to Reilly.

Measurements taken by fire prevention officers showed there would not be a minimum of 200 feet of clearance between the display site and the nearest public buildings as required by state law, noise complaints from residents of Nonantum and in other sections of the city and the possibility of children picking up potentially dangerous remnants of unexploded fireworks all contributed to the permit denial, he said.

"I've gotten a strong reaction from people down there (Nonantum) and I've gotten complaints from people in that neighborhood and others. These fireworks wouldn't go off until 11 p.m.. People have said there were ethnic reasons and people have said there were political reasons. It was neither of those. It is a public safety issue and it's my responsibility to be on the alert for the safety of all the people in Nonantum and the safety of the whole city," Reilly said.

He also pointed out that fire chiefs throughout the state have consistently come out against the use of fireworks and even wary of displays in licensed situations, but added that enforcement of state laws prohibiting the illegal use of fireworks is up to the police department.

Reilly said that once he saw Gentile's name as "the competent operator" on the permit application filed by the society this year, he "didn't even look" at it, he just put the document in the original envelope and mailed it back to the society's orator Dominic Messina "a week or two after" receiving it.

"I told them (society members) last year that I wouldn't give him (Gentile) another permit. I didn't say I wouldn't give it to the society, just not to him," he said, adding that he reiterated his refusal in a meeting with Nonantum community leaders and informed Mayor Theodore D. Mann of his intentions by phone just before the session.

Asked why he would not give in to requests made during that meeting to compromise on the permit by allowing the display to take place in another location or under stricter fire department supervision, Reilly replied, "Everybody's looking for a compromise. I can't compromise on the law. There is simply not enough room for a supervised display at Our Lady's."

"It's a shame we couldn't get together and work the whole situation out. We could have made it work. Our 50th anniversary is next year and, as far as I'm concerned, for all parties involved, there's no way we can't come together," said Gentile, who received a letter Saturday from Waltham Mayor Arthur J. Clark thanking him for the spectacular fireworks display he recently arranged in honor of that city's centennial.

The carnival at the Hawthorn Playground featured the traditional selection of rides, games, cotton candy, candied apples, fired dough, sausage subs and, on Sunday night, a spirited performance by students of the Scalzi School of Dance from Watertown.

The "color game," which costs players 50 cents to guess the which colored cup a rubber ball will come to rest in, was by far the most popular tent and many people could be seen walking about the festival clutching fluffy white unicorns and other assorted stuffed animals.

"That's what we built the thing on - the fact that people can win. Look at how many prizes people have. If you give them something for their money, they keep coming back and coming back," said Larry Cushing, who has taken his carnival business all over the state for the last 16 years.

Alderman Elaine Gentile and her husband, Bernie, went directly to the color game when they arrived at the festivities, but Gentile, still smoldering over Reilly's permit decision, came away empty-handed.

"I'm disappointed about the whole thing. I think there was room for compromise. We could have discussed it in detail, but he (Reilly) had a closed mind about the whole thing," she said. Her aldermanic colleagues, Ronald Marini, Carol Robinson and Michael Malec, also could be seen enjoying the final night of the festival.

Tony Gentile, who has led the group for the last 18 years, estimated the society would come away from the event with about a $2,000 profit, enough, he said, for seed money to begin preparing for next year's celebration.

Later, while delivering opening remarks to residents jammed into Our Lady's, a smiling Gentile spoke in Italian to the mostly elderly crowd and vowed to work hard until next July for a festival and fireworks display fitting of the society's 50th anniversary, remarks which were greeted by applause from the parishoners.

Marie Westerkamp

Marie C. Deignan marries Michiel Westerkamp of Newton

Marie Cecile Deignan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Diegnan, Jr. of Watertown, was married on May 19, to Mr. Michiel Westerkamp, son of Mr. and Mrs. Johann Westerkamp of Newton.

Deignan is a graduate of the Newton Country Day School of the Sacred Heart and of Boston College. Westerkamp was graduated from Boston College.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents.

Cathorine Albanese

Catherine Albanese, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Albanesee of Newton was selected for competition in the Modern Miss State Finals to be held at the Quality Motor Inn in Chicopee at 8 p.m., Aug. 1.

Modern Miss has selected outstanding young women from all over the state to participate in the activities. The program is designed to recognize young women, 13 to 18, who excel in scholastic achievement and community involvement. Contestants are judged on poise, personality, grooming, and a speech or talent presentation, as well as scholastic and civic achievements. Entrants must have an "80" or better grade average and document at least 10 hours volunteer service to a community or charitable organization.

The competition is the official state preliminary for the Modern Miss National Finals to be held in January, 1985. Modern Miss Finalists from all 50 states will compete for $15,000 in scholarship awards, a queens wardrobe, a personal appearance and travel contract and mony other prizes.

Albanese was a student at Newton North High School. Her activities include: football and soccer cheerleading; Orchesis jazz dancing; flute playing in the Newton North Concert Band; singing in the "Sisters" choral group; membership in CYO Corpers Christ Church in Auburndale; and she was an exchange student in Spain.

Darren John born to Cormier family

John E. and Anita Cormier of Waltham proudly announce the birth of their first child, Darren John, born on June 30, 1984 at the Waltham Hospital.

Joining the proud parents in their announcement are the grandparents: Mr. Edgar Eglitis of Littleton; Mrs. Velta Eglitis of Newton; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph G. Cormier of Waltham; and the great grandmothers: Mrs. Zelma Muizulis of Newton and Mrs. Anna Eglitis of Jamaica Plain.

Shaina Mareve born to Tofias family

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Tofias of Wayland are pleased to announce the birth of their daughter, Shaina Mareve, at Newton-Wellesley hospital on June 26, 1984.

Judith Ann Green weds Thomas David Mahoney

Judith Ann Green of New Hampshire was married to Thomas David Mahoney, also of New Hampshire, at Sacred Heart Church in Wilton, New Hampshire on May 5. The Fr. Alfred Janne Ha - priest of Sacred Heart Church, officiated at the double ring ceremony. Decorations were two mum plants, bouquets of flowers and four bows for the pews.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. Arthur C. Green of Sherborn, N.H. and Mrs. Emma L. Olson of New Hampshire. She was given in marriage by her father.

Maid of honor was Mrs. Angela Clark of Newton, cousin to the bride. Bridesmaids included: Miss Deborah Ann Green of Nashua, N.H., sister of the bride; Miss Katherine Marie Green of Nashua, N.H., sister of the bride; Doris Louise Conzo of Waltham; and Mrs. Lori Ann Robinson of Greenville, N.H., sister of the bridegroom.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr Raymond R. Mahoney of New Hampshire and Ms. Carol G. Mahoney of New Hampshire.

His brother, Steven Michael Mahoney of New Hampshire, was the best man. Ushers included: Raymond Robert Mahoney, Jr. of N.H., brother of the bridegroom; Douglas Paul Clark of Newton, cousin of bride; Dàniel Walter Mahoney of N.H., brother of the bridegroom; and Timothy Patrick Mahoney of N.H., brother of bridegroom.

Day Camp registration underway

Registrations for the Newton Community Service Center's Summer Day Camp programs for children two years, nine months to 12 years of age are now underway daily at the center's facility at 492 Waltham St., West Newton, or through mailed applications which are available by phoning 969-5906 daily.

The Older Camp for boys and girls from six and a half to 12 years of age includes a private camp site located at Hale Camping Reservation in Westwood, offering 30 acres of tree-covered land, swimming facilities, cookout accomodations and 1200 acres of long, winding nature trails.

Campers leave by bus from the Newton Country Day School of the Sacred Heart in Newton Center each morning Monday through Friday at 9 a.m. and return at approximately 4 p.m., 3 p.m. on Fridays. There is no additional fee for the bus ride to and from Westwood.

The younger camp for boys and girls two years, nine months to six years of age includes a rich variety of activities - indoor and outdoor games, arts and crafts, music, creative movement, swimming and special events. This program, located on the grounds of the Newton Country Day School of the Sacred Heart, 785 Centre St., Newton, will be divided according to age into small groups.

Due to the increased number of families needing additional care for children before and after the standard camp day, NCSC Inc. is offering the following alternatives hours: 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.; 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.; 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.; and 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Firms chosen for school reuse feasibility project

By Frank DeBenedetto
Correspondent

The Designer Selection Committee chose five architectural firms last week for interviews to see which will do the proposed $30,000 feasibility study on the reuse of the Warren Junior High School as a main library.

The five firms were chosen from nine that originally submitted applications to complete the study.

According to the committee the five firms are: A. Anthony Tappe and Associates, a Boston Firm; Cole and Goyette Architects and Planners Inc., of Cambridge; HMFH Architects Inc., of Cambridge; Monacelli Associates Inc, also of Cambridge; and Whitman and Howard Inc., of Wellesley.

The study will be used to decide whether it is feasible, financially, practically and architecturally, to use the Warren building as the site for a new main library, according to Paul Snyder, chairman of the Warren Junior High School Joint Planning Advisory Committee.

> 'The (Warren) building has the potential to be a great public facility.' Paul Snyder

According to Committee Chairman Joseph Michelson, the final five applicants were chosen on the basis of their competence and professional experience in this field.

Several of the applicants chosen have already done library and school work, according to information on their applications.

According to Snyder, the Warren building would be the ideal site for the new library.

"The reuse committee feels strongly, as do the Friends of the Library that this particular building would be ideal both economically and aesthetically," he said, mentioning that the building was also easily accessible because of its location on Route 16.

Snyder said that the proposed renovation would cost between $3 and $4 million, and that these funds could come from a number of sources.

Snyder pointed out that opponents of the library-reuse idea want the building to be used for municipal purposes.

"The building has the potential to be a great public facility," he said. "The citizens of the city should get the full benefit of a new library," he said.

The final five applicants will be interviewed next Thursday at Newton City Hall.

Post 440 in Musial victory

Abromson 5-hits Acton, 6-1

NEWTON — Rob Abromson didn't let the heat get to him Sunday, but rather let his heat get to Acton, as the University of Tampa junior hurled a five-hitter to pace Newton's Post 440 to a 6-1 victory in Stan Musial baseball action at Lincoln Park.

The lefthander struck out seven en route to the complete game win, which upped his club's record to 6-13-2. In addition to his fastball, Abromson kept the Acton swingers off balance with a hard curveball and a decent slider. The hurler also got himself a hit and an RBI in the game.

Post 440 jumped out in front with three runs in the bottom of the first. John Stephenson walked and Steve DiBenedetto doubled to set the stage for Joe Spagnuolo, who hit a sacrifice fly to score the first run. John Corsi followed by drawing a walk and Ralph Berry came through with another sacrifice fly to make it two-zip. Jorg Bassiacos closed the rally with an RBI single.

The Newton team added to its lead when Berry laced an RBI single in the third frame. The first baseman, who graduated from the University of Tampa this year, went 1-for-3 with a pair of RBIs for the winners.

Acton scored its only run of the contest in the top of the fourth stanza when John Simourian ripped an RBI single to score Bob Kostro, who had reached on an error. Simourian was Acton's only bright spot of the day. The designated hitter went 2-for-3.

Spagnuolo made the score 5-1 with a run-scoring single in the bottom of the fourth. The center fielder rescued two runs for the Post 440 club.

Post 440 closed the contest with one more tally in the fifth inning when Bassiacos singled and stole second before Abromson collected his RBI to ice the cake. Bassiacos, of North Adams State College, also had a good game for the winners. He had a perfect performance with the bat, going 3-for-3 with a ribbee and one run scored.

Friday, Post 440 started its weekend in fine fashion with a 14-3 upset victory over Waltham's Embassy Trophy team in a game played at Bentley. Westfield State graduate Phil Mitchell allowed only four hits to a Waltham team best known for its offensive power.

Newton took a 2-0 lead in the top of the first on an RBI single by Corsi and a sacrifice fly by Berry before Embassy evened things up with a pair in its half of the frame. In Waltham's half, Mitchell had early control problems and walked the first three batters he faced before getting to work. The two runs scored on fielder's choices.

Post 440 surged back into the frontrunner's position in the second inning with a pair of runs on four hits. Joe Burkett and Spagnuolo each had RBI singles to drive home the runs.

The Newton team proceeded to add to its advantage in the fourth with three more markers. Spagnuolo was involved once again as he recorded another RBI. He went 2-for-3 and played a solid game in center field for the winners. Corsi also had a run batted in for Post 440. The third baseman, who plays for St. Leo's of Florida, had a great day at the plate with a 4-for-5 effort, a pair of ribbees and three runs scored.

Joe Spagnuolo drove in two for Post 440

Berry also drove in a run in that frame.

With a comfortable 7-2 lead Post 440 left no doubt as to the winner by exploding for seven runs in the top of the fifth. The key hit in the inning was recorded by Bassiacos, who launched a three-run double into the right-center field gap.

Embassy could only respond with one more run in the bottom of the fifth, when John Giusti hit into a fielder's choice to score Bob Cappadona.

Tuesday, Tufts University all-star John Giusti drove in two runs with a pair of hits and flashed the leather in center field to boost Embassy Trophy to a 7-2 win over Post 440.

Embassy Trophy jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the top of the third as Steve Scafidi and Bob Cappadonna each reached on errors before Giusti drove the pair home with a double to left-center field. Cliff Richardson drew a walk and Scott LaForest singled home Giusti before Steve LaForest singled Richardson across to close the rally. Scott LaForest put in a good effort for Embassy Trophy with a two-for-four showing.

The Waltham team upped its edge to 5-0 in the fifth when Richardson tripled to left-center to drive home Giusti, who had reached earlier in the inning with a hot-shot single.

Post 440 got one run back in the bottom of that frame when John Stephenson walked and took second on a ground out before Joe Morgan singled him across.

Newton's last run of the game came in the sixth stanza when Ralph Berry singled and later scored on a ground out by Rob Abromson.

American Legion

Faggas boosts Post 440 to win

NEWTON — A two-run single by Nick Faggas in the fifth inning lifted Newton Post 440 over Billerica, 7-6, in American Legion baseball action Sunday at Billerica.

Jimmy Proia threw three innings of strong relief in his first mound appearance this season, only allowing one hit, to pick up the win.

Billerica held a 6-5 lead as Proia led off the top of the fifth. He promptly drew a walk, and advanced to second on a wild pitch. Chris Bercury then hit for starter Tommy Casey, and lined a single to right which put runners on the corners.

After Matt Noone hit a fly to right which was too short to deliver Proia, Faggas scored both runners with a single up the middle. It was the first hit of the day for the backstop; he had drawn three walks previously.

Post 440 had taken an early 1-0 lead in the top of the first. Faggas walked, went to second on a single by Joe King, and when Joe Noone hit a shot which was turned into a twin-killing, Faggas went to third. Jeff Sherman followed with a walk, and left fielder Nick Gingola singled to left to drive in the first run of the game.

Billerica countered with one of its own in the bottom of the frame to even the score, and that's how it stood for two innings.

In the top of the third, Joe Noone ripped a long double to center and went to third when Sherman's hard grounder to second was misplayed, putting runners on first and third. Colin Ryan then unloaded a high sacrifice fly to left which was so deep that Noone didn't even draw a throw as he crossed the plate.

Billerica got its big inning in the bottom of the third, scoring four and batting around the order. Dave Lyons began the frame by reaching on an error. Gary DiSarcina hit a seeing-eye single between third and short, and after a wild pitch, both were in scoring position. Ron Janicki knocked in a run with a single up the middle.

With runners at the corners, Rico Janicki reached on an error to load the bases. Mark Gallison bounced out to score DiSarcina, and Scott Crandall followed with a single to right center which scored two more.

Newton tied the score at five with three in the top of the fourth. John O'Brien singled sharply to right, and after Faggas drew his third straight free pass, King singled to load the bases, and Joe Noone cleared them up with a booming triple to center.

Billerica came back with another run to take the lead, 6-5. Losing pitcher Bill Cooley smashed a shot to left which gave Billerica the edge.

Proia then came in for Casey, allowing only one hit the rest of the way. The righthander was making a delayed hurling debut because of ligament troubles which plagued him early in the season.

With the win, Post 440 moved to 10-10 in its initial season.

Unfortunately, the rest of the weekend wasn't as succesful for the Newton team, as it dropped a game to Natick on Saturday, and one to Somerville on Friday.

The powerful Natick squad ran away from the Post 440 starters, 12-5, and the lone bright spots on the day were two subs. Matt Noone came off the bench to knock in two runs, and Casey smacked two hits and scored two runs for the losers.

On Friday, at least it was a closer contest, but the end result was the same. Somerville scored three in the bottom of the fifth to win it, 5-3.

In the fifth, Kevin Marsellio led off with a walk, stole second, and after two were out, Vin Vindice singled to left to score him. On the throw to the plate, there was a costly error that kept eventual loser King from getting out of the inning.

Chris Slattery took advantage of the miscue with a single, plating Vindice, and after Slattery stole second, Mike DeMarco scored him with a single.

Newton had tallied two runs in the fourth to take a 2-1 lead. After two were gone, King singled to left, and Sherman walked to put runners on first and second. Chuck Proia singled to score King, and Ryan delivered Sherman with a single.

The fifth inning saw Newton take a 3-1 lead on Joe Noone's single to center which knocked in Alex DeNucci, but the three-run Somerville fifth ended hopes of another Newton victory.

POST 440(7)-Faggas 1-1; King 5-3; J.-Noone 4-2; Sherman 3-0; Gingola 4-2; Ryan 3-0; Proia 3-0; Casey 2-1; Bercury 2-2; O'Brien 2-1; M.Noone 2-0. Tot. 31-12.

Copp All-Stars topple Murphy in International

NEWTON — The Copp Division took advantage of a 12-run first inning to defeat the Murphy Division soundly, 19-15, in the Newton International League's All-Star game on Saturday Night at Albemarle.

The winners pounded Murphy pitcher Anthony Calcagni for fourteen runs in the first two frames, but the Murphy players tried to make a game of it by coming back with five in the bottom of the first. Anthony Whiting led the charge with a three-run homer to left.

The Copp All Stars added another two in the top of the second, and Murphy's got one on david Seghorn's line drive round-tripper to left which made the score 14-6.

The losers attempted to creep back into the game with another in the third. Danny Monbouquete singled and scored on Evan Galanis. One more scored in the bottom of the fifth when Nick Mariano tripled and came home on an error.

In the fifth, the Murpy's scored five, in an attempt to claw back to contention. Mariano drove in two with a single to right, Tom Blay plated another with a single, and Paul Kearney doubled to left to score another pair.

The five-run fifth brought the score to 19-13. The losers added another two on David St. Germaine's two-run homer to account for the final score of 19-15.

Little League tourney

Newton West advances to final 3

NEWTON — Newton West played opportunistically, scoring 10 runs in an error-fraught third inning, to defeat the Parkway Americans, 11-4, in the District 17 Little League Tournament Monday night.

With the loss, the Americans are eliminated from the tourney, while Newton will face the Parkway Central squad on Wednesday to decide who will face the Norwood Nationals in the District final.

With one out, the winners began the third-inning outburst on Chris Cucinotta's walk. Rick Sonia drew a free pass, and Don MacDougall singled to center to score Cucinotta. After a strikeout, Doug Leone ripped a double to score Sonia and MacDougall. P.J. Melanson walked, stole second, and runners were on second and third when the skys opened.

Newton West's Doug Leone reaches third safely

What followed was a 25-minute rain delay that gave the Newton baserunners a chance to rest their legs, and they would need the rest.

Brandon Hehir, who had a 2-2 count on him when the storm began, rocketed the ball to short, but when the fielder couldn't handle it, Leone scored, and the rout was on. Marty Burke reached on another and a subsequent miscue allowed Melanson to cross the plate.

Doug Micciantuono smacked a single to score Hehir, and when the centerfielder muffed the throw, Burke came home. Cucinotta and Sonia then walked for the second time each of the inning, and MacDougall hit a two-run single to close the scoring.

The winners had taken a 1-0 lead in the first when Micciantuono singled, moved to second on a walk to Cucinotta, and third on a passed ball. He came home when the Parkway second baseman couldn't handle a hard grounder.

Parkway took a two-run lead in the bottom of the second with three runs. Dave Venutti singled to center to begin the rally, took advantage of a wild pitch to move into scoring position, and Mike Delanaere singled to put runners at the corners. Derek Shine reached on an error to score Venutti, and Kevin Curley rapped a two-run safety to right for the other pair of runs.

Newton then exploded for its 10 runs, to open up a 11-3 lead that would prove to be too much for the losers to surmount.

Parkway managed one more tally in the fourth on Justin McEligot's speed. The speedy outfielder reached on an infield hit, went to second on a wild pitch, and just beat a throw to third on a passed ball. McEligot dashed home on a wild pitch.

Leone went 3⅓ for the win in just his second mound appearance of the tourney. He was relieved by Tromontozzi, who pitched the last 2⅔, allowing only one hit.

The fifth inning saw dazzling defensive plays on both sides of the field. Sonia turned a twin killing in the top of the frame, as he tagged a runner going to second, turned, and threw to first.

The second baseman hit into a DP in the bottom of the frame, as the Parkway shortstop sprung up to nab his liner, and quickly threw to first before ther astonished Newton runner could get back.

Saturday, Sonia ripped a run-scoring double in the seventh inning which allowed Newton West to pull out a 9-8 victory over Dedham.

Micciantouno began the last inning by reaching on an error by the second baseman. He moved to second on Hehir's single, and scampered home on Sonia's double.

Sonia also picked up the win in relief of Melanson. Melanson delivered a strong performance before tiring, striking out 11 Dedham batters.

Dedham had forced the game into the extra frame with three runs in the sixth inning. Chip Bolton led off with a walk, and moved to second on a wild pitch. Jim Hurley delivered him with a single to right, and moved to second himself on a wild pitch.

Sean Casey then pulled off some last-minute heroics. The shortstop ripped a triple which easily scored Hurley, and when the relay throw went wild, Casey dashed home himself to tie it up.

Gardiner homer creates 8-8 tie

NEWTON — Catcher Sean Gardiner stroked a two-run homer in the bottom of the sixth to lift the Auburndale Sports Shop into an 8-8 tie with the Auburndale Warriors on Wednesday at Auburndale Field. In some ways it was a fitting end to this back-and-forth game, which saw the Warriors battle back from an early 6-0 deficit to take an 8-6 lead.

Mike Ryan set the table for Gardiner with a single to center. Paul Howley forced him at second, but Gardiner took care of the rest. With two strikes, he lined a shot over the fence in left to create the deadlock.

The Sports Shop jumped out to a 5-0 lead in the bottom of the fourth as starting pitcher Dino Leone helped his own cause with a three-run four-bagger to cap off the attack. Prior to the big blast, Paul Howley and Gardiner each notched RBI singles for Auburndale. Gardiner was his team's standout with a two-for-three night and three runs batted in.

After Sports Shop came up with another run in the second inning, the Warriors bounced back with a six-run scoring barrage of their own in the third frame to pull even. Jeff Robinson singled to right and Dave LeConti reached on an error before Steve MacKay walked to load the bases. Left fielder Tom Bachner doubled home a pair of markers and Jim Giddon reached on an error to send center fielder Rob LeConti to the platter. The outfielder responded with a two-run double to right. The final spark of the inning was struck by first baseman Larry Meltzer, who delivered a two-run single to left field.

The Warriors remain just ahead of Auburndale in a battle for fourth place in the league standings. The Warriors stand at 5-7-3 and Auburndale holds a 5-7-1 mark.

In action played at Upper Falls Field, the Knights of Columbus came up with a five-run top of the fourth to edge out Upper Falls and take a 7-5 victory in a game that only went four innings before darkness shrouded the diamond.

In the top of the fourth, Jay Downey singled and Lou Altieri walked before Justin McKenna singled Downey across. McKenna, who played well at second base for the winners, had two RBIs on the night.

The rally continued when Bob Antonellis hit a fly ball to left field that was dropped by the Upper Falls defender. McKenna scored on the play. Chris Noble drove home Antonellis with a single and Greg Larson followed with a basehit to push Noble home.

Upper Falls mounted a rally of its own in the bottom of the fourth but couldn't keep things alive to pull even. In the Upper Falls fourth, Vachon and Cohen each drove home runs with singles and two other runners scored on an error.

Seventeen-year-old righthander Sean O'Brien went the distance for the winners and pitched well until the last frame when he had some concentration problems before closing the door on Upper Falls.

Upper Falls was led by Ed Murray, who played a solid defensive game in center field and collected a pair of hits.

K. of C. now stands at 5-8 on the season.

Seven Lancer starters back

By Roy LeBlanc
Staff Writer

NEWTON — One season after taking over as Newton Catholic baseball coach, Don Dabenigno feels he has taken a big step toward molding the team the way he would like it. With only two starters graduating, the 1985 Lancer team will be filled with players who will begin the season knowing what Dabenigno will expect of them, which should be a real plus.

Certainly, Rick McClellan and Dan Walsh, along with the team's other seniors, will be missed from this year's 12-8 club. But even Dabenigno admits that the "key spots are all underclassmen."

Leading the returnees is shortstop Bill Martin, the team's leading hitter. The shortstop job is "his from Day One," according to the coach.

Martin is an excellent contact hitter, striking out only once all season while posting a .468 mark. The junior also has pretty good linedrive power, as his two doubles, two triples and one home run attest.

Dabenigno feels that Martin can become even a better hitter with some discipline at the plate. He only walked eight times this season.

Defensively, Martin ranks with the best in the league. He has good range and an above-average arm.

Veterans abound elsewhere in the infield as well. Sophomore Jeff Sherman holds down the first base spot. At 6-3, he's an outstanding defensive player who "gets everything thrown at him," according to the coach. He was no slouch at the plate this season either, hitting .393 with seven extra base hits.

One other job that is rock-solid is catcher, where Frank Battista holds down the fort. Only a freshman, Battista was a big surprise with the bat this season, finishing second behind Martin at .400. Battista also showed a good arm for a freshman and perhaps most importantly, he's "not afraid to get dirty," says Dabenigno.

The only worry the coach has at that spot is finding a backup for Battista in case he sees some duty on the mound or gets hurt. The best prospects for that job are junior Shaun Moran and freshman John Taylor, who are both still learning the position.

Although no one graduates at second or third, those positions are more in a state of flux than the rest of the infield. Sophomore Bill MacDougall is the incumbent at second, but Taylor was breathing down his neck by the end of the season. Tom Sheehan is also a factor.

MacDougall struggled at the plate this year, but did get on base quite a bit, walking 15 times. Defensively, he's got good range and a strong arm.

Sheehan played there a lot this season. Like MacDougall, the sophomore is a good defensive player but had his problems with the bat.

Taylor may not be quite the defensive player that MacDougall or Sheehan is, but he looks very promising at the plate. He makes contact, and if he continues to improve, Dabenigno may have to find room for his bat somewhere.

That somewhere might also be third, where Taylor could be involved in another three-way fight. Moran held the post for the last two-thirds of the season, but his speed and arm may put him in the outfield to fill one of the holes created by the departure of McClellan and Walsh. Sophomore John O'Brien, a .368 hitter, also saw some action at the hot corner and should contend for the starting job.

The only thing certain about the outfield picture is that Nick Abruzzi will be out there somewhere. He started in left as a sophomore this year and hit .245. There's a strong possibility that he will move to center, as he filled in there when McClellan was on the mound this year.

In the other two spots, Dabenigno will be looking for defense to replace the two seniors. It wouldn't hurt if the new starters hit a bit too, as McClellan posted a .372 average this year. Abruzzi's take-charge attitude will help if he is to play between two inexperienced outfielders.

Moran, of course, is one possibility for the outfield. He has the physical tools to make the switch without too much difficulty. Freshman Tom Walsh, another quick player, could make a challenge. Dabenigno noted that Walsh "goes after a ball real hard."

On the mound, the coach's number one priority is finding someone consistent enough to step in for ace McClellan, who was 5-1 with a team-leading 1.20 earned run average.

On the bright side, the Lancers had two sophomores and a freshman who saw some time on the mound. Sophomores O'Brien and Abruzzi are the leading candidates to step into the number one spot next spring.

International League

Cedrone, Caralis pace Warriors, 11-2

NEWTON — Fourteen-year-old center fielder Dan Cedrone had a perfect day at the plate last Wednesday with a pair of hits to drive home four runs and score two more while leading the Auburndale Warriors to an 11-2 thrashing of St. Bernard's in International League action at West Newton Common.

While Cedrone was swinging away, his teammate, 14-year-old righthander Aris Caralis, was constructing a solid, four-hit performance on the mound. Caralis struck out three batters while walking four and kept most of Auburndale's batters off stride with his good curveball.

The Warriors improved to 10-5 with the win while St. Bernard's dropped to 6-8.

Auburndale jumped out in front early with a pair of runs in the first. Mark Adams and Cedrone each drew walks to set up left fielder John Biotti's two-run double to center field. Biotti went three-for-four for the winners with two RBIs and one run scored. The Warriors scored two more in the second frame when Caralis doubled and Adams tripled him across the platter and trotted home himself on an error in the outfield. In the third frame Auburndale continued to increase its lead as Anthony Whiting tripled and Cedrone pushed him across with a sacrifice fly to center field.

Finally, St. Bernard's got on the board in the top of the fourth when David St. Germaine and Jason Girouard drew consecutive walks and then pulled off a double steal which saw St. Germaine cross the plate. Girouard later came on to score on an infield error, but it was not enough to erase Auburndale's sizeable lead.

The Warriors put the game out of reach for good in the fourth inning with five runs. Cedrone delivered the big blow in that frame with a three-run double in the right-center field gap. Tom White had an RBI single and Al Clark hit a sacrifice fly ball to close out the rally. Auburndale scored one more run in the fifth inning to make the score 11-2 before the game was called because of darkness.

St. Bernard's was led by pitcher Paul Kearney, who went two-for-three and hit the ball hard every time he stepped to the plate.

In other action at Newton North High, righthander Joe Borus grooved a three-hitter to up his record to 3-1 and lead C&K to a 10-5 victory over the Tigers. The win improved the C&K record to 5-9-1.

One big inning gave C&K all it would need to carry home the win. In the third the squad mounted a seven-run attack. Rick McMillen led off with a walk and reached second on a sacrifice by his brother Tom before trotting across the plate when Dave Annece reached on an error on the Tiger third baseman. After a Paul Fay basehit, Angelo Demaino, John Greenberg and Craig Buckman drew consecutive walks to bring home two more tallies. Tim Galvin dealt the explosive blow of the frame with a bases-loaded triple before scoring the final run of the stanza on a wild pitch.

The Tigers mounted an attack in their half of the final inning, but the four run rally was not enough to pull even with the heavy-hitting batsmen of C&K. In the last inning, Jeff Newton walked and Olson reached on an error to set the table for Francione, who doubled home Newton. Rizzo then hit a double of his own to score the two runners on base before he scored the fourth marker on a ground out.

The Boys' Club defeated Abruzzi, 4-1, at the Newton Highlands behind George Haggie's three-hitter. The 14-year-old lefty went the distance, walking six, but getting the outs when he needed them.

The Boys' Club got their initial run in the top of the first on an error, and Abruzzi evened the score temporarily with one in the bottom of the frame. Jay Jewett got on with an infield hit, and came home on Adam Gabriel's single.

The winners got three in the top of the fifth for the win. Kirk Kaloustrian reached on an error, and after Mark Maiocca singled to center, Mark Cadman drew a free pass to load the bases. Third basemen Billy MacDougal brought home a pair by lacing a single over the firstbasman's head and down the rightfield line. Peter Ricciardi then reached on an error which allowed Cadman to come home.

Abruzzi also got a solid pitching performance from Ben Burlingame, as he only gave up four hits.

DeNucci supports sentencing bill

Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci, D. Newton/Waltham, House Chairman of the Commitee on Human Services and Elderly Affairs said he supports Gov. Michael Dukakis' Presumptive Sentencing Bill. Rep. DeNucci stated, "The crimes addressed by the governor's bill are crimes against persons." They included: first and second degree murder, manslaughter, battery and assault, kidnapping, rape, sexual abuse, robbery and civil rights violations, as well as a dozen other forms of crimes against people.

DeNucci noted that under the bill, a judge will be mandated to issue a sentence within a minimum and maximum period. For example, a minimum of five years to a maximum of 10 years. A prisoner would be required to serve that minimum before being permitted parole. Judges would still have discretion when sentencing. "However, the difference is that the judge will need to justify a lighter or harsher sentence in writing," noted DeNucci.

Another factor to consider, according to DeNucci, is the question of prison overcrowding. Under the current state sentencing procedures, the Department of Correction will reach its peak overcrowding in 1985. Under presumptive sentencing, that peak will not occur until 1990. With the governor's three-pronged plan, which includes a $40 million expansion program coupled with a $20 million staffing and operating program, the projected overcrowding would be dramatically contained and controlled," said DeNucci.

Backman speaks out on Beverly fire

Sen. Jack H. Backman, D. Brookline-Newton, released a statement last week alleging that the fire in Beverly should not be classified as a deinstitutionalization problem, but rather a problem of lack of affordable housing for persons of low income.

Sen. Backman stated, "The tragedy in Beverly should be investigated from the viewpoint of society's failure to provide suitable housing to persons of low income in this commonwealth. We must not confuse the issue of persons living in cheap housing with the issue of emotional distress. If anything, the lack of suitable housing has been found to be the greatest cause of state mental hospital institutionalization. It is persons of low income, individuals whose family ties have been broken, persons without jobs and individuals from broken homes who are in our state institutions.

"It is neither stricter regulations for lodging houses nor depriving emotionally distraught persons of their right to live in the community that should be recommended as a result of the Beverly fire tragedy. Instead, our major priority should be a program of building more housing for young married couples, for working families, for the elderly, the handicapped and for those living in sub-standard housing."

County's Schmidt opposes wording

Middlesex County Commissioner Bill Schmidt recently expressed to Middlesex County legislators his strong opposition to restrictive language in the State Budget regarding the rental of court facilities.

The issue of court facilities has been a difficult one for both the counties and the state since the state assumed the judicial budget under a reform bill in 1978. Unpaid rent arrearages since then have amounted to almost $100 million. This year, the legislature proposed $31.8 million for court rentals, which means that Middlesex County should receive $8 million. However, language attached to the figure could hurt rather than assist county government, according to Commissioner Schmidt.

"I'm pleased with the appropriation, but disturbed that the funds must be used solely for reducing the assessment according to the language in the bill, thus preventing us from making the capital improvements to the facilities which are so long overdue. This bill would force us to cut our assessment in half - from $17 million to $8.5 millon - and anyone who knows how Proposition 2 1/2 works can tell you that. While this may appear to be a source of local aid to cities and towns, it would, in reality, reduce county government to a state of imminent bankruptcy," he said.

No more children in adult wards

Children will no longer be placed on adult wards in state mental hospitals as a result of the legislature's final approval of the Conference Committee Report of the state's budget.

Passage of this measure was applauded by Sen. Jack H. Backman, D. Brookline/Newton, Chairman of the Special Committee on Mental Health, whose recently released report on children's mental health services pinpointed the problem of children on adult wards. Sen. Backman has also filed legislation to ban such placement of children.

The budget bars the commitment of children to adult wards after Jan. 1, 1985. It also allocates $1.4 million for the specific purpose of creating alternative programs in community settings for young people diverted from adult wards in addition to other appropriations for children's mental health services within the communities.

Department of Mental Health statistics indicate approximately 1,300 admissions of youth under age 22 to adult wards in this state annually.

"Massachusetts was placing children on adult wards because we hadn't developed suitable alternatives," Backman said. With the passage of this budget and its funding of alternative programs and facilities," he said, "we no longer will be subjecting troubled youths to the destructive atmosphere of chronic adult wards."

"At long last, Massachusetts will be able to end the warehousing of seriously disturbed youths and to provide positive programs of treatment and rehabilitation which have been denied them," Backman concluded.

Pine Manor receives Gannett grant

The First Annual Gannett Foundation Community Appreciation Luncheon was held recently. Grants totaling more than $22,000 were given out to eight community human service groups. One of those organizations who received grants were Pine Manor College to buy books and equipment for the college's new library and Communications Center.

Funds for Arts names new affiliates

The Board of Directors of the Fund for the Arts in Newton, Inc. (FAN), has voted to add three arts organizatons as new affiliates to the roster of the two-year-old fundraising organization.

They are: Newton Cable Television Foundation, Newton Choral Society and the Newton Cultural Affairs, Inc., bringing the membership of FAN to a total of seven organizations.

The other affiliates of the Fund for the Arts in Newton are the Newton Arts Center, the Newton Symphony Orchestra, the Newton Art Association, and the Newton Country Players.

The Newton Cable Televison Foundation is a private non-profit organizaton whose purpose is to produce, acquire and promote innovative programming for cable cast in the Newton community. The organization funds independent producers to create documentaries of general and local relevance for their "First Wednesday" series as well as sponsoring "Around the Highlands."

The Newton Choral Society is dedicated to the preparation and performance of fine choral music. Several concerts are performed annually in Newton, with additional appearances made at nursing homes and civic organizations.

Newton Cultural Affairs, Inc. is the producers of Springfest, the successful cultural fair held at City Hall each spring. The proceeds of this event are distributed as scholarships to Newton high school students and are used to purchase books for the high school libraries. The organization is also responsible for developing and updating the Newton Resources Guidebook.

Business interested in contributing to FAN may send their tax-deductible donations to Fund for the Arts in Newton, 492 Waltham St., Newton, 02165, or call 332-9110.

New voice over 'classical' airwaves

Mary Ann Nichols

WCRB 102.5 FM in Boston, the only 24-hour concert music station for classical music in New England, welcomed Mary Ann Nichols to its cast of on-air personalities.

Nichols, a three-year veteran of Metropolitan Washington's major market classical station WGMS AM/FM, returned to the Boston area with evening broadcasts on Monday.

Nichols will host programs through the night, including "Serenade", "GTE Concert Hour" and "Night Music". Ms. Nichols will also participate in conducting news and interview features on WCRB.

After receiving her MA in drama from Tufts University in 1975, Ms. Nichols began a versatile freelance career in Boston.

New England Bank get stock charter

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board of Washington, D.C. has issued a charter to the New England Federal Savings Bank, according to Gerald R. Mueller of Harvard, president of the new bank. Mueller and James W. Breznay of Newton are co-founders of the bank.

New England Federal Savings Bank is the first new Massachusetts-based banking institution to be granted a stock federal charter. Its deposits will be insured by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation.

The bank will establish its headquarters in Wellesley after meeting remaining FHLB requirements. It plans to serve the entire Greater Boston market by mail, telephone, and automated teller machine. It will also make real estate and personal loans, in addition to providing a variety of deposit services.

Mueller and Breznay were previously associated with Freedom Federal Savings, Worcester, which merged into Northeast Savings, F.A. in October 1982. Mueller was senior vice-president and chief lending officer for Freedom and Breznay was general counsel.

They left Northeast in October 1983 to start the new bank.

Newton Rotary Club Vice President Tom Jackson, left, presents a check to Sam Crocetti, executive director of the Newton Boy's Club, to fund campers' expenses in the summer camp programs.

Local ARMDI chapter installs new officers

The newly formed Amitzim Chapter of American Red Magen David for Israel (ARMDI) recently installed officers, including vice presidents Stanley Brown of Natick and Harold Sparr of Needham.

The treasurer is Charles Landay of Needham; recording secretary, Marlene Striar of Newton; membership chairpersons Nadine Harris and Fred Cohen of Chestnut Hill; program chairperson Ron Paris of Needham; publicity chairperson Jules Becker of Brookline; greeting card chairperson Marsha Rotman of Cambridge; and fund raising chairperson Jack Paris of Chestnut Hill.

Music school up for accreditation

The executive committee of the New England Association of Schools and Colleges, on recomendation of the appropriate commissions, has granted candidacy status for accreditation to the Kodaly Center of America, a nationally and internationally renowned graduate-level teacher-training institution in the field of music education.

The New England Association of Schools and Colleges is the oldest of the nation's six nationally recognized regional accrediting associations.

Institute for blind gets no fed funds

The International Institute for Visually Impaired, Birth to Seven, Inc., based in Newton, learned last week that the federal government will not fund projects for which the institute submitted proposals to meet the needs of blind infants and their families.

The institute, which received federal funds last year, conducts an outreach project that addresses the needs of blind and visually impaired children from birth through age seven.

Outreach projects were reduced from 53 to 34 and this project will not be funded. According to the institute, this leaves programs and projects in the U.S. without a central resource to assist them to develop or improve programs for the increasing number of blind infants and young children being identified and for whom there are no services specific to their disability.

Wendy Cullar, director of the U.S. Department of Education, Office of Special Education, informed the institute that 242 applications to initiate model programs for young handicapped children were received and only 30 new demonstration projects will be funded this year.

Mrs. Sherry Raynor, president and co-founder of the institute, said, "This refusal of federal assistance is a serious blow, but not fatal. Our work must go on. The institute will continue to meet the challenge at whatever level possible to increase public awareness of the special needs of blind children, their parents, and educators.

The institute works to provide parents and professionals with support and information that will help them meet the needs of the blind baby in the crucial years from birth to seven.

Raynor said that two previous programs for blind infants, in Michigan and Massachusetts, originally funded by the federal government, have become established and now operate without federal assistance.

She added that the institute has also encouraged international participation in meeting the needs of blind children in countries where the incidence is many times higher than in the U.S.

Home needed

Brooke is a slim attractive 17-year-old girl who is in need of a foster family. She can be described as a typical teenage who is happy, carefree, and is very appealing. Brooke, a 10th grader well liked by both peers and adults, is interested in continuing her education in a vocational high school.

Currently, Brooke works after school in a nursing home and wishes to continue throughout the summer. She likes to roller skate, enjoys music and is a very talented artist using various mediums.

Either a two-parent family or a single-adult female would be an appropriate foster family for Brooke. She will need a home for the next two years until she completes high school. Brooke loves children and would be quite comfortable in a home with younger children.

If you are interested in opening your home to Brooke, please call Priscilla Dillon, Area Homefinder at the Department of Social Serivces, 437 Cherry Street in West Newton, 965-2607.

We provide training, support and a $150 weekly stipend.

Travel briefs

WELLESLEY, Mass. (UPI) — Clam and Bluegrass Festivals, an Aquafest, 4-H Fairs and a Frog Jump Contest are some of New England's offerings for the weekend of July 20-22, as recommended by the ALA Auto and Travel Club.

Yarmouth, Maine, will be celebrating its 19th annual Clam Festival, Friday through Sunday, July 20-22.

The honorable clam will be available throughout the weekend in steamed, fried, cake and chowder forms.

Highlights for Friday will include a "Journey Through Bookland" parade, featuring floats depicting favorite stories and 10 marching bands, at 6 p.m.

Attractions on Saturday will include a pancake breakfast from 7 a.m. to 11 a.m., a "mad whittler" who fashions lawn-sized wood bears from huge blocks of wood with his chainsaw, square dancing demonstrations, barbershop quartets, German music and high school bands. At 8:30 p.m. there will be a fireworks display.

The draw on Sunday will include most of Saturday's events. In lieu of fireworks, the Portland Symphony Orchestra will conclude the activities in fine style at 4 p.m.

Hours are Friday 10 a.m. to 11 p.m., Saturday 7 a.m. to 11 p.m., and Sunday 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

For information, call (207) 846-9036.

Newport, Vt., will welcome Aquafest the weekend of July 20-22.

Aquafest is a celebration that started four years ago and centers around Lake Memphremagog, a 32-mile long body of water whose boundaries border Canada and Vermont.

An unusual spectacle will take place on Sunday, July 22, in the early morning hours when 20 swimmers from varied backgrounds and nationalities will set out from Newport's Prouty Beach, to Magog, Quebec, 25 miles to the north.

Depending on each swimmer's ability and conditioning, eight to 12 hours later they'll touch shore in Magog to colect their share of $25,000 in prize money.

Newport immerses itself in festivities all weekend long. Art exhibits, beer gardens, street dances, food vendors, entertainment and other swimathons will take place.

For information, call (802) 334-7782.

The Fourth Annual Hayseed Bluegrass Festival takes place at Dow Field in Franconia, N.H., Saturday and Sunday July 21-22.

On Saturday numerous bluegrass and country talents from around New England will play up a storm. On Sunday a fiddler's contest will be held with cash prizes to be awarded.

Hours both days will be noon to 6 p.m.

For information, call (603) 823-5644.

Two 4-H Fairs will take place in Rhode Island, Friday through Sunday, July 20-22.

Both fairs will offer numerous livestock exhibits, tractor pulls, square dancing, special contests and other activities relative to a good countrey fair.

The Tri-County 4-H Fair will be held at the Washington County Fairgrounds on Highway 112 in Richmond. The other fair will be held in Portsmouth, at Glen Park, off Highway 138.

For information on either fair, call (401) 227-2601.

The Inn on Lake Waramaug in New Preston, Conn., will hold an Old Fashioned Frog Jump Contest and Yankee Skills Jamboree on Sunday, July 22.

Those under 16 are welcome to enter their favorite frogs in the jumping contest. Prizes will be awarded to the best set of legs.

In addition, numerous old time farming community skills will be demonstrated, including shingle splitting, oxen pulling, sheep shearing and foot-pedal engraving.

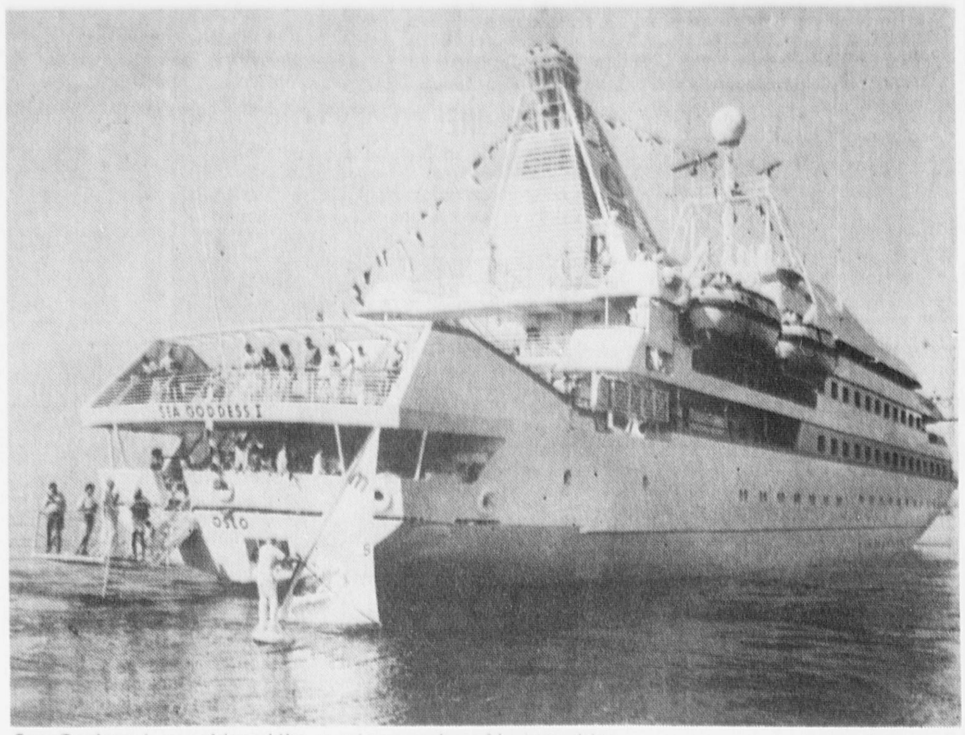

Admission is free.

Hours are 1 to 3 p.m.

For information, call (203) 868-0563.

Better than Love Boat?

Sea Godess I, considered the most expensive of luxury ships. UPI photo

NEW YORK (NEA) — Take a cruise and you're taking a chance: You could run into auto mechanics, checkout clerks, podiatrists. Helge Naarstad wasn't thrilled with that kind of democracy when he was president of Norwegian-Caribbean Lines, so he hired a Finnish shipyard to design and build a small cruise ship; called it the Sea Goddess I; called himself chairman of Sea Goddess Cruises, Ltd.; and in April 1984 began sending it around the Mediterranean carrying clientele after his own heart: bankers, oil men, movie types.

And the elite ate it up. According to Oivind (OY-vind) Mathisen, spokesman for the company: "Twenty percent of those on the maiden voyage either extended their stay on board or booked another cruise for '84 right then and there, which is unusual. And we heard it said that what the ship had to offer had been understated."

The first thing it offers — at $6,600 per couple — is six, seven-day itineraries. You can choose one or mix and match so that you sail around Spain, France, Italy and Greece for up to four weeks without duplicating ports. Or, on Oct. 6, 1984, you can sail the Atlantic from Malaga to St. Croix in the Caribbean where the Sea Goddess will sail for the following few months.

The next order of business is to fill out a "personal preference form": how you want your personal bar stocked (it holds five bottles that are replaced when empty); what kind of caviar you want in your fridge; what kinds of magazines on your coffee table. And if you want to be sure you can get into that dishy new restaurant in Rome or onto the links in Monte Carlo, jot that down, too. Reservations will be made for you before you hit port. Really, it's no trouble.

The Sea Goddess I holds a maximum of 120 "guests," says Mathisen, "but 96 is considered a full ship and since the crew totals 71, it's almost one-to-one service."

The crew, incidentally, is mostly Scandinavian — except for eight Germans and Austrians in the kitchen, an Italian wine steward, some German waiters — but all speak "American English" and know what they're doing.

Come the day of departure, practically all you'll have to do is get yourself to the dock. The social director will meet your car and you and your luggage will be hauled on board to meet the captain. "Then you enter the reception area (note the Persian carpet) to receive your computer-card room key," says Mathisen.

And then it's on to your suite, which will be in either pink, light blue or yellow with white oak paneling. Mind you, all suites front the sea and all will harbor fresh flowers and a bowl of fresh fruit changed daily, like the linen. And waiting for you in the bathroom will be velour robes, lots of towels (the "guests" have been copping them, Mathisen admits), plus soaps and shampoos.

Now, unpack. And while you do, switch on your stereo or radio or send out to the library for a set of Monopoly or one of its 300 videocassettes of films, plays, ballets, etc. Then again, you may want to check your cable TV for the latest stock quotations or weather report. Better still, why not ring up Bunkie in Paris? But before you reach for your direct-dial, worldwide phone, be advised that you'll foot the bill. Still, that's all you'll have to pay extra for, unless you order a very costly wine or champagne, Mathisen says, or visit the two-chair hair salon. ("A woman can get her hair done for perhaps $13 to $15," he says, "and a man can get a haircut for $8.")

> The next order of business is to fill out a 'personal preference form': how you want your personal bar stocked (it holds five bottles that are replaced when empty); what kind of caviar you want in your fridge; what kinds of magazines on your coffee table.

All this dialing and switching can work up an appetite, but even if dinner is hours away, fret not. The ship provides full room service, all day and all night. And don't worry about making an early or late seating at dinner. There is no seating. "The dining room functions like a fine restaurant," Mathisen says. "You can arrive when you wish and stay as long as you like and if you don't like what's on the menu — twin mignon of venison with cantaloupe cream sauce, for instance — nine out of 10 times the chef can provide you what you want."

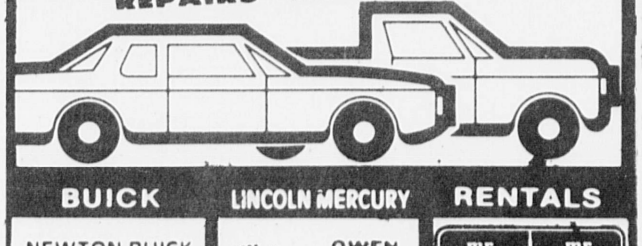

While you dream of mergers, the ship will sail. Come morning, you can go into port or stay at sea and frolic in it, or above it in the ship's sauna, outdoor swimming and whirlpools.

YOUR OFFICIAL MASS. INSPECTION MAINTENANCE STATIONS

Now that your car is inspected just once a year, the last number on your plate determines when.
If your plate ends in 7, get inspected in July.
Zeros come in October, though, and plates with all letters in November.
We'll do the traditional safety checks as well as the new computerized tailpipe emissions test. Quickly and efficiently.

Police log

Owner calls police

NEWTON — Three local juveniles were arrested for larceny and breaking and entering last Monday after they allegedly burglarized a Highland Street home — only to be caught in the act by the owner who happened to return to her house while the perpetrators were still inside.

Police said two 12-year-old boys and a 14-year-old teenager fled from the home after the owner returned at about 1:30 p.m. to discover the youths allegedly roaming through the house.

Police were called to the scene and found the boys hiding under a porch at a neighboring house, records show. The victim later positively identified them, police said.

A bag of silver coins, valued at about $15, was found left near the entraceway to the house and police accuse the youths of dropping it as they were fleeing the scene.

Lawn machines missing

NEWTON — Almost $6,000 worth of heavy lawn machines were reported stolen from the Clapper Company at 1121 Washington St., records show.

The owner of the lawn care center told police Tuesday that four machines were discovered missing from the fenced-in rear lot of the building, records show.

Missing was a John Deere lawn tractor valued at $2,400, two John Deere snowthrowers worth about $1,800 total and a John Deere riding mower valued at $1,500, records show.

Police said the theft occured sometime over the past week.

Handgun stolen from house

NEWTON — A Smith and Wesson .38 caliber handgun was reported stolen Wednesday from a Harvard Street residence, records show.

The owner told police thieves broke into his home and stole the pistol from underneath a bedroom mattress where it was placed for safekeeping, records show.

Police said the theft occured sometime between July 3 and Wednesday while the owner was on vacation.

Police said there was no sign of forced entry but that a back-door key attached to a magnetic clip in the vestibule to the rear entrance was found missing. Several windows were also left unlocked, police said.

Also reported stolen was about $200 in rolled change, records show. Police said the entire house was ransacked.

Bad checks alleged

NEWTON — Nine area residents defaulted Thursday at their arraignment in Newton District Court for allegedly passing bad checks at Purity Supreme.

No warrants, however, were issued for the defaulters, who all face charges of larceny by check. The alleged offenses were conducted at various times over the past four months.

Defaulting were: Karen M. Kiray, 23, of 86 Derby St., West Newton; Charles F. Tobin, no age, of 129 Palfrey St., Watertown; William Hayes, 31, of 100 King St., Watertown; Theresa Raso, no age, of 104 Albert Rd., Auburndale; Earl J. MacDonald, 35, of 144 Willow St., Waltham; James A. Philip, 40, of 138 Central St., Auburndale; Donna Ebsary, 28, P.O. Box 121, Newton; Robert Sheehan, 24, of 194 Barbara Rd., Waltham; and Patricia Kirchoff, 26, of 9 Craigie Terrace, Newton.

Firefighters in action 9 hours

NEWTON — Firefighters worked through the day to control a brush fire that broke out Saturday near the Rumford Avenue transfer-haul station when a massive pile of wood and refuse mysteriously ignited.

The fire broke out at about noon and was quickly contained by firefighters, who took more than nine hours to completely secure the area, a fire spokesman said.

At the height of the fire, four engine companies and one ladder company were called to extinguish the flames.

Bulldozers ploughed through the area to overturn burning wood and expose it for dousing by firefighters as plumes of white smoke drifted across Lexington Street and into Auburndale neighborhoods.

The cause of the fire is unknown and under investigation, the spokesman said.

Flasher seen on Commonwealth Ave.

NEWTON — An unknown male indecently exposed himself Friday morning to passing female joggers as he sat in his parked car near a Commonwealth Avenue home, records show.

Police said a white male sitting in a small grey car exposed himself to the women joggers at about 7 a.m., records show. He was described as being in his late twenties.

Summertime safety

Chief Quinn alerts parents to dangers

(This is another in a series of articles issued by Police Chief William F. Quinn aimed at helping parents to develop a sense of awareness in their children which is necessary to recognize a potential problem involving personal or property protection.)

Chief Quinn reminds residents that the playgrounds, parks and swimming facilities throughout the city are now in full swing. This means that children of all ages will be crossing streets, both on foot and on bicycles.

Quinn advises parents to survey the routes their children will be using to go to and from these recreational areas to make sure that the children are familiar with the route and that they know where the approved street crossings are located. Bikes should be walked across all busy intersections and in commercial districts the sidewalk cyclist should not ride but walk the bike through the area.

In choosing the best available route, parents should look for one that is comfortable to both them and the child. Also, each street crossing should be checked to assure that a high degree of pedestrian visibility is present in all directions. Blind crossings or narrowed sidewalks caused by the over growth of shrubs and bushes should be reported.

All children should also be taught good pedestrian and bicycle safety procedures. On the street bicycle riding follows the same rules of the road as an auto. Quinn suggests that any parents or children having questions concerning such procedures contact the Newton Police Community Services Office at 552-7252.

"Newton has many exceptional parks and an excellent recreation department staff," Chief Quinn concludes, "and both should be fully utilized and enjoyed. It, however, is a responsibility of each of use to see that our children travel safely to and from them."

Recently promoted

Dismissed cop threatens to sue for civil rights court under the Civil Rights Code," Pollenz said.

Added Pollenz, "Frankly, from the evidence I've seen, that suit could even give rise to punitive damages. There is evidence of malicious action toward this officer."

Frost, a recording secretary for the union's executive board, has not been receiving a weekly paycheck for over a month and says he spends his days "worrying an awful lot, I'm depressed. I have no animosity toward the Chief, but I'm hurt by (his action)."

Lynda Glenn, president of the Newton Police Association, said the union will support any action for the reinstatement of Frost and adds a suit pending in Middlesex Superior Court asks for a restoration of pay and benefits for the time Frost was allegedly on IOD.

Frost was one of the first Emergency Medical Technicians in the city before joining the police force. In March, 1977, he was commended by Chief Quinn for apprehending four suspects who allegedly broke into the Langley Pharmacy. Earlier, during a 1972 fire at a West Newton home, he assisted in the rescue of a 15-year-old girl who was trapped in the upper floor and surrounded by smoke and fire.

The sequence of events leading to dismissal

The following is officer Thomas Frost's account of the events that led to his dismissal. The statements that follow are documented and, except for confidential medical records released by Frost, part of the public record.

• February, 1982 — Officer Thomas Frost twists his back and shoulder when he is thrown against the dash of his cruiser after a passing motorist rearends his parked car on the side of the road at Centre Street near Buswell Park.

Frost is granted injured on duty (IOD) leave for about three weeks before returning to work on a full-time basis. Begins physical therapy to relieve pain and discomfort associated with back sprain.

• March 12, 1982 — Recurring pain forces Frost to go back on IOD and city physician Dr. John T. LaRossa refers the injured cop to Dr. Carl E. Spector, an orthorpedic surgeon at the Washington Street medical building, who tells Frost that flare-ups of radiating pain are a natural consequence of back injuries. Five days later, Frost returns again to full duty.

• March 3, 1984 — After two years, Frost returns to IOD because he claims to be suffering from severe back pain and loss of feeling in his left leg. Dr. Spector suggests the pain is a recurrence of the 1982 injury and orders a month of physical therapy with rest and medication. Chief William Quinn accepts the IOD leave because of its link to a prior on-duty injury.

• March 21, 1984 — City physician John LaRossa conducts a clinical examination and calls Frost two days later to report him as certified for full duty. Later that day, Lt. Paul Robinson calls Frost on behalf of Quinn and orders him back to full duty the next day.

Surprised, Frost calls his former specialist Dr. Spector and is told by a secretary he can return to "light or limited duty". At the time, light duty was a contested and negotiable item in ongoing police contract talks.

• March 24, 1984 — Frost returns to full duty and works four tours with "severe pain," even though each eight-hour shift is worked inside the station. Five days later, Frost goes back on IOD and retains a private physican — Dr. Augustus White, head of orthopedic surgery at Beth Israel Hospital.

For the first time since the accident, x-rays of the injured cop's back are taken and he undergoes a complete battery of tests. He is advised to follow a schedule of "conservative management" and report back for a follow-up exam on April 26.

His IOD request is never granted and he begins exhausting accumulated sick and vacation time.

• April 26, 1984 — Dr. White said the x-rays showed a weakness on the left side which could be cause for concern. A CAT scan is set-up for May 22.

• May 4, 1984 — Frost is ordered back to work by Lt. Robinson. He refuses and his special leave privileges are exhausted three days later.

• May 22, 1984 — Frost undergoes a CAT scan and returns to work the next day for what he says are financial considerations because he no longer receives a weekly compensatory paycheck. The same month, the Newton Police Association files suit in Middlesex Superior Court on behalf of Frost asking for enforcement of MGL Chapt. 41, Sec. 111F (which governs injured on duty compensation) and a restoration of benefits and special leave.

• June 7, 1984 — The Newton Police Association files suit in Middlesex Superior Court over limited duty and asks for a literal interpretation of state statute 41-111F with regard to what the union says is an illegal clause in their disputed contract with the city.

• June 8, 1984 — Frost's CAT scan results show a mild herniation of a lumbar vertebra. Dr. White tells Frost he should not work at all, saying in a letter the injured cop has a "legitimate organic basis for his symptoms." The next day, Frost does not report to work and sends off a letter to Quinn requesting he be granted IOD status, attaching copies of Dr. White's letter and the CAT scan results. Quinn does not respond to the request.

• June 15, 1984 — Frost receives a letter signed by Quinn informing him of an appointment with Dr. Herbert Cares, a referred neurologist at the Washington Street medical building. Frost attends the appointment but has to date not received the results.

• July 5, 1984 — The daily police journal makes note of Frost's dismissal. Four days later, Frost is officially informed of his termination by certified letter and is told he abandoned his job by separating himself from his duties on June 9.

THE CASE OF THE DISAPPEARING GABLES

by Sherlock Homes

The Gables in Newton is disappearing fast.

Started just two years ago, nearly all of the 66 two and three-bedroom attached single family homes have been sold. Here are some clues to their swift disappearance:

1. Excellent location — directly adjoining The Charles River Country Club at the junction of Parker and Dedham Streets...one of Newton's most desirable neighborhoods.

2. Extravagant space — enormous living rooms, some with two-story ceilings...huge country kitchens with sunny breakfast areas...master bedrooms with their own fireplaced sitting rooms ...separate dens or studies... full basements...and two car attached garages.

3. Extra extras — a handsome clubhouse, a swimming pool with spacious sunning area...a whirlpool and tennis courts.

Remaining homes including two sumptuously furnished models are priced from $350,000 to $425,000, subject to prior sale. Visit the sales office any day from 9 to 5 and you'll agree that there's no mystery to their disappearance. Call 969-0200 for an appointment.

Developed, marketed and managed with pride by The Gables, Inc. A Green Company company.

Edmond "Putt" LaPorte, 55

A hero, an officer, and a gentleman

'Putt' LaPorte

WALTHAM — Waltham Police Officer, Edmond M. "Putt" LaPorte, known for both heroism in the line of police duty and his jolly appearances for more than 20 Christmas Seasons as the traffic-directing Santa Claus at Hall's Corner in Waltham, died suddenly on Monday morning, July 9 in the Waltham Hospital.

Born in Newton, Officer LaPorte attended Newton Trade School. He was a Waltham resident for the past 33 years.

He served in the United States Navy and served during World War II.

He was appointed to the Waltham Police Department on May 10, 1960. He served as a radar traffic officer, an ambulance driver, and in recent years, as a motorcycle officer.

Officer LaPorte was the recipient of several departmental commendations. In June of 1981, he assisted in the apprehension of suspects in an unarmed robbery case. Prior to a report of a robbery, he had observed a suspicious vehicle. His record of the registraton number of the suspect's vehicle resulted in their apprehension.

He was also known as the jolly Santa Claus of the Waltham Police Department.

For over 20 years, Officer LaPorte could be seen directing traffic at Hall's Corner in Waltham as Santa Claus.

He was Santa Claus for the police familes and several fraternal organizations in the area.

When he first became the department Santa he was assisted by now Deputy Chief John MacDonald and Det. Lt. Kenneth MacGillvary.

Among his favorite appearances were the many seasons that he played Santa Claus for the 100 Club of Massachusetts, an organization that cares for families of police officers and fire fighters in the event of their death.

To fellow officers, Officer LaPorte was a brother; to the community, he was a hero who had a special combination of respect for justice, valor, discipline, and humor.

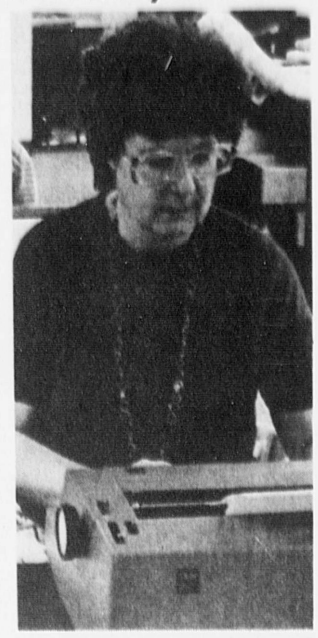

Officer LaPorte was more than well-liked. He was loved.

He is survived by his wife, Shirley Ann (Coughlan) LaPorte; three daughters, Mrs. Gary (Lorinda A.) Bardsley of Sudbury, Mrs. Paul (Deborah M.) Fryar and Miss Sandra J. LaPorte, both of Waltham; one son, Martin E. LaPorte of Waltham; and one sister, Mrs. Joseph (Loretta) Clancy of Newton. He was the grandfather of Matthew Bardsley, and Michelle and Wendy Fryar. He is also survived by several nieces and nephews.

Funeral services were held from the Brasco & Son Memorial, 773 Moody St., Waltham, with a Mass of Christian Burial in St. Mary's Church. Interment Mt. Feake Cemetery.

Lois Haraden

Transcript Newspapers Society Editor

Lois Haraden at work in Transcript Newspapers Office

DEDHAM — Lois Haraden, society editor for Transcript Newspapers who had meticuously written over 40,000 wedding and engagement stories for the Transcript, died of cancer on Sunday, July 15 at Southwood Hospital in Norfolk following a lengthy illness.

Haraden joined Transcript Newspapers in 1945 and began a career with the then Dedham Transcript that eventually brought her in direct contact with every club and organization in the area. She took extreme care to see that every detail connected with a club announcement, wedding story and engagement notice was reported with care and precision.

"Lois was like a loving maiden aunt to every bride-to-be who brought or sent her an engagement notice," said Transcrsipt General Manager Paul J. Massey. "She cared so much that every detail was reported so that it would be a part of the bride and groom's happy day. In a sense, she was a part of every wedding she wrote about and there were thousands."

Haraden never married. She devoted much of her life to the care of her parents who both died in 1979. When they became elderly she would regularly dash home at noon to make their lunch.

"She was a shy and happy person," said editor Philip Keohane. "We who worked with her were fortunate people. In her own quiet way she gave everyone lessons in the importance of journalistic fairness and completeness."

Haraden had been in and out of the hospital since April. She telephoned the newspaper's main office a few weeks ago to say that she was so grateful to everyone who had sent her cards and get well gifts and messages.

Born and educated in Dedham, she was the daughter of the late Marion (Sherman) and Samuel T. Haraden.

Funeral services were held at the Folsom Funeral Home, 87 Milton Street, Dedham on today at 10 a.m. Rev. Taylor Roth of the Allin Congregational Church will officiate. Interment will be in Brookdale Cemetery, Dedham. Contributions in her memory may be made to the American Cancer Society, 247 Commonwealth Ave., Boston.

Flap over stationery heats up

By Frank Mulligan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The Legislation and Rules Committee has approved the formation of an investigatory subcommittee to uncover the story behind last month's unauthorized use of aldermanic stationery.

A proposal "prohibiting the unauthorized personal use of official aldermanic stationery" submitted by Alderman James P. Regan spurred the debate and formation of the subcommittee.

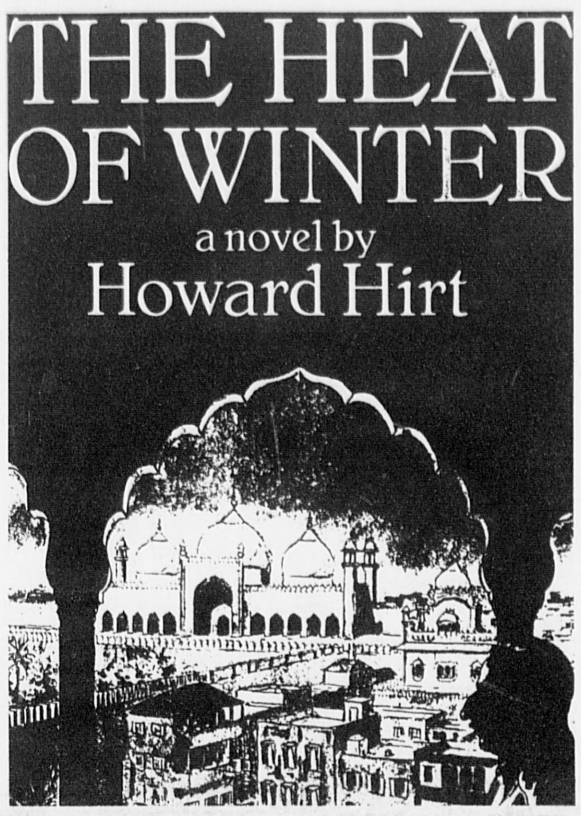

It proved to be a divisive issue resulting in the close vote. Aldermen Regan, Robert L. Shuman, Carol J. Robinson, and Richard J. Bullwinkle voted affirmatively while Aldermen Paul E. Coletti, Ronald A. Marini, and committee chairman Verne Vance Jr. voted against forming the subcommittee. Alderman Edward L. Richmond was absent from the meeting.

'The more you talk, the more I feel something's wrong here.'
Ald. James Regan

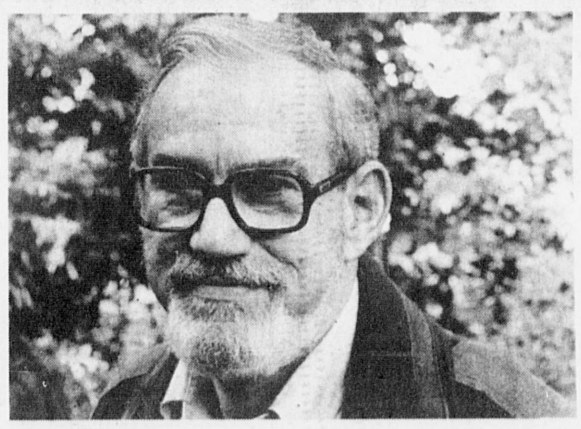

A letter printed on official aldermanic stationery was distributed to PTA presidents around the city by the Campaign for Village Schools group (CVS) the day before the June 20 referendum vote on the fate of the Hyde School.

Ward 5 Alderman-at-Large Coletti and Ward 1 Alderman-at-Large Sondra L. Shick signed the letter which explained a possible procedure whereby supplementary appropriations could be used to continue funding the school, a procedure not mentioned in a let-

Indian intrigue

Polishing a dusty jewel

By Kevin C. Kennedy, News Editor

NEWTONVILLE — You can't tell a book by its cover, as the saying goes, and you can't tell from the comfortable, middle class facades of Garden City homes just what is going on inside of them.

From the outside, the house on Harvard Circle, in Newtonville, looks a lot like the cozy homes that line the streets throughout the neighborhood. There is nothing to suggest that, within the confines of the home's yellow, vinyl-sided walls, its owner has effectively managed to conjure up the heat and dust, the gods and demigods and the exotic atmosphere of India.

Howard Hirt, a mild-mannered geography professor at Framingham State who has lived in India through four sabbaticals, has brought a piece of that dusty jewel back home with him. The walls of his living room teem with artifacts and sacred images. The blue-skinned god Rama dallies with his courtesans above Hirt's sofa, etched in intricate detail on a lacquered goatskin.

A glass-covered coffee table displays a panoply of carved bells, talismans and artifacts. Tabla drums and a large hookah adorn the hearth, much as they might in a comfortable Indian home.

On a steamy midsummer afternoon, Hirt's home is an oasis of hospitality and respite from the heat.

But the trappings of exotic Indian culture are not all Hirt has brought home with him. He has also wrested an intriguing tale from his travels, and it is to be released by Harcourt, Brace and Jovanovich on August 10. It is a dusty jewel of a book, which Hirt has polished with an expertise that is rare in a rookie author.

Hirt's first novel is an exciting slice of Indian life called, "The Heat of Winter." Set in 1952, just after the country won its independence from the British Empire, the book follows Mohammed Abdul Karim, a sensitive Indian Muslim police superintendent, as he tackles the formidable task of protecting Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru from a fanatical Hindu assassin.

Described by one critic as "a sort of Indian 'Day of the Jackal,'" Hirt's first effort has all the suspense and intrigue of a first-rate spy novel. In fact, though, the work can not be confined to the limitations of that genre.

Larkin blasts his rival

By Gary Dorion
County News Service

CAMBRIDGE — Calling his political opponent a "creep" and a "bad political joke," incumbent Middlesex County Commissioner Thomas Larkin has launched a blistering counterattack on Albert J. Onessimo, of Somerville.

In a short statement made last week, Larkin, referring to charges Onessimo made to the district attorney of Larkin's alleged violation of state election laws, said "the mistake that I made in this incident, and that the press has made, is to take this creep seriously."

First Middlesex District Attorney Thomas Reilly announced that an investigation found no basis for Onessimo's accusations to warrant criminal prosecution of Larkin, who is seeking his second term as county commissioner.

'The mistake that I made...is to take this creep seriously.'
Comm. Larkin

Onessimo is one of several candidates seeking one of two commission posts opening.

Reilly said it was an "inadvertent mistake" that a county telephone was used in connection with a Larkin fund-raising event last month and also inadvertent that, subsequently, a secretary in Larkin's county office accepted a $30 campaign donation.

The person who gave the unwitting secretary the $30 was Albert Bielitz, Onessimo's campaign treasurer.

Larkin claimed Onessimo,

City promotes state's 1st woman lieutenant

Friday morning's event at Newton City Hall resembled a family reunion more than an official ceremony. The gathering was filled with proud smiles as old friends, relatives and colleagues turned out to see their respective spouse, aunt, son or co-worker receive seemingly long-awaited recognition.

After milling about the wide corridors outside the executive office, getting re-acquainted, exchanging congratulations and taking candid photos, the standing-room-only crowd squeezed into Mayor Theodore Mann's office for the promotions of police officers Lt. John Salemme, Sgt. Marilyn Connell and patrolman Gregory Wright.

Mayor Mann, who swore in each of the veterans, referred to them as "trailblazers" for the City of Newton.

Police Chief William F. Quinn gave brief summaries

City wins award for volunteerism

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NEWTON — The Garden City has once again risen to national prominence among its peers.

For the fourth time in seven years, Newton has been honored for "outstanding leadership in citizen volunteerism" by the United States Conference of Mayors.

The award was recently presented to Mayor Theodore D. Mann during the 52nd meeting of mayors in Philadelphia, Pa. The conference, in conjunction with the Xerox Corporation, sponsored this year's Mayors' Awards Program with the theme of "Partnerships in Public Safety" honoring seven cities working with the private sector and volunteers to promote local public safety efforts.

'West Side Story'

Sharks and Jets return

By Charlotte Meryman, Staff Writer

NEWTON — Something's coming — something big.

There's gonna be a rumble tonight.

It's been 12 years since the Jets and the Sharks last faced off in Newton. Tonight, members of the two, rival street gangs will come stepping down the aisles of the Day Junior High School auditorium like long-lost friends — fingers snapping, collars flipped up below their slicked-back hair — belting out their classic songs of teenage desire, hatred and foolish pride.

For tonight begins the All Newton Summer Show's five-day production of "West Side Story."

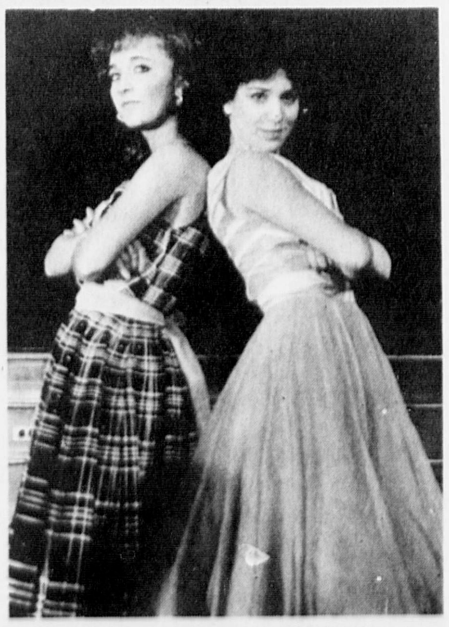

Officer Krupke and Riff, Tony and Maria, Anita and Bernardo — the familiar names ring out across the stage. And as a full orchestra, conducted by William Jones, strikes up the strains of "Tonight, Tonight," "I Want to Live in America" and "Maria," pictures may flash back of your own childhood days spent strutting around school, fingers snapping and brain busily memorizing "When You're A Jet, You're A Jet All the Way."

Directed by Kayla Kazohn Zalk and co-produced by William Jones and Sebastian DiFelice, the musical will be performed Wednesday through Saturday nights at 8 p.m., with 2 p.m. matinees Saturday and Sunday. Admission is $3.50 for students under 18 and seniors, and $5 for adults.

The production has been in the works since last year.

In June of '83, the Newton Parks and Recreation Department canned its annual summer show because it was losing too much money. So a group of disappointed kids got together and tried to stage "Pippin." But after two weeks they stopped the project, deciding instead to throw themselves into planning for the next year.

"We realized that unless a few of us got together and really pulled it together, it wasn't going to happen," recalled Holton Johnson, a 1982 Newton South High School graduate who is headed this fall for the Boston Conservatory of Music.

By Charlotte Meryman, Staff Writer

NEWTON — Norm Walker has never been one to give up easily.

But after 25 bittersweet years in the Newton school system, he's leaving for greener pastures.

The 46-year-old athletic coach, English teacher, poet, special-interest-newspaper editor, one-time U.S. congressional candidate and outspoken Newton resident and employee is trading in his teaching and coaching positions at Newton North High School for similar ones at The Holderness School in New Hampshire.

It was an offer he couldn't pass up.

And, he says, "I just felt I had reached a point where I had lost the battle.

"My battle wasn't to win football games or to have kids get A's and B's," he said, his voice soft with disappointment. "It was to have kids work hard, to have them get fun out of the battle whether they win or lose and appreciate the challenge."

Dressed Wednesday in a shortsleeve sportshirt, baggy, white, terry-cloth shorts and comfortably worn leather shoes that had long ago lost their laces, the father of eight looked more like a well-seasoned college student than the forceful community fixture he has become.

Walker set up two folding chairs on a small, cement porch at The Noble and Greenough School in Dedham, where for 25 years he has run a summer camp swim program, and sat enjoying a pounding rainstorm that threatened at times to flood out his farewell interview.

highlighting each officer's career as they waited apprehensively for the decisive moment.

The day marked another first in the career of Newton's first female police sergeant and the first woman to graduate from the Massachusetts State Police Training Academy. Sgt. Marilyn Connell became the first woman in the commonwealth to attain the rank of lieutenant as a result of a competitive civil service examination.

Prior to her now 11 years with the police department, Connell held the position of secretary to the registrar at the Registry of Motor Vehicles. She has also had a dual career in radio as producer/director of the Marilyn Connell Show on WBOS and WUNR of Boston and the "Old Ireland in New England" show.

Seventeen-year veteran Salemme was promoted and sworn in as captain and administrative assistant to the chief. Previously assigned to planning, research and accreditation of the department, Salemme earned a masters degree in public administration with a concentration in organization and management from Northeastern University.

His father, Louis Salemme, pinned a new badge on the 39-year-old as wife Gayle and children, John, 13, and Kimberly, 11, looked on.

The final promotion of the day went to a man who Chief Quinn said possesses "more pride and productivity than any other officer" he has known in his 32 years with the department. Traffic Officer Gregory Wright was lifted to sergeant. A native of Alabama, Wright has distinguished himself throughout his 11 years on the force as one of Newton's first Emergency Medical Technicians and one of the department's official photographers.

Awarding him with his sergeant's badge was his wife Karen, who is expecting their third child in early August. Both of their other children, four-year-old Brendan and three-year-old Evan, were also in attendance.

Chief Quinn took the opportunity of the captive audience of city officials and media personnel to announce that the President of the Police Union Linda Glenn has been recommended to the National Policewoman of the Year Award.

Indian intrigue in Newtonville

"The Heat of Winter" is much more than a "thriller." It is thick with the details of day-to-day life in India. The food, the clothing, the customs, the mores, the stress of conflicting cultures trying to determine the destiny of a country just cut loose from its colonial benefactors, are woven into the fabric of the story line in a way that boasts of Hirt's proficiency in his craft.

His main character, Karim, is endowed with a human complexity and warmth from the moment he first appears. He is a Muslim trying to ride herd over a bunch of fanatical Hindus. His status in the community is always in doubt. When he first comes to town to accept his new assignment, the railroad car he is riding in is locked from the outside and firebombed.

As if the web of dangerous circumstances he inherits with his new job were not enough, Karim further complicates things by falling in love with a beautiful American women who has come home with her Indian professor-husband, Iqbal Siddiqi.

Hirt shows real artistry as he has Ellen Siddiqi communicate her interests to a shy Karim under the watchful eyes of her jealous husband. He is subtle, suggestive, landing on every suggestive detail of the "pas de trois" in which his characters are engaged. He shows his adeptness with more graphic material later in the book, when he describes the slovenly merchant Ram Lal Prasad's dalliance with a prostitute.

Throughout Hirt's work, there is not the smallest sign of his being a novice to the task of authoring a major piece of fiction. The machinery that drives the action through the course of the labyrintine plot runs as smooth as silk. Hirt attributes his level of craftsmanship to a fiction workshop he has participated in since 1979. Headed by Brandeis Professor Arthur Edelstein, the workshop meets once a week in a church in Wellesley.

"Without that workshop, I could not have completed that book," Hirt stated simply.

While "The Heat of Winter" rates high as entertainment, its potential educational value is what led Hirt to see it through. "I am a teacher, and I wanted this story to teach what India is like," he said.

The 60-year-old 21-year resident of Newtonville said he wanted to explain the often strained relations between Hindus and Muslims that have determined so much of India's recent history. "An exciting novel" would get the message out, he decided.

According to the rave reviews of some of his editors, Hirt seems to have hit the mark he was aiming at. "An extraordinary first novel," one letter stated. "Your instincts for storytelling are invariably good. Your prose is always lean but colorful."

There is no telling where Hirt and Karim will go after August 10. Karim, as a character, deserves a long life like the ones granted other detectives whose sheer humanity has lifted them out of the pages in which they appeared. Lew Archer, Phillip Marlowe, Simon Templar and their ilk would, no doubt, enjoy the company of the Muslim detective from India.

Hirt is already planning a sequel to "The Heat of Winter." In it, Karim will travel to England in search of the stolen shield of Emporer Akbar, who reigned India in the time of Queen Elizabeth.

Just as Hirt's first work was motivated by a desire to teach non-Indians of the realities of Indian life, his next work is designed to show the prejudice, hostility and distrust Indians encounter in England. He hopes that it will entertain as it educates, as his first work does. He is aiming at another "page-turner."

If his work ends up as half as successful as his editors have suggested it might, Hirt said he might realize a dream and establish a residence in India. Winters in India, summers in England and fall in New England, he said, would be his ideal agenda.

"Over there (India), there's a sort of simplicity to life that I find very attractive," he commented, almost nostalgically.

Harvest is plentiful at Farmers' Market

By Charlotte Meryman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Close to 20 farmers in dusty pick-ups and full-sized trucks, slick vans and well-worn station wagons, lined the hot street.

Outside their vehicles they stacked — on tables and wooden crates, in the bright sun and under huge beach umbrellas — piles of crisp lettuce and rhubarb, fresh zucchini and summer squash, soft, red rasperries and tart blueberries, fresh frozen turkey pies, maple syrup, honey and homemade jams, jellies and marmalades, potted plants and herbs, grapevine wreaths, bright geraniums, petunias and begonias, and fresh-cut zinnias, snapdragons, and gardenias.

The growers weren't parked in Western Mass. or Concord or even at Quincy Market, however. Instead, they ringed the City Hall War Memorial Circle for the opening of Newton's fifth Farmers' Market season.

The market, sponsored by the city Recreation Department, the Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce and the Department of Agriculture, will be held every Tuesday from 2:30 to 6:30 p.m., rain or shine, through Oct. 30.

The brainchild of Alderman Edward Richmond, who reportedly saw the Brookline Farmers' Market over five years ago and brought the idea before the city's Board of Aldermen, Newton's market has grown to be one of the most popular in the area among small farmers. It draws sellers from both across the state and down the street.

Many, like Scott Berberian from Westboro, are regular fixtures at the market. Berberian has come every year since the project began and says he owes a lot to the friendliness of Newton customers.

"This is the only market I look forward to coming to," the husky farmer, nicknamed "Red" and dressed in matching gray-green work shirt and pants, declared with a happy smile. "The people are so pleasant ... This is like a vacation for me."

With his father, brother, sister and girlfriend, Berberian works a 40-acre farm his grandparents started after immigrating to the U.S. from Armenia in first part of the century. Markets such as Newton's, which allow him to sell directly to the customer and sidestep the costly "middle man," are what keep him in business.

Like Berberian, Bill LaTouf owes his income to sellers' markets.

"Markets are saving farms in Massachusetts," said LaTouf, a landscaper-turned-gardener. The Hanover resident started Sunny Window Garden, which grows flowers and vegetables, 10 years ago, after his father injured his hand and needed a new occupation. This is his first year in Newton.

"We heard it was a good market and that the market-master is doing a lot for farmers," explained LaTouf, who also sells at the Brookline, Copley and Worcester markets.

The Newton Farmers' Market is managed by the city Recreation Department and owes much of its success to the hard work of staffer Sue King. King is turning the project over this year to Judy Dore, coordinator of the senior adult program, and staffer Barry Mathis.

For some sellers, the market provides a nice way to make a return on a part-time or retirement hobby.

Laura Gilbert of West Newton passed her unique, homemade jams out to friends and family for years before she thought of selling them. Eight years ago she began taking them to craft fairs, where she also markets her artwork. She's been at the Newton market for three years. Her offerings include such items as plum-nectarine and crababble jams, fig-apple chutney and lemon-lime marmalade.

At another stall, Joanne Gracia of Hollaston tended a display of fresh-cut snapdragons and gardenias, pussywillows and grapevine wreaths. A high school teacher, Gracia moonlights evenings, weekends and summers as an independent flower grower. She operates out of a farm in North Dartmouth and sells her goods at the Newton, New Bedford and Fall River farmers' markets.

But it is not just the sellers who enjoy Newton's new addition. Customers at the opening praised the freshness of the fruit, berries and produce, the good condition of the plants and the convenience of such a market close to home. Many are regular customers, returning every week, year after year.

The Recreation Department also runs shuttle vans to the market from the city's six senior citizen centers. Each group has an hour to shop or to relax, socialize and survey the scene from shaded benches brought to the City Hall lawn by Rec Department workers.

As the shoppers made their way around the circle and stopped now and then to look over his produce, "Red" Berberian watched the scene with a satisfied smile.

"It's gonna be a good year," he said confidently. "This is going to be the best year yet."

'Alderperson' amendment tabled

NEWTON — A proposed amendment before the Legislation and Rules Committee that would substitute the word "alderperson" for alderman in the city charter was tabled until their next meeting.

Alderman Carol J. Robinson, who docketed the proposed ammendment, said, "I think its very, very important and shouldn't be pushed aside. I will take time out to review the legal procedure."

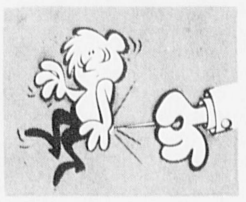

Election Commission Executive Director Alan W. Licarie said several requirements must be fulfilled before the city charter could be amended.

The mayor and aldermen must agree on any amendments, Licarie said, and then a filing date for the amendment has to be set. Once the date is set, a public hearing must be held within a certain time.

Next, the state attorney general has four weeks in which to approve the amendment and forward it back to the municipality. The approved amendment must be in the hands of local officials two months prior to elections, Licarie said.

A bigger splash

Once the least expensive of any life necessities, except the air we breathe, water gets costlier all the time. Smart municipal minds saw user fees as a revenue producer to offset Proposition 2½ losses at the same time the MDC was hiking charges, so the result has been quarterly bill acceleration.

Those sewer use fees aren't trivial, but close to two thirds of the water charge for average householders. They were at 42 cents per cubic feet locally, then quietly pushed to 55 cents in mid-1983 at the same time MDC was boosting its charges. A residential bill in one of the recent quarters could have a $40 water charge and a $28 user fee, for example. Two years earlier, even with a user fee, that same bill in terms of volume carried a $32 charge.

Fees are simply another means of taxation, with no legitimate relationship to the cost of operations. The claim that the added charges were merely being shifted from the propery tax was spurious since Proposition 2½ already was forcing rate restraint.

A close scrutiny of the handling of municipal water charges and disposition of the funds is imperative at this period in advance of the enormous water-sewer lines network in the metropolitan region would be taken from MDC and given the new authority. It is subject to legislative approval.

Nothing pending on Beacon Hill is more important than the major change contemplated in water distribution. As burdensome as water rates are now, they are certain to rise dramatically. It is vital to keep local concerns out front.

All the facts

You ought not to risk betting a nickel, plugged or otherwise, that Rocco J. Antonelli won't be nominated by democrats and elected Middlesex County treasurer in November. His campaign press release said he is running for re-election to fill a vacancy, which is true enough.

He states the vacancy was caused by resignation, also true. Not spelled out is the fact that he resigned as part of a deal to have a criminal conflict of interest charge dropped by the district of attorney. Thus was precluded a second trial after a hung jury closed an initial trial.

So, in September's primary there will be two democrats running for re-election. The other is incumbent treasurer William J. Gustus, named to the post vacated by Antonelli. Gustus faces a formidable task in trying to retain the office.

All kinds of advantages occur for Rocco Antonelli. First, He's from Somerville, A place where they play political hard ball. Voters there aren't likely to consider his problems with the Ethics Commission all that great. He also has a recognizable name, one with ethnic value in the more populous county communities. And, historically, few voters absorb much knowledge about county government and tend to pull the levers automatically.

The Lowell Sun's county bureau chief, William Tuttle, terms the Antonelli campaign press release a masterpiece in hyperbole. Press releases don't win elections, however. If Rocco prevails, as is possible, it will relate to those other factors.

Marking Time

'Stationerygate' probe pushed

By Mark White

Dum - De - Dum - Dum!

Dum - De - Dum - Dum - Dumm! (Dragnet theme)

My name's White and I work the political beat in Newton, Mass. Newton's a nice little community. Good people. Good schools. Good life.

It's a peaceful little community. No serious crime occurs in Newton. That was until July 18, 1984.

I was working on my column and received a call: "White, this is the Chief."

"Yes, Chief."

"A crime may have been committed in Newton."

"Really Chief?"

"Yeah White. a crime of enormous proportion."

"Great Chief. This it the scoop I've been waiting for. How do you know about it?"

"Received a tip, White. Gotta keep your ear to the ground and pick up these things."

"O.K., Chief. Tell me about the crime."

"Don't know much to tell you. Got a phone call that said 'Come to Newton City Hall 8 p.m., on July 18, and you'll hear all about it."

"What is it Chief? A robbery? A murder? Embezzlement? Bribery? Graft? Oh, Boy!"

"The guy said it's bigger than all those, White. We're talking BIG!"

"O.K., Chief. I'll check it out. City Hall on July 18. 10-4! (Got that from reruns of Highway Patrol!)

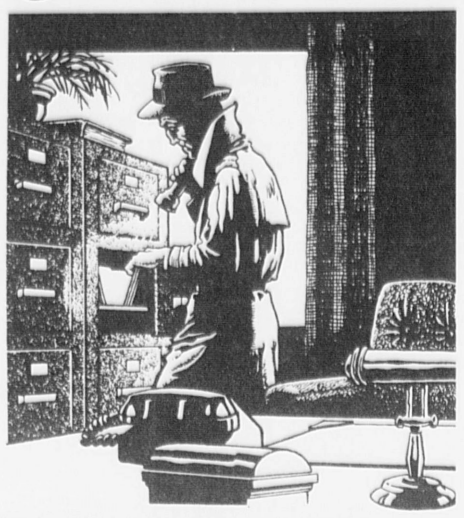

Dum - De - Dum - Dum!

Came the night of July 18, the anticipation mounted.

It was now 7:30 p.m. As I prepared to make my way into City Hall, I broke out in a cold sweat. What did the Chief mean by Big? Who was this tipster? Was it on the level?

Maybe I was being set-up? Maybe it was just a group of neighbors trying to lure me down to City Hall to cover their petition for a stop light.

I used to hang out at City Hall until I decided to leave politics. But this was different! Something big was up.

The mystery behind the unauthorized use of official aldermanic stationery remains unsolved

7:42. I left my home and headed for City Hall.

The streets were silent. Calm before the storm. But I was ready. I had my note book, my trusty Cross pen, and, of course, my honorary police badge - in case things got rough.

I thought about calling a friend, but I decided to go it alone. Who knows what's waiting for me? Too dangerous to ask somebody else.

Dum - De - Dum - Dum!

7:58. All seems quiet at City Hall. a bunch of cars out front, nothing unusual.

And then I hear it...

"Psst."

"Huh?"

"Psst."

"What's the matter, can't you speak English?

"Of course I can, but all tipsters are supposed to hide in bushes and say, 'psst.'"

"O.K. Just the facts, man. Just the facts."

"All I know is that a major crime involving governmental officials was committed in Newton and the intricate sordid details are being revealed tonight."

"Where?"

"Upstairs, at the Legislation and Rules Committee Meeting."

As I headed in the front door, I got an eerie feeling. A major crime in Newton, involving government officials no less. How could this kind of thing happen in Newton.

I heard voices coming from upstairs and slowly and cautiously made my way up the stairs, well aware that suspense and intrigue lurked around the corner.

Seeing some familiar faces, I headed into the meeting to hear the details of this sordid crime that was soiling the reputation of our superb citizenry.

And then the bomb dropped.

Dum - De Dum - Dum!

Alderman James Regan seized the moment to allege a crime has been committed in the Garden City!! My God, the tipster was right!

Regan went on to divulge the details of this dastardly deed.

The Newton Hyde School Group had sent out a letter on the Hyde School referendum signed by Aldermen Sandra Schick and Paul Coletti on ALDERMANIC STATIONERY!!! A gasp went up in the audience and reporters headed for the phones.

Regan, urged by his supporters, went on to demand that the matter be turned over to the District Attorney. What a scandal!

I then interviewed Verne Vance, chairman of the committee, and asked if it was true that he was going to demand a special prosecutor. He denied it but said the FBI has contacted him that afternoon. And I got the scoop.

Returning to my desk, I hammered out the story, proud of the job I had done in exposing the greatest scandal since Watergate.

There are a hundred stories in the Naked City and this is one of them.

So you thing this is a bit of an exaggeration. A little overdone, right? Unfortunately, Ladies and Gentlemen, IT IS THE TRUTH.

(Mark White is a practicing attorney and a former member of the Board of Aldermen.)

Random thoughts on convention

By William A. Rusher

A few final thoughts about the Democratic convention, now that it's over:

We still haven't figured out a sensible way to pick the vice presidential candidate. Originally the Constitution decreed that the vice presidency would go to the presidential candidate who got the second-largest number of electoral votes — a prescription for trouble that was neatly finessed by the 12th Amendment, under which each party's candidates for president and vice president run as a team.

But the result is that, when a party's presidential nomination is hotly contested right down to the wire, the winner's running mate may be chosen simply as a maneuver in the heat of battle or (perhaps worse yet) by the groggy winner and a handful of his exhausted aides in the next morning's cold gray dawn.

Nowadays, thanks to primaries, a candidate will often wrap up the presidential nomination weeks or even months before the convention begins. That at least gives him time to think seriously about the vice presidential spot. But first Carter and now Mondale elected to stage an elaborate public parade of possible nominees — a technique that opens the process to all sorts of potentially unhealthy pressures.

There has got to be a better way.

There has got to be a better way.

THE SPEAKING honors at the convention were divided between the keynoter, New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, and Jesse Jackson. And the word that applied to both their efforts was: "frightening."

Seldom in our national politics has anyone sought to divide America, and set one half of it against the other half, quite so brazenly as Cuomo. Usually politicians prefer to talk about "uniting" the country, "bringing us together," and so on. Not Cuomo: He practices, in its purest and most brutal form, the venomous politics of envy. Rejecting President Reagan's image of America as "a shining city on a hill," Cuomo declared that, on the contrary, "this nation is more 'A Tale of Two Cities'" — one where "tax breaks" are provided for "millionaires," and another where a mother is "denied the help she needed to feed her children." This is strong stuff: the war cry, in fact, of a rooted and vengeful hatred.

But Cuomo's message was cushioned, to some extent, by its lawyerly delivery. Jackson's, on the other hand, was a vintage specimen of black Baptist clerical oratory at its most moving. As he stood there with sweat trickling down his face, loudly summoning the blacks and every other disaffected or disaffectable group in the country to join in one vast coalition of "the damned," the answering roar of the crowd told thoughtful viewers all they needed to know about where this party will head, if only it can.

THIS MAY HAVE been the first convention at which the representatives of the media actually outnumbered the delegates, and the encounters between the two resulted in some memorable scenes. For sheer crust, though, I doubt that any of them equaled the insolent attempt, by Ed Bradley of CBS's "60 Minutes," to make peace, right there on the floor of the convention and in full sight of millions of viewers, between Chicago Mayor Harold Washington and his mortal enemy, City Council Majority Leader Edward Vrdolyak. It would have earned Bradley a Pulitzer, or maybe even the Nobel Peace Prize, if he had been able to pull it off. But Washington, with a dignity I applauded, told Bradley just what he thought of such cheap and gratuitous grandstanding by a television reporter, and turned his back.

These Chicago mayors are tough.

Ruling on fireworks was unjust and intimidating

As I was standing in the Dunkin' Donuts parking lot on Sunday, patiently waiting for the parade to pass by, my mind wondered at the marvel of the community I live in. There is no other community in Newton that is as close as ours, or that sticks together such as ours.

I am not Italian, but on a day like Sunday half of me wishes I were. To see these people believe so much in their faith that they would get all dressed up and march together for five hours in 95-degree heat to carry their statue from their church, up and down all the surroundings of our lake was positively a sight to behold. It doesn't seem fair for us as a community to be singled out by anyone to be scapegoats. We are hard-working people here and we help each other out through anything. We stick together.

To be denied a permit was a slap in the face. It was unfeeling and vindictive as far as I'm concerned. How convenient for the fire chief to be away at this time. We pay our taxes and take care of our property just like any other part of Newton. It's not anyone that suffers more than the people, especially the children.

I love it here and would never think of moving anywhere else. We can walk the streets at night safely, even the senior citizens. Imagine, to be able to do that without fear. Well, we can and we're proud of it!

I've been a citizen here all my life and I like to think a good one. I felt nothing but disgust and felt intimidated by our police force for having to stand on duty, wasting my tax dollars as well as everyone else's, because of a non-signed permit for a seven-minute fireworks display. How pointless. I think it's terrible how we had to be intimidated as townspeople, and myself and children did not attend the festivities bvecause of this. That's sad!

For something like this to be taken away from us so easily is a sin. I think it was a great injustice for anyone to spoil a beautiful annual affair that means so much to us in Nonantum.

Ward 5 GOP's are condemned for 'callous and bigoted' views

It has been a week since I read excerpts of a letter written by John Mathews, chairman of the Newton Ward 5 Republican Committee, and I still find it difficult to express my indignation over such callous and bigoted statements.

Professor Mathews' condemnation of every tenant in Columbia Point is so contrary to what I would expect of a person that instructs and, to some degree, molds the ideals of young men and women, that I am forced to come to the conclusion that his statements were motivated by a prejudice that transcends rational thinking.

By Professor Mathews own admissions, his only contact with Columbia Point comes from newspaper clippings. I would think that someone with Professor Mathews' background would have investigated beyond the press before making such damaging statements. His reluctance to go to the source, so that his accusations could be documented, further my contention that his letter was based on a preconceived bias about the tenants of Columbia Point.

I do not profess to be an expert on Columbia Point or the planned rebuilding, but I have been there on a number of occasions to visit friends who were tenants. Although the project was not physically on a par with Waban, the people I met are people of integrity and character and would be assets to any communtiy. The 15 people of the Ward 5 Republican Committee, along with Prof. Mathews, have demonstrated true destructiveness with their lack of compassion and condemnation of people they have no knowledge of.

In closing, as a life-long resident of Newton, I am happy to know that Professor Mathews and his committee do not represent the majority of the very fine citizens of Newton.

Delegate has 'no complaints' about convention

By Kevin C. Kennedy
News Editor

NEWTON — Lynn Holbein, a delegate to the Democratic Convention in San Francisco and an active member of Newton Action for Nuclear Disarmament, quoted her grandmother when she summed up her reaction to the convention with the words, "No complaints."

Almost speechless from several days of shouting, Holbein explained that she and her fellow freeze advocates "got 90 to 95 percent of what we wanted."

In using a quote from her grandmother, Holbein evoked the image of her family's longstanding commitment to political involvement. Kate Waller Barrett, her grandmother, was the country's first woman delegate to a national convention. In 1924, four years after women won the right to vote, she took part in a marathon nomination process that took two weeks, went through 103 separate ballots and ended up giving the Democratic party's nod to Calvin Coolidge.

Holbein commented that "a lot of Boston people were leaders" at the convention, especially in the push to make a nuclear freeze part of the Democratic platform. She noted, as a sign of success, that virtually every major speaker at the convention felt compelled to address the freeze issue from the podium.

She did complain that the nuclear freeze issue and its general acceptance at the convention, "were overshadowed by other events." California Sen. Alan Cranston spoke eloquently on the issue, but, because of this year's shift to limited, prime-time coverage, his message did not get out.

Holbein went to the convention as a delegate for Sen. Gary Hart, and pushed for him as long as it was remotely feasible. Commenting on her lack of voice, she said the Hart contingent finally fell back on its vocal chords in a last ditch effort to swing the convention over to its cause.

She added that it was the McGovern delegates who really felt the crunch of lobbying from Hart and Mondale supporters. "They were under a lot of pressure," she commented. "They really got uptight by the second or third day," with other delegates constantly leaning on them for their votes. Eventually McGovern made a plea from the podium for his delegates to go over to Mondale.

Hart supporters, she commented, "tended to be more outsiders." They kept pushing for their candidate, but, "by the time Hart's upsurge came along, most of the people had gone over to Mondale."

Commenting on the rhetoric that stole the headlines throughout the convention, Holbein said, "I witnessed an unparalleled series of outstanding speeches." Speaking of the impact of New York Governor Mario Cuomo's keynote speech, she said, "If Hart had pulled 140 votes away from Mondale and we went to a second ballot, Cuomo would have been up there."

She added that, given the intensity of speeches by Cuomo and the Rev. Jesse Jackson, vice-presidential nominee Geraldine Ferraro had "a tough act to follow" by the time it came her turn to speak. "She was better 'live' than on tape ... more relaxed."

President Ronald Reagan provided the impetus for the party's finally unifying behind Mondale, according to the 38-year-old elementary school teacher. "The choice is very clear," she said. "Mondale does not have a tremendous amount of charisma, but he has all the right policies on his side." She added that voters seem, at the moment, to be "overly preoccupied with charisma."

Besides working to make sure Walter Mondale brings some of her nuclear disarmament ideas to the White House, Holbein said she will be working hard until November to see that either Lt. Gov. John Kerry or Sen. James Shannon, who have made their pro-freeze positions clear, takes over the senate seat being vacated by Sen. Paul Tsongas.

Walker switches battlefields

"My greatest failure in education and the greatest failure of educators to this day is that no one has ever rolled up their sleeves and said, 'The number one issue in this country today is lack of concern for children,'" he declared. "We pay it a lot of lip service, but this country really does not care about children."

He tried hard to stress the positive side of his years in the Garden City, but he could not keep from coming back again and again to the frustration of his lost struggles and to what he sees as the negative trends in education.

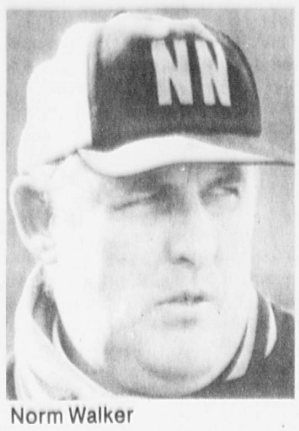

Despite its reputation for quality and its reservoir of stimulating, top-notch teachers, Walker feels that Newton is failing its young.

Some of his biggest battles have revolved around drug and alcohol use, open campus and the unionization of the teaching profession. In "The Gridiron," a quarterly newspaper for state football coaches that Walker started three years ago and still edits, the outspoken educator's articles often reflect on society's ills, its misplaced emphases on profit and its failure to confront its problems.

Denouncing what he called Newton's "patch and fill" approach to alcohol and drug abuse, Walker pointed to several inconsistencies in the system and described the difficulties he has had in trying to make people face the issue.

"There are kids walking all around school wearing those Heineken and Schlitz t-shirts . . . (At Newton North) we sell beer mugs for kids as souvenirs — and somehow we don't see . . . It's a symbol," he declared. "To me, until you've addressed those issues, it's almost impossible to address everything else."

Walker says he "got holy hell" for kicking a student off his team who was sporting a t-shirt with a beer motto on it. He outraged parents several years ago by standing up at an athletic banquet and telling them they had to start trying to fight the widespread drug and alcohol use among team members.

He got them stirred up again this spring by sending letters to his students' homes telling parents he would give a zero to any child participating in "senior skip day" because the kids "load up their trunks with beer, go to the beach for the day and drive around."

Since he has been at North, Walker says, three of his students have died in alcohol-related incidents.

The tough disciplinarian also says he once had his office set fire to several days after he chased down, tackled and turned in some students who brought fire bombs to school.

A graduate of Williams College and the Harvard University School of Education, the coach's solid build and hot-tempered reputation belie the softness underneath.

He writes poetry, which he shares with his friends, family and students. He and a half-dozen other men in North's English Department get together regularly — sometimes for as long as five hours at a time — to read poetry and collect the pieces that will work best with kids. And he describes athletic matches as "an artistic endeavor . . . somewhere between ballet and theatre — good theatre."

A winner of North's Meserve Teacher and Coach of the Year awards, who ran for Congress in 1978 against Fr. Robert Drinan, Walker says the most important aspect of his life in Newton has been the people he has worked with, learned from and become close to — and the freedom that Newton gives to its educators.

"At one point in Newton, just about every, single department head or key person was a leader in the state in that field or in some sense," he said. "If you have talented, bright people, the best thing to do is to let them go, and Newton's been very wise in doing that."

The emphasis in recent years on teachers' unions, which he feels have not focused enough on educational issues, and the aftermath of a much-publicized hazing incident at North this year contributed to Walker's feeling that it was time to move on.

He found the hazing flap particularly frustrating and "ironic," he said, because he took flak for something he had spent years trying to stop. And, as a non-union teacher, he spent a day in the city's small claims court this spring for failing to pay a $245 annual "agency fee" to the union.

But Walker says he also "probably got a lot more out of joining the battle that is Newton than I would have by going and being a big fish in a little pond somewhere, which is more what I was looking for."

As a friend, an educator and a citizen, he would like to be remembered for a lesson he, himself, is still learning — that "as long as you're willing to keep working and fighting hard for what you believe in, that's more important than necessarily winning.

"As long as you keep driving toward some meaningful goal . . . as long as you never cry or complain and keep picking your feet up and going on . . . you can never be a loser."

Regan pushes for probe

ter published by six members of the School Committee which stated a reversal in their decision to close the Hyde would require a $300,000 cut in the school budget.

The one-page letter dated June 15 was intended, Coletti said, only as a source of information for the voters and was not the official position of themselves or the board.

Coletti had said he signed the letter as a favor to Alderman Michael A. Malec who, Coletti said, told him his signature would give the letter more authority.

Coletti agreed providing Alderman Shick also signed it and that it was understood to be a strictly informational letter and not a statement of Coletti's position in the Hyde issue, he said.

The letter he signed, Coletti said, was not on aldermanic stationery nor did it include his title of chairman of the Finance Committee though the letter eventually circulated was printed on the stationery and included his title of chairman.

Though Coletti passionately disclaimed the letter before the Board of Aldermen the night before the election, he voted against forming an investigatory subcommittee.

"When Jim (Regan) came to me and said he wanted to make the proposal I said go ahead but I didn't want to be involved. I chose to let it go. I already had egg on my face," Coletti said adding he felt any further protest would only keep the issue alive and reinforce the letter's misrepresentation.

"If we do get the whole story you'll find a brother or sister alderman was behind it. I hold certain aldermen responsible for this. I asked the alderman who came to me for my signature specifically what the letter would be used for," Coletti said in an apparent reference to Malec though he repeatedly avoided mentioning any names.

"I could have easily been set up. It was planned. I was misled by people who came to me for help. And I'll tell you, I'll never do another favor for an alderman asking for help," Coletti said.

The subcommittee will attempt determining how the aldermanic stationary came into the possession of Ann Rawls, co-president of CVS, who organized the actual distribution, and will investigate the legality of the act.

Malec visited the committee meeting and argued there was no illegality in using the aldermanic stationery and that the letter was unedited, though the title of chairman was included and it appeared on the official stationery.

"There are hundereds, thousands, of people who have received letters on Board of Aldermen stationery. Anybody could do a scissors-and-paste job and then photocopy it," Malec said.

He added, "If anyone sends a message on aldermanic stationery it doesn't necessarily mean the entire board agrees with it."

Regan responded, "The more you talk, the more I feel something's wrong here."

Special summer hours are in effect now through Sept. 9, 1984 at the Newton Free Library.

At the Main Library, 414 Centre St., borrowers may use library resources Monday through Thursday 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Friday 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. During the summer the Main Library and all branches except Newtonville, which is open on Saturdays from 11 a.m.- 4 p.m., are closed Saturdays and Sundays.

The Main Junior Library, 126 Vernon St., (around the corner from the Main Library) is open Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Bielitz and Charles Chisholm, Onessimo's campaign manager, "set me up."

In a one page press release, Larkin blasted Onessimo. "He (Onessimo) happens to have a lot of money," Larkin wrote. Larkin said "his campaign consists of hiring lawyers and private detectives to commit political dirty tricks. In my opinion, those people are exploiting him. As a politician, he's pathetic. He has no volunteers, no political organization in the traditional sense. It will be interesting to look at his receipts and expenditures after the campaign is over."

According to Reilly, the investigation revealed that Larkin had no foreknowledge of the transaction involving Larkin's secretary and Larkin gave the money back to Onessimo's campaign treasurer after he found out.

Despite numerous telephone calls last week, Onessimo could not be reached for comment. He did not return telephone calls or acknowledge messages left on his telephone tape recording device.

Onessimo virtually was an invisible candidate when he unsuccessfully ran against County Commissioner Bill Schmidt, of Newton, in 1982. Onessimo could not be reached for comment during that campaign.

Chisholm, a former Somerville alderman, has handled most of the press questions about Onessimo's campaign this year.

Chisholm, who also blasted Larkin for alleged election law violations, claimed he was "shocked that Mr. Larkin would stoop to name-calling." He said its "indicative of Mr. Larkin's temperament at this time, having been unnerved by his close brush with the law."

Chisholm said Larkin's characterization of Onessimo as a "creep" only "serves to benefit us." He said "Mr. Larkin should send us his press releases and we'll get them published for him." Chisholm denied claims by Larkin that he and Bielitz are exploiting Onessimo. He also said county political observers who have claimed or speculated that Onessimo is "just a puppet" have engaged in "outright fabrication. It shows how little they understand the nature of our organization," Chisholm said.

'West Side Story' is revived

Johnson, who plays A-Rab (a Jet), and classmate Cyndi Freeman (cast as a Shark woman) spent from June until January in a desperate search for funding. They raised $3,000 — enough to convince the Newton Arts Lottery Council that they were serious. The council awarded them another $3,000 — the largest grant ever given to a single group.

Alive with vibrant dance and fight numbers intricately choreographed by Brookline High School graduate James Beaman, the show rockets from romance to saucy, stripper-style numbers to angst and pathos. It follows the story of two star-crossed lovers — one Polish, the other Puerto Rican — caught in the midst of New York City's 1950s gang wars.

The scene is staged against a graffiti-graced brick wall, guarded by a four-foot, chain-link fence. On a recent trip to New York, Chris Fraize, the Newton North High School senior who designed the set, received a private lesson in the subway-style artwork from two local pros.

The cast of 50 consists mainly of high school and college students, ages 15 to 26, from Newton and surrounding communities. Eight local youths were hired as interns in various areas, including directing and technical work.

For some, the show is seen as a stepping stone to careers on the stage. For others, like 1982 South High graduate Robin Silvers, it is simply an expression of a long-time passion.

"It's nice for me because I haven't been in any shows in three years because I had to concentrate on work at school," explained Silver, now a junior at Trinity College in Hartford. The acting is a welcome change from the strict discipline of her engineering major, she said.

Five of the main characters are double-cast, with actors and actresses performing on alternate nights. The pairs attempt to match younger performers with older ones, in a kind of mentor arrangement.

Jyllee Bogart, an '84 graduate of Newton South who will enter the University of California at Los Angeles (UCLA) as an acting major this fall, found the pairing allowed the more experienced actors and actresses to take on leadership roles.

"It gives you a chance to look up to the other person and learn a lot from them," she explained.

Like the combination Newton North and South production of "Romeo and Juliet" this spring, "West Side Story" also allows kids from across the city and the Boston area to come together on a common project. The musical's messages about ignorance and prejudice are not lost on the students, who have probably heard Bernardo's reprimand to Maria of "Couldn't you see he's one of them" and Anita's plea to her sister, "Stick to your own kind" many times in their youth.

"Practically none of us knew each other when we started," commented Johnson. "But we're all going for the same thing. We all want a great show."

Tickets reservations for "West Side Story" can be made by calling 731-1438. For further information on the production, call Arts in the Parks, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at 552-7120.

Service offers seniors work

Jewish Vocational Service, a nonsectarian agency, is interviewing all persons 60 and over who are interested in looking for work, either part-time or full-time, in many different occupations.

Appointments will be held at each local Council on Aging office. Contact the local office to schedule an interview.

"I am pleased to accept this award for the city of Newton and am very proud that we are one of the seven cities from throughout the United States to be so honored. This award recognizes the city's efforts in the area of public safety, but even more, it singles out the time and energy given by volunteers from the community who have helped to make our programs so successful," said Mayor Mann.

"My compliments go to Chief Quinn and to the members of our police department, who provided the leadership in these programs which ultimately led to our award-winning presentation. All the people and organizations who worked so hard to contribute to the success of our public safety programs deserve the gratitude of the entire commmunity," the mayor added.

Joining Newton in the honor were Aurora, Co., Baltimore, Md., Bloomington, Minn., Cheyenne, Wy., Tampa, Fla., and Albuquerque, N.M.,. Six judges, including Dorothy I. Height, the president of the National Council of Negro Women, decided the award winners.

This is the fourth such award given to Mann by his counterparts across the country. Newton was also honored at the first conference of mayors in 1978, as well as the sessions in 1980 and 1981. In 1977, the city was honored as the nation's "All-America" community.

The city's Emergency Medical Services Committee, composed of local businessmen and representatives of religious organizations and schools, also helped secure the award for its efforts toward ensuring prompt medical service to the community.

Finally, the conference pointed to the Police Crime Prevention Van, staffed by member's of the mayor's Crime Commission and auxiliary police, as another facet of the city's partnership with volunteers to bolster public safety and crime awareness. The van travels to many events in the city, allowing residents a glimpse of the latest security devices and hosting the city's Operation Identification and Neighborhood Watch programs.

Thank You -- St. Jude

O Holy St. Jude, Apostle and Martyr, great in virtue and rich in miracles, near kinsmen to Jesus Christ, faithful intercessor of all who invoke your special patronage in time of need, to you I have recourse from the depth of my heart and humbly beg to whom God has given such great power to come to my assistance. Help me in my present and urgent petition. In return I promise to make your name known and cause you to be invoked.

Over 300 businesses offer bargains to Newton elderly

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

After a year-and-a-half of planning and volunteer efforts, the city's approximately 16,000 senior citizens now have the unique opportunity of receiving a wide-range of discounts on items at over 300 Garden City businesses.

Mayor Theodore D. Mann and Human Services Director Howard Lipton have announced the beginning of the most comprehensive senior citizen discount program in the city's history, in the form of the "Council on Aging Savers Handbook," dubbed "CA$H."

"I hope you can derive some benefit from the discount program," the mayor tells resident seniors in the introduction of the discount booklet. "CA$H is a very appropriate name for this booklet. Using CA$H wisely is the equivalent of extra money in your pockets."

The directory, which offers elderly residents bargains that range from a 10-percent discount on air conditioner service to similar discounts on dental work, doughnuts, jewelry and even bodybuilding and weight loss services, represents the third such effort since 1973 by Mann and the city's Council on Aging.

Senior citizens will also find discounts available on legal services, floral arrangements, groceries, hearing aids, pet food, taxi service, television and appliance serrvice, movies and optician services.

In the past 10 years, the number of business participating in the program has tripled from the original 110 sponsers, Mann added.

According to Lipton, soliciting discounts and compiling the booklets, which were mailed to 12,000 households recently, was "a massive undertaking" totally organized by volunteers ranging from the city's Boy Scout troops and the Nonantum Multi-Service Center to the seniors themselves.

"Senior citizen volunteers from the Anna Fleisher Discussion Group of the Retired Senior Volunteer Program deserve a special thank you for all of their hard work in signing up businesses for the program," the mayor said.

Lipton added that, in some cases, seniors could potentially save over $100 a year on necessities like prescription medicine and clothing alone.

In order to qualify for the discount program, senior citizens must reside here; be at least 60 years old; show an MBTA card or driver's license to the sales clerk at the time of the purchase; and observe the specifications as to the days and hours the discounts are offered.

Participating merchants are doing so voluntarily and, therefore, may change their stated discount offer without notice or withdraw from the program at anytime. The benefits listed in the directory also do not include items already on sale.

Businesses sponsoring the program will make their participation known by placing a small red sticker highlighting their involvement in their shop windows.

The Mutual Bank for Savings, Pioneer Financial Bank, Newton South Cooperative Bank, Purity Supreme Supermarkets, the Shawmut Community Bank, BayBank Middlesex, the Newton Jaycess and McDonald's of Newton all gave "generous contributions" to help defray the printing costs of the booklet, Mann said.

A portion of the program's funding also came from the Massachusetts Department of Elder Affairs Council on Aging Formula Grant Program, he added.

Mailing the booklet was accomplished by Continental Cablevision as a community service.

When the big and little problems of your everyday life pile up to the point where you feel like lashing out–stop. Take time out. Don't take it out on your kid. Try any or all of these simple alternatives–whatever works for you.
1. Stop in your tracks. Step back. Sit down.
2. Take five deep breaths. Inhale. Exhale. Slowly, slowly.
3. Count to 10. Better yet, 20. Or say the alphabet out loud.
4. Phone a friend. A relative. Even the weather.
5. Still mad? Punch a pillow. Or munch an apple.
6. Thumb through a magazine, book, newspaper, photo album.
7. Do some sit-ups.
8. Pick up a pencil and write down your thoughts.
9. Take a hot bath. Or a cold shower.
10. Lie down on the floor, or just put your feet up.
11. Put on your favorite record.
12. Water your plants.

Little League tourney

Parkway, Gleeson oust Newton West

NEWTON — Newton West was eliminated from the District 17 Little League Tournament, falling to Parkway Central and fireballer Pat Gleeson, 3-0, Thursday at Praught Field in West Roxbury.

Parkway was routed by unbeaten Norwood National, 15-0, Saturday in the championship final of District 17.

Gleeson one-hit Newton West, allowing only a leadoff single to left fielder Doug Micciantuono, while striking out nine and only walking two batters.

Brian Savage and Gleeson got the winners off to a quick 2-0 lead by capitalizing on some of Newton's mistakes. Savage walked, took second on a balk, and after Gleeson drew a free pass, both moved up a base on a wild pitch.

A subsequent wild delivery allowed both runners to score when the throw to the plate from the backstop went wild.

The winners added another on a single by the pitcher in the fourth. Dan Prior reached on a fielder's choice, Sean Philbrook singled to left, and after Tom MacLaughlin reached on an error at second to load the bases, Gleeson smacked an RBI single.

Series star Rick Sonia came in to get one batter to fly out and the next to strike out to end the rally.

Paul "P.J." Melanson didn't deserve to lose this game, but defensive lapses by Newton, coupled with Gleeson's dominance, spelled the end of the tourney for Fred Dalicandro's squad. Melanson only allowed five hits on the night. The team's workhorse, he led Newton's mound corps with 15 innings pitched, posting a 1-1 record and a respectable 3.18 earned run average.

Defensivly, Sonia turned his third series double play on Thursday, throwing a bouncer back to the box to shortstop Don MacDougall, who relayed to first for the twin killing. He had turned two double plays from his second base position previously.

Sonia was the star of the series for Newton West, racking up a .389 batting average with seven hits in 18 at bats. On the mound, he worked seven innings, earning two wins without allowing an earned run.

The next leading hitter for the losers was Micciantuono. He also provided stellar outfield defense with right fielder Mike Armstrong, who hit .333, and center fielders Melanson and Chris Cuchinatta.

The infield was led by Sonia at second, and his double play partner, MacDougall. The latter displayed a smooth glove to go along with his team-leading five RBIs. Manning the corners were Doug Leone at third, who ended with a .353 average, and first baseman Brandon Hehir, who also took a turn on the mound.

Sharing catching duties were Tim Meleedy and Marty Burke. Bench strength in the form of Nino Tromontozzi, Scott Popsuj, and Vinnie Lipoma was invaluable to Newton.

Overall, head coach Dalicandro and assistants John Carroll and Peter Scaltretto have to be pleased with their team's performance. The Newton West squad went further than any other area team.

The summary:

NEWTON WEST(0)-Micciantuono 3-1; Cuchinatta 3-0; Sonia 2-0; MacDougall 2-0; Armstrong 1-0; Leone 2-0; Melanson 1-0; Hehir 2-0; Tramontozzi 1-0; Burke 1-0; Lipoma 1-0. Tot. 19-1.

PARKWAY CENTRAL(3)-MacLoughlin 3-0; Savage 2-0; Gleeson 1-1; Noski 2-0; Christianson 2-0; Bedrosian 3-0; Dixon 3-3; Pryor 1-0; Arthur 1-1; Philbrook 1-1. Tot. 19-5.

Leone twirls Sports Shop to win

NEWTON — Dino Leone tossed a two-hitter, and his teammates exploded for 11 runs, as Auburndale Sports Shop defeated the Mosca Club, 11-4, Friday in National League action at Lincoln Park. Leone contributed three hits, including a double and a two-run single, to the offense.

The winners took an 8-0 lead in cruising to the victory. Just to play it safe, they answered Mosca's four runs in the sixth with three of their own in the seventh.

A two-run single in the first by Paul Howley, chasing home Tom Dalicandro (single) and Mike Ryan (single) started Auburndale off on the right foot. The winners scored two more in the third before putting it away with a quartet of runs in the fourth.

Leone was the instigator in the inning which gave him the big lead, as he slammed a double to get things going and came home on Tom Albright's single. Back-to-back doubles by Pat Poon and Steve Collella made it 7-0 before Dalicandro finished the scoring in the frame with a single that chased hom Collella.

Both Mosca hits came in the four-run outburst in the sixth inning. Leone dug his own hole with walks to Matt Fletcher, Matt Spengler and Marco Paglia. Pillan Thirumalaisamy, who starred for Newton South this spring, then broke up the no-hitter with a clean single to left which scored Fletcher. Pinch-hitter Adam Rosman made the second hit a big one, as roped a triple to center to clear the bases.

With none out, it looked as though Mosca might get right back into the game. Leone stiffened, however, and retired the next three hitters to strand Rosman at third. He did even better in the seventh, striking out the side to finish with a flourish.

Auburndale, meanwhile, responded with three in the seventh, partially thanks to some wildness on Mosca's part. Two walks around a wild pitch put runners at the corners for Paul Peruzzi, who drilled a single to score Dalicandro. The final two markers of the contest came around on a single by Leone.

Leone, a righthander from Newton North, struck out four and walked five in the contest. Auburndale raised its record to 6-7-1.

Dan Pill did it for Beaver Country Day all spring and he's been doing it for the Mosca Club in the National League this summer. The Auburndale Warriors became Pill's latest victim on Thursday, by virtue of a 13-0 four-hitter at Lincoln Field.

The 18-year-old righty struck out seven and walked five in going the route for Mosca, which upped its record to 14-2 to stay in first place, ahead of St. Bernard's.

Pill had plenty of support, as his teammates handed him an 8-0 lead after two innings. Third baseman Mike Pappas did most of the damage, doubling in three runs in the six-run second. He also doubled in three in the fourth for six RBIs in the night.

After one it was 2-0 as Mosca took the bats out early. After a walk and a fielder's choice, left fielder John Toyias ripped a two-bagger to give Pill the only run he required. First baseman Evan Kushner promptly smacked a triple to drive home Toyias.

Six more in the second, started by Pill, ended the competition for the evening. John Fletcher followed Pill's single with another basehit, and Matt Spengler delivered the first run with yet another hit. After Spengler stole second, Marco Paglia stroked a two-run single.

Two walks loaded the bases for Pappas, and he unloaded them in a hurry with a booming double. Pappas, an ex-Newton South star, plays his ball at the University of Mass.

Bill Casey and Larry Meltzer evenly split the four hits for Auburndale.

At Ferguson Field, the game was even more lopsided as the Boys' Club pounded Auburndale Sports Shop, 22-3. Chris Pachus led the way with three hits, including a two-run homer, as the Boys' Club hammered Auburndale pitching for 15 hits. Winning pitcher contributed a three-run shot.

After taking a 3-0 lead in the second, the Boys' Club put it away with five in the third and 12 in the fourth.

In the third, the winners loaded the bases with two walks around a Mike Walsh single. Three straight walks accounted for runs before Bob Connerney slammed a single to make it 8-1.

In the next inning, the Boys' Club sent 15 men to the plate. Joe King singled home Pachus (double), Tim Greeley and Mike Walsh each hit two-run doubles, and Proia capped the rally with his three-run blast.

Legion Post 440 gains playoffs via 2 victories

NEWTON — Newton Post 440 took a pair of games this weekend, and by virtue of an Embassy Trophy win over Acton on Sunday, they clinch a spot in the Stan Musial League playoffs. On Sunday, Post 440 downed Westborough, 9-2, and Saturday defeated the Worcester Warriors, 11-2.

Now Newton must compete in a four-team, round robin tourney to decide which team will earn a spot in the state playoffs in the league.

Sunday, Post 440 rode the arm of Dave McClelland to victory. The righty notched seven Ks against only one walk, and allowed six hits. John Corsi provided two RBIs, on a single in the first inning and a sacrifice fly in the third.

Single RBIs by Rob Abromson, Raph Berry, and McClelland accounted for most of the winners' runs.

On Saturday, Berry led a 14-hit attack with a double and two singles as Post 440 trounced the Warriors. Berry knocked in four runs on the night.

Rob Abromson went the distance for the winners, allowing only five hits. Every Newton player notched a hit in the contest, and four players had two.

The summary:

NEWTON(9)-Abromson 3-2; Burkett 3-0; Spagnuolo 2-1; Corsi 2-1; Berry 3-1; Morgan 4-1; Kasten 3-0; McClelland 3-0; Gallagher 3-2. Tot. 26-8.

Bachner leads Abruzzi in International

NEWTON — The Abruzzi Club built a 9-0 lead after three innings and then fended off an American Lettering rally to take a 9-7 decision in an International League game at Albemarle Field on Friday night. Abruzzi tallied four times in the first inning and five more in the third before seeing American Lettering battle back with three in the bottom of the third and four in the fifth.

Winning pitcher Dave Strasberger helped key the opening-inning explosion with a run-scoring single. The biggest blow was a three-bagger by catcher Willie Bachner that drove in a pair.

Abruzzi didn't waste any time in going on offense, as Adam Rosenberg led off the game with a single. A walk to Adam Gabriel pushed Rosenberg into scoring position for Ben Burlingame, who slapped a single to drive in the run.

Bachner came next and he smashed a triple which cleared the bases. Bachner strolled home when Strasberger dumped a basehit just inside the third-base line.

Abruzzi wasn't satisfied with that, coming back for more in the third. The markers came one at a time until Gabriel capped the rally with a two-run single.

The winners loaded the bases through little fault of their own on a pair of walks sandwiched around an error. Craig Jones bounced a single up the middle to deliver Burlingame for run number one. Another error on Rosenberg's ball made it 6-0. Peter Groussis walked to force in still another tally, leaving the sacks filled for Gabriel, who rescued two with his safety.

For the 13-year-old Strasberger, it was his third win of the season against two losses. The righthander boasts an earned run average of 2.12.

The win pushed Abruzzi into third place with a 7-10-1 record, just ahead of the Tigers, who are 6-9-1, but have two games in hand.

Post 440 had a successful weekend with three wins in three tries. The club swept a pair from the Elks Saturday at Cabot Park, 20-1 and 5-4, and followed with a 13-8 decision over the Tigers Sunday at Ferguson Field.

The action gave Post 440 an 11-7 record and a good chance at a playoff spot with three games left on the schedule.

The winners got a big boost from catcher Mark DeStefano in the three games. Filling in for Steve Butzel, who broke two fingers in the All-Star game last week, DeStefano went 10-for-13 with nine RBIs in the three games.

DeStefano, a 14-year-old who will be a freshman at Newton North in the fall, had played third and the outfield previously.

Sunday's game was deadlocked at six going into the fourth. Chris Rutan tripled off the fence in center field and came home on a single by DeStefano. A double steal worked by DeStefano and Mike Daoust wound up accounting for two more runs.

Post 440 went on to score four more times while winning pitcher Peter Hinteregger, 13, blanked the losers the rest of the way.

In the opener on Saturday, Rutan and Steve Bliss each included a homer among their four hits. Righthander Steve Leonard tossed a seven-hitter, striking out seven without walking a man.

In the nightcap, a much closer, 5-4 win, Daoust's two-run single in the third was the big blow. That gave Post 440 a 4-2 lead.

Winning pitcher Bliss yielded five hits, fanned 12 and allowed five walks. He also chipped in a homer in his own behalf.

St. Bernard's moved up to .500 by dropping first place On The Road, 7-6 in the bottom of the seventh at Cabot Park.

Going into the last frame, the game was all tied at six. Nick Mariano doubled to centerfield, and with one out, winning pitcher Paul Kearney banged a two-bagger to score the winner. Kearney went the route on the mound.

The winners got off on the right foot in the first inning when Dave St. Germain walloped a tremendous three-run roundtripper to left which landed on the roof of the factory.

Mike Skoler raced home on an error on a double steal attempt in the sixth inning to give the Oak Hill Cubs a 9-9 tie with Oakley Spa on Friday night at Newton South.

Skoler started the final rally with an infield hit. He stole second and third as Dan Freeman walked to put runners at the corners. Freeman promptley took off on the delayed double steal, but the catcher overthrew the shortstop, who was coming in to cut off the throw, and Skoler scooted home.

Oakley went ahead in the top of the seventh, but the game was called due to darkness and it remained a tie. Ironically, Oakley had led, 5-0, earlier in the week, when the game was called because of rain. Friday's game was a makeup of that contest.

Oakley took an 8-7 lead in the fourth with seven runs on two hits, thanks to six walks, three errors and a wild pitch. Larry Leacy and Anthony Filipone had the hits, which each drove in a run.

Conversely, Oak Hill had a five-run inning (the second), but needed six hits. Rich Freeman doubled to start it, and scored on Steve Silk's single. Silk was picked off first, but the Cubs kept things alive with a walk and two singles, setting the stage for Skoler's two-run two-bagger to left. Dan Monbouquette then singled for another pair.

Monbouquette finished with three RBIs on the night. For Oakley, Mark Flynn led the way with two hits and two runs batted in.

Oak Hill is now 12-4-2, with the two ties coming in the last two games.

King powers Post 440

NEWTON — Timely stickwork by shortstop Joe King, who drove in four runs on a single and triple, enabled Newton Legion Post 440 to overtake Malden, 8-4, Sunday afternoon at Lincoln Park in an American Legion Zone 5 game.

The Newton Legion nine was snapping a two-game losing streak and climbed back to .500 rating with a 12-12 record.

Post 440 was on the short end of 3-0 score coming to bat in the bottom of the third inning and forged into the lead briefly with a four-run outburst. After Bill Martin reached on an error and Matt Noone walked, King laced a single to left field to rescue a pair of runs. He advanced on a passed ball and scored a one-baser by Jeff Sherman. Successive singles by Alex DeNucci and Dave Boule accounted for the other marker.

Malden knotted the score at 4-4 in the top of the fourth, and Newton bounced right back with a pair of runs in the same inning to clinch the verdict.

The Noone brothers, Matt and Joe, drew bases on balls and King followed with his clutch three-bagger, a long drive down the left field line. The home team finished off the scoring with a brace of runs in the fifth as Bob Connerney singled, Boule doubled and Martin drove in both runs on a single to left.

Boule was the winning pitcher, working the first three innings, and allowing three runs and three hits. Connerney and King also toiled on the mound.

The summary:

NEWTON POST 440(8)-Martin 3-1; M. Noone 2-0; J. Noone 3-0; King 3-2; Sherman 4-1; Connerney 2-1; DeNucci 3-1; Faggas 1-0; Bercury 2-0; Boule 3-2. Tot. 26-8.

Newton South depending upon veteran nucleus

By Hank Hryniewicz
Sports Correspondent

NEWTON — For the first time in five years, Newton South High's baseball team was unable to qualify for the Eastern Mass. tourney, but with a team as young as the one on the field for Coach Neil McPhee this spring, the writing was on the wall.

Next year, however, McPhee and his Lions will try to use the experience gained during their 6-12 campaign to rewrite the script and include themselves in the post season festivities.

"No team wants to be the one to break a string of tournament appearances," McPhee said, referring to this year's Lions squad. "They want to prove that they have the ability that Newton South teams have had in past years."

The Newton South coach admitted that the outlook for this year's team was hazy at best. "I was aware that we were going to be a young team and that we would experience the growing pains of any young team. Our record certainly indicates that we had a few of those pains."

But McPhee indicated that there were positive points to this year's season. "When I look back at the scorebook I can say that we weren't quite as bad as our record indicates. We were in most of our games, we just weren't experienced enough to hold onto leads. We didn't have enough experience in some of our key positions."

One of those key positions was behind the plate. As a junior, Tom Rogers was a first-year backstopper who experienced some difficulties adjusting to throwing from a crouch. "He's a fine receiver, but his problem is in the throwing area," McPhee said of the 6-3, 195-pound catcher. "I expect Tom to come back next year...he's got the size and all the strength. He has all the tools, it's just a matter of putting it all together. We'll be looking forward to him coming back next year."

The one senior starter who will be departing from McPhee's lineup is first baseman Glen Rosengard. This year's Norm McConnell Award winner "had a heck of a year," according to the coach. The .292-hitter helped play the role of leader for the team on and off the field. "He really filled in beautifully and we will miss him," McPhee said.

The biggest surprise of the season was the play of second baseman Mark Maiocca. McPhee had nothing but encouraging things to say about the first freshman ever to start for a Newton South varsity baseball team.

"He's a real strong all-around athlete," according to McPhee, who has been at the helm at Newton South for 15 seasons. "He's got very good hands and a good, accurate, strong arm, but his real strength lies in his hitting. He's as natural a hitter as I've ever seen at South since I've been here."

McPhee did suggest that Maiocca's debut season in a varsity uniform might have held him back in some ways. "He might have been just a bit young to step in and play varsity baseball and do the job the way (a seasoned player could), but we couldn't keep him out of the lineup...the experience will be invaluable to him in the next three years. He's going to be one of the best players in the league."

Another underclassman who played well this season and who will be an important cog in next season's Newton South team is Matt Spengler. As a junior this spring he hit .317, but the key word McPhee uses to describe him is "consistent. He's a steady, reliable infielder and a line drive hitter plus he's a smart baseball player. Matt is one of those players you want up at the plate or who you want the ball hit to in an important situation."

This year's team batting leader was junior Steve Altman. The shortstop/third baseman is a good clutch hitter with excellent speed who tore up the league by batting a whopping .438. The team will be looking for a repeat of Altman's batsmanship next season when they strive for one of the top spots in the Dual County League standings.

Next year's pitching situation should be boosted by the appearance of righthander Jon Glick. As a junior this year he won four games at the junior varsity level before being called upon by McPhee to close out the Lions' season against Wayland. The pitcher responded with a shutout victory, which saw him throw strikes consistently, and that's something that raised the coach's eyebrows.

"From a coaching standpoint we should have made the decision earlier to bring him up, but he did an outstanding job in the game he did pitch," McPhee explained. Glick is an overhand fastball pitcher "with a pretty good curve, and he exhibited outstanding control."

Kevin Houlihan will also be member of the starting rotation. Heading into his senior year, the righty "has excellent size and great ability" in his coach's eyes. "He's got about every physical tool a pitcher would need. He has the talent to go someplace," McPhee said of Houlihan. "Everytime Kevin takes the mound he has the talent to shut out any team. He can be an unbeatable pitcher if he gains the type of confidence we are looking for."

The outfield will be manned by returning varsity players Steve Stoller, Darvell Huffman and Pillan Thirumalaisamy. Stoller, a league all-star, is best known for his defensive skills, while McPhee is looking to Huffman to gain better control of his emotions and use them in a positive way to better his play. Thirumalaisamy will return as a junior with his strong offensive game and consistency.

Rec swimmers post 3 more victories

NEWTON — The Newton Recreation swim team took a trio of meets recently, trimumphing over Natick, Westwood and Tri-Valley to pick up its second, third and fourth wins in a row.

The Newton swimmers crushed Natick, 224-145, at Doug Pond in Natick, behind Miriam Kornitzer's three victories. She took top honors in the butterfly, the freestyle, and led the 100-yard freestyle relay team to victory.

Newton also defeated Westwood soundly, 221-165, at Goth Pool for the third win of the season.

Finally, Newton romped over Tri-Valley of Milford, 213-138, on July 12.

Lee, Lockwood escort North

DEDHAM — In Tuesday night's Dedham Recreation High School basketball action, Newton North, led by Greg Lee (15) and Andy Lockwood (16) came from behind to overtake Dedham. Dedham was led by Rick Colleran's aggressive performance with 22 points and 10 rebounds.

Newton North crushed Foxboro on Monday, 66-45.

After leading by three at halftime Newton North shifted their play in high gear to put it out of reach. Lee led North with 28 points followed by a super performance by Lockwood with 20 points and 20 rebounds. Tim O'Leary led Foxboro with 14 points.

Berman golf victor

NEWTON — Thelma Berman took top honors at Ponkapoag Golf Club's 9-hole tournament on Thursday.

The event was a "three blind holes" match.

Lillian Bogie took second, while Sally Barr and Marion Dale tied for third place.

Hilda Appel, Renee Bogie, and Laura Lynch shared fourth place in the tourney.

Wessel earns Bentley letter

WALTHAM — West Newton's Paul Wessel this spring earned a varsity letter in track for Bentley College.

Wessel, a freshman, was a sprinter for the Falcons, competing in events between 100 and 400 meters. His top times this spring were 11.9 seconds in the 100, 24.4 in the 200, and 54.1 in the 400.

The 1983 graduate of Newton North High School is also a member of the football team at Bentley, which has won the national championship of club football the last two years.

A accounting major, Wessell is the son of Roger and Maureen Wessel of West Newton.

4 Newton girls lead SE to Bronze Medal

NEWTON — Four Newton girls helped the Southeast Volleyball squad to a Bronze medal at the Bay State Games tournament held at MIT recently.

The Gold medal was taken by Northeast, the Silver by Metro, and Coastal took fourth-place honors.

It was an impressive show that the Newton natives put on, helping take their team up a notch in the final round. The quartet included Laura Slamin, Christine Sullivan, Nancy Sullivan and Joey Rodgers.

Slamin, a middle-hitter, will be heading to Newton North High School in the fall. Christine Sullivan was particularly impressive, as the 12-year-old center played well against girls who were most often juniors and seniors in high school.

Nancy Sullivan plays outside and Rodgers is a setter.

BE PART OF OUR CONTINUING GROWTH

HELIX TECHNOLOGY CORPORATION'S CTI- CRYOGENICS operation is the leading supplier worldwide of innovative cryogenic equipment for the industrial semiconductor equipment and military electro-optics markets. If you want to work in an environment where your capability and competence are your keys to success, take a look at our current opportunities.

Engineering Technicians

As an Engineering Technician at CTI-CRYOGENICS your responsibilities will include fabricating assemblies and sub-assemblies using experience in vacuum systems, electrical circuitry, electronic instrumentation, and assembly techniques. You will also conduct engineering tests on Electro/Mechanical Devices and collect and present test results. A minimum of 3 years of experience in precision mechanical assembly and a good background in system test and basic testing apparatus is a must.

Test Operators

Several positions are available for Test Operators with 1 year of test experience. You will set up and operate cryogenic systems and subsystems to conduct required tests, fill out and maintain required test data sheets and logs, and assist in visual quality inspections. You should have good reading comprehension and manual dexterity, and be skilled in basic mathematics, the use of hand tools and the use of measuring devices. Knowledge of gas pressurization and vacuum equipment would be helpful.

Mechanical Assemblers

Several opportunities exist for Mechanical Assemblers to assemble our own compressors and refrigeration equipment. Possession of basic soldering skills, ability to work from assembly blueprints and familiarity with assembly measuring devices is preferred, but not required.

Production Brazer/Assembler

We are looking for an experienced Brazer to build components for our compressors. This involves helium tight torch brazing operations on brass, copper, and stainless steel using silver brazing and phos-copper alloys.

CTI-CRYOGENICS is very conveniently located right off Route 128 at Exit 48 (Winter St.) in Waltham. We offer a full range of fully-paid fringe benefits, including 2 weeks' vacation, tuition reimbursement, retirement plan, employee savings plan, life insurance and Blue Cross/Blue Shield or HCHP.

If the possibilities of joining a vibrant, expanding organization excite you, please call Personnel at (617) 890-9400, or forward your resume including salary requirements to CTI-CRYOGENICS, 266 Second Avenue, Kelvin Park, Waltham, MA 02254. An equal opportunity employer.

YOUR OFFICIAL MASS. INSPECTION MAINTENANCE STATIONS
Now that your car is inspected just once a year, the last number on your plate determines when.
If your plate ends in 7, get inspected in July.
Zeros come in October, though, and plates with all letters in November.
We'll do the traditional safety checks as well as the new computerized tailpipe emissions test. Quickly and efficiently.

STURBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — A Whig Ladies Picnic featuring election songs popular in 1840 and speeches favoring the candidacy of William Henry Harrison will be held at Old Sturbridge Village Aug. 4.

The event is part of the summer callendar at the historic village, which recreates daily life in New England during the early 1800s. The 200-acre village includes some 40 houses of that period plus craft shops, churches and other historical buidlings. It is located 55 miles west of Boston and 40 miles northeast of Hartford, Conn.

Harrison won the 1840 election but in 1841 became the first U.S. president to die in office.

CHICAGO (UPI) — United Airlines is experimenting with computer games for passengers and has rigged one of its DC-8 jets with electronic entertainment.

Keith Wodarski of United's marketing department said the games, free to passengers in both economy and first class, include electronic soccer, blackjack, poker, checkers, backgammon, hangman, and a calculator.

"So far the overwhelming majority of passengers surveyed really like it," Wodarski said. "Unlike games in a video arcade, these make no noise. They're self-contained units that have been built into the folding dinner trays in front of each seat. Overall we've had a very positive response."

The computer game plane is on a route that takes it all over the country so the company can get a varied sampling of reaction.

"We're polling passengers to find out what features they would like and then we'll assess the data to see where to go from here," Wodarski said. He said the airline would evaluate reaction to the game later this summer and decide whether to cancel it or expand it.

NEW YORK (UPI) — For California wine connoisseurs there is a new guide for touring the great vineyards.

The Wine Spectator Wine Maps, published by M. Shanken Communications Inc., provide information on wineries, restaurants and lodgings in California's wine growing regions. The maps cover Napa, Sonoma, Lake and Mendocino counties, the San Francisco Bay area, the central coast and valley, and the Sierra foothills.

The maps list more than 500 wineries, and include a brief history, production data and directions to each.

The book of maps costs $2 plus $1 for postage and handling and can be ordered from The Wine Spectator, 400 E. 51st St., New York, N.Y. 10022.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Parents traveling with children, especially on long car journeys, can prevent crabby stomachs caused by strange water by starting children on bottled water at home and continuing with the same brand throughout the trip, a bottled water company says.

The Mountain Valley Water Company recommends that parents use bottled water for drinking and for mixing with formulas and concentrated juices to guarantee uniformity of taste and protect against changes in chlorine content.

VIENNA, Austria (UPI) — Austria offers the opportunity to see the countryside from bottom to top, in the harness of a hangglider, glider plane or safe inside the catered cabin of an Austrian Airlines jet.

Over a dozen hanglider schools offer beginners a choice of landscape and courses for every level of ability. One such course offers a week of lessons plus completion certificate, equipment, bed and breakfast for about 4,000 Austrian shillings ($210).

For those who prefer sitting to hanging, some 200 clubs and 50 airfields offer countless options for glider flying. For the non-pilot, Austrian Airlines has an airborne afternoon tour of Austria the first Saturday of every month beginning and ending in Vienna.

NEW YORK (UPI) — A package of nine days and eight nights in Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires for under $1,000 will be offered by Varig Brazilian Airlines starting Aug 16.

Prices, including airfare, hotel accommodations, breakfasts, sightseeing, transfers and hotel taxes, will start at $887 from Maimi and $999 from New York. They will be in effect through Dec. 10.

Israeli teenagers start 5-state tour

By Gladys Damon
Correspondent

NEWTON — A group of 19 Israeli teenagers performing original folkdances, choreographed by their group leader, guitarist-composer Avi Chen, danced their way into the hearts and affections of approximately 300 admirers last Friday night at Temple Beth Avodah.

The teenagers, all 16 years of age, performed at the Oneg Shabbat following the evening service. Members of "Noar Lenoar," the Israeli branch of B'Nai B'Rith Youth Organization, they are here on a five-state tour of the East Coast. Boston was their first stop. Their itinerary includes Connecticut, Philadelphia, Washington, D.C., New York and a three-week stay at the International Leadership Training Conference in the Catskills.

For most of the youngsters, it is their first visit to this country and their first trip outside Israel.

Their dance presentation capped two full days of sightseeing, shopping, beach and pool parties, getting acquainted with their new host "families" and visiting the local historical sights.

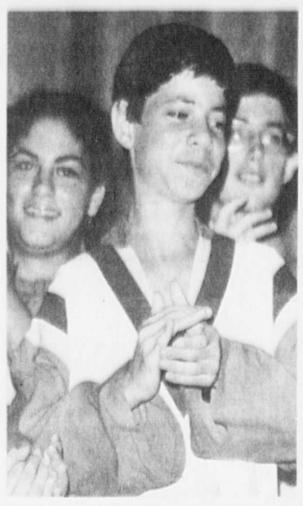

Their first day was devoted to sightseeing in Newport, R.I., where they visited the Touro Synagogue, the Breakers Mansion and attended a beach party at the home of Mitch Mallett. Friday, they visited Boston's Museum of Science, noshed at Quincy Market and sailed on a cruise of Boston Harbor. Saturday included a ride on the famed Swan Boats and shopping downtown.

Some first impressions, during an interview with the youngsters, brought forth the following comments: "Our host families made us feel at home ... Excellent hospitality ... Americans seem to eat a lot of fast foods ... The ocean here is not like the Mediterranean ... It's freezing, too cold to swim!" Boston's tall buildings impressed them the most, according to Anita Wassersug, one of the coordinators of the Boston visit.

"They are very well behaved," said Wassersug. "They are constantly singing, very exuberant and in high spirits, despite their constant activities and long, 14-hour trip from Israel. Although they come from diverse backgrounds, they are fitting in beautifully."

The parents of Dorit Herbst of Tel Aviv, emigrated to Israel from South Africa, while Vered Medina of Kirvat Shmona has a Turkish father and a Moroccan mother. The teenagers did not know each other before they met in May to prepare and rehearse for their trip, says Avi Chen, 31, himself a native of Agadir, Morocco, who prepared the songs, dances and costumes for the American performances.

The group was selected for the American tour from approximately 200 applicants who belong to the 35 chapters of Noar Lenoar. There are about 3,000 members in the principal regions of the north (Haifa, Sfad and Carmel), the south (The Negev, Eilat, Yavneh, Ashdod, Beersheba and Jerusalem) and the central area (Tel Aviv and Petah-Tikvah). Criteria for judging the finalists were based on their leadership potential, fluency in the English language, volunteering and involvement in community activities, community service, personality and a serious commitment to assuming a leadership role upon their return to Israel in September.

Oren Shenker of Ramat Hasharon, Israel joins in the celebration.

In Israel, Noar Lenoar's community activities include visiting senior citizens who live alone, helping them with their household cleaning chores before Pesach, "adopting" a family of new immigrants ("olim chadashim") to help them adjust to their new life in Israel, aiding geographically-isolated settlements in the north which had been the targets of terrorist attacks, assisting in the Israel Association of the War against Cancer, and doing volunteer work with the retarded, handicapped, aged and needy citizens.

One of the principal objectives of the second annual visit, according to Enid Gilbert, regional director of the New England BBYO, is to "provide contact with American youth, to experience the different ways of observing the Jewish religion by visiting Conservative and Reform congregations, to become familiar with the problems of assimilation and to learn more about American culture."

Isaac Cohen of Kiryat Ono, who has relatives in Boston, commented, "I never knew the Jewish community in the United States was so well-organized and cooperative!" Asked why he was surprised to learn about this, he explained, "You never read about this in the Israeli press. They never mention it!"

A proclamation declaring July 13 as "Noar Lenoar" Day in Newton was read by Temple Beth Avodah member Cynthia Creem, Alderman of Newton's Ward 8, on behalf of Mayor Theodore Mann, following the religious service.
